"My brother got his face burned with gun-powder, and he used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The people all thought he would have scars, but you can't see that he ever had his face burned. It was simply awful to look at before the Cuticura Remedies (Soap and Ointment) cured it." (Signed) Miss Elizabeth Gehrki, Forrest City, Ark., Oct. 16, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 17 L, Boston.

When we look back now upon some of the things we used to worry about, we wonder what the lunacy commissions were doing all that time!

The fact that beauty is only skin deep shouldn't influence a woman to be shallow.

Railway Brings More The Creditors Expected

NUMBER OF BIDDERS

Purchaser States That Road Will Be Extended Through Atlantic and Guthrie Center to State Capital.

Atlantic.—Col. George Adams of Council Bluffs, president of the Omaha & Iowa railroad, extending from Council Bluffs to Treynor, was the successful bidder on the Atlantic North-western Southern road at the receiver's sale here. His bid was $402,050, $2,000 higher than anyone expected. The sale was attended by about 1,000 farmers and business men. The bid, if paid into the court, will satisfy all of the lien holders against the road and some of the judgment creditors. Colonel Adams says he intends to extend the road at once from Treynor to Atlantic and thence through Guthrie Center to Des Moines. It is reported that during the afternoon he received two telegrams from Leslie M. Shaw, advising him what limit he might go in bidding. The bids will be reported to the district court and the money is ordered to the court in ten days, if the court accepts the bid.

Said to Have Stolen Silk.

Cedar Rapids.—J. F. Lehman, alias Cohen and Harry Borsky, alias Polsky, were arrested at Lincoln, Neb., on a charge of stealing silk valued at $700 from the Welch Cook company here. They also are said to have stolen 270 pairs of gloves from a Boston store in Davenport.

Workman Killed On Dam.

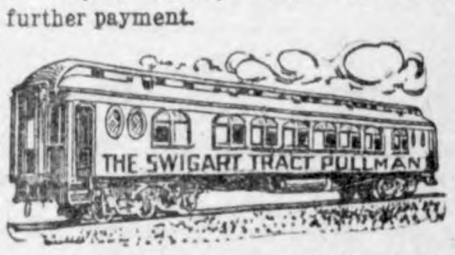
MICHIGAN WANTS FARMERS

A GOOD PLACE TO LOCATE

Many farmers from the North and Central States are going to Michigan's most progressive district where new towns are rapidly growing up and a thriving community is being established. This district is in Mason, Manistee and Lake counties, in a large tract of land most fortunately located for commercial and agricultural purposes. It is known as the Swigart Tract and men who are familiar with conditions in Michigan recognize that it has entered an era of development such as has never been seen before in the State.

Some special advantages that are drawing to the Swigart Tract more settlers than to any other part of the Wolverine State are as follows: It lies in the center of Michigan's Famous Fruit Belt, and is especially adapted for fruit growing, the lands being just near enough to derive the greatest benefit from Lake Michigan's influence; mild, even climate; a combination of the elements insuring successful crops; local markets, including Ludington and Manistee with over 30,000 combined population, on the edge of the tract; surrounded by a well settled country; four lines of railroads; products delivered by lake steamers to Chicago and Milwaukee over night; schools and churches throughout the tract; home conditions ideal; many thousands of acres to select from; the place for the renter to come who is tired of farming where farm lands are owned by the wealthy alone; the place for the man to come who is tired of working for some one else. Nowhere can one find lands for sale at $10 to $35 per acre that can be made to so quickly produce a living.

Do you want a productive piece of farm land that will support you in plenty while you build it up into a property becoming constantly more valuable? Then buy in the Swigart Tract. There's where your money will go the farthest. For $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 per month you can buy 40 acres. While you are buying the farm, if you should die, it will be deeded to your family free from any further payment.



That hundreds and hundreds of people are becoming aware of the fact that probably never again will such good lands be offered at such low prices and on such low terms is evident because the large numbers going to the Swigart Tract make it necessary to run SPECIAL PULLMAN CARS to take care of them—always one car and often two cars, twice each month. The people have learned that conditions in this tract are right. The lands are tried and proven.

The same opportunities over again that our grandfathers had are here, but without their hardships of pioneering.

Get the literature published on the subject and a large map. They are free and will be mailed to you, if you drop a card for them. Every statement you will then be able to verify when you make the short trip to see the tract.

You will find investments of much promise by investigating the 5 and 10 acre tracts near towns, just right for fruit, truck and poultry raising; summer resort lots on beautiful Crystal lake; residence and business lots in two new towns that are building up on the main line of the P. M. railroad.

The next two Special Pullman Car Excursions leave the Swigart Chicago offices Tuesdays at 11:30 a. m., October 17 and November 7. You are back in Chicago 7 a. m. on Thursday or Friday, thus giving you one or two full days to inspect the lands, as you prefer. Stay longer if you wish. Low rates to Wellston, the Michigan headquarters. From Chicago, round trip fare is $6. Teams free to inspect the lands. Further information cheerfully given. Fares rebated on purchases. CHANGING THE SUM

"Then I am to understand that you are unwilling to give your consent to my marriage to Rose?" demanded Archer as he rose.

"I have told you that I am determined that my daughter shall marry one who is able to support her in the style to which she is accustomed. You have told me that you have an income slightly less than my daughter's dress allowance. I presume you are capable of making the simple arithmetical computation that two and two make four."

"I suppose I could," assented Archer. "The trouble is that there is another example on my mental slate. That is that one taken from one leaves nothing."

"I fail to see the application," was the cold response.

"It's this way," explained Archer, taking his seat again. "If you take Rose from me you leave me nothing to hope for. Now do you get the idea?"

"Mere romantic nonsense," was the impatient reply. "You will soon find some young woman in your own station of life who will occupy your thoughts to the exclusion of my daughter."

"Station in life," echoed Archer with a laugh. "It seems to me that your father and my grandfather were in the same station of life. You happened to make money and my father didn't. That's all. Rose is willing to get along on what I earn. We are not asking you to support us. Her happiness should mean something to you."

"It does," agreed Sidney Wright. "It is for that reason that I insist that she shall not have to go through the inferno of economy that was necessary to my own younger days."

"I think that she'd rather have me than a red automobile and Paris frocks," said Archer, rising again. "Just think over that example, Mr. Wright. One minus one equals naught. You can't forget it."

Archer slipped out of the office and Wright turned once more to his desk. He was doing what was best for his daughter. Rose would thank him some day, when she knew life better.

He picked up a paper but he could not concentrate his attention upon it because that absurd example kept ringing through his brain. It was later than usual when he left the office, because the jingle would cling to his memory and keep him back in his work. He thought the ride home in the open air would drive it from his brain, but the horses seemed to tread out the sum with their hoof beats on the macadam. It was like the old "Punch, brothers, punch with care," that he recalled back in the '70s.

Rose's red eyes told that she had seen or heard from Archer, but she said nothing and Wright did not open the subject. More than ever the girl reminded him of her mother and he remembered how happy they had been in those early days before the sudden growth of the city had taken within its limits the Wright farm and rendered building lots as valuable as acres had been before. They had been happy enough with each other but the times were changing. Money was necessary to comfort and he would see that Rose married some one who could support her in the style to which she was accustomed. A four room flat was the best Archer could offer.

Still the example kept flashing through his mind. "One minus one equals naught." It danced before his eyes as he read the evening paper and the more he tried to put the memory away the more insistent it became. It was the last thing in his thoughts that night and the first thing he recalled the next morning. In his sleep he had dreamed of gigantic figures huge ones and monster ciphers.

He took a trolley to the office but the flatted wheels ground out the same monotonous refrain and when he went to lunch he called first upon his physician.

"Just a little tired feeling," explained the doctor when the trouble was explained with no reference to the origin of the sum. "If I were you I'd run out of town for a few days and forget business worries for a while."

He pocketed the fee and escorted Wright to the door, watching him go down the street with a heavy tread that was very unlike Sidney Wright.

"Some business worry," he said to himself as he turned back to his own neglected lunch. "Wright needs to be careful or he will have a breakdown."

Wright hailed the idea of a trip with pleasure. It would take him out of sight of Rose's reproachful eyes, but that night in the sleeper the grinding of the wheels beat time to the incessant repetition of the one minus one nor was it any better next day at the winter resort.

Wright was thoroughly scared. Change of scene brought him no relief and rest was out of the question. For two days he grew worse and worse and at last his tired nerves broke under the strain. For months his worry over certain pending deals had weakened his nervous system. This was the last straw. As a last resort he went over to the telegraph office in the lobby of the hotel and filled out a form. The clerk looked puzzled as he read the message for it ran:

"Change your infernal formula to read one plus one makes one. You have my consent."

Then Sidney Wright went upstairs to get the first night's rest he had enjoyed since Archer had left his office

"Every man can find work if he uses his brains," said Andrew Carnegie, in an after-dinner address in New York. "If there are no more openings in oil and sugar, rubber should be turned to, and if the automobile trade grows crowded, then there will probably be openings in the aeroplane line.

"We should all be like the piano tuner I once met out west.

"'Why,' I said to him—for we were in a wild, unsettled country—'surely piano tuning can't be very lucrative here. I shouldn't imagine that pianos were very plentiful in this region.'

"'No, sir, they're not,' said the piano tuner, 'but I make a pretty fair income by tightening up barbed wire fences.'"

Too Unpleasant.

Dr. William J. Gies of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, was discussing at a dinner in New York, his recent dictum that cannibalism is the ideal diet, for the reason that the best food is the one which most nearly approaches the bodily composition of the eater.

"Cannibalism is the ideal regimen," said Dr. Gies, smiling, "and the books of Stanley, Jameson, Barttelot and other explorers will bear me out. The cannibals of the Congo are wonderfully fine fellows physically.

"But cannibalism is, of course, as unpleasant and as impossible as the economy suggested by the southern housewife.

"'Here,' said her husband to her, 'if you're going in to the village, buy me 5 cents' worth of snuff.'

"But the woman shook her head.

"'No,' she said, 'times are too hard for snuff-taking. In future, John, you must just tickle your nose with a straw.'"

A number of our people took in the fair at Forest City last week. The largest bunch went up on Thursday and they were badly disappointed as it rained hard in the afternoon, so the races all had to be called off. On Friday the weather was fine, but again on Saturday it rained most of the day.

Ole Furriseth, a well known farmer living 1½ miles south of St. Olaf church in Wright county, fell from a windmill Tuesday morning and was killed. He had been plowing, coming to the house for a lunch, and before returning to the field went on top of the windmill, presumably to oil it. Only his wife was at the house and no one saw him fall. She saw the team alone in the field and upon starting out to find him soon discovered his lifeless body near the windmill. Both shoulders were broken and he was otherwise crushed. An inquest was held. resulting in bringing forth the facts above.—Kanawha Record.

COUNTY TEACHERS MEETING OCTOBER 7, 1911

A county teachers' meeting for all Hancock County teachers will be held at Garner, October 7th, 1911. A most helpful program is being prepared. There will be discussions of practical subjects for rural, grade and high school teachers.

Supplies for the year and premiums awarded for school work at the Britt Fair will be distributed. We shall be glad to see every teacher present. All friends of education are cordially invited to attend.

We notice Klemme teachers are well represented on the program. Miss Emilie Lenz will handle the subject "Social Relations Between Home Life and School Life." Supt. Joseph Holaday has the subject "The Moral Element in School Life."

Fake Magazine Agents Are Swindling Public

Remedy Lies in Placing Orders With Newsdealers

The attention of the public is again called to the numerous agents working throughout California and the Pacific Coast, soliciting orders for magazines and collecting money in advance. A bulletin of discharged or criminal agents, published by the Periodical Publishers' Association of America, contains a list of about 500 names of persons who have been operating in various states, and a reward of $25 each is offered for their arrest and conviction. A number of local people have been victimized, and the remedy lies wholly in the hands of the public by placing their orders with their nearest newsdealer, who will make delivery to the home or office on the date the magazines are published, or will take their subscriptions for any magazine desired, so that it is not necessary to patronize strangers who are usually frauds.

One of the advantages in ordering through a newsdealer is that instead of a subscriber paying for a year in advance to strangers, he can pay his newsdealer weekly or monthly, as the magazine is delivered and the order may be changed with the newsdealer as often as desired, whereas if supplied by subscription the same publication must come for the entire year. —San Francisco Chronicle.

Remember you can order what you want in Magazines, etc. at Ell's Cafe.

D. D. Ross of Garner is busy these days hauling tile onto his farm occupied by Henry Ihde.

John Bock has recently sold his two farms. The quarter section he sold to Fred Albers and the 120-acres to his nephew, John Bock.

It would be a mighty good scheme if the town would drag the new hill road just west on main street every day until it dries up. It is a hard road to travel in its present condition.

Monday was moving day. Tim Waddingham moved into the rooms over F. Gruetzmacher's store: Charley Lenz moved into the Lembgen residence he recently purchased; and Wallace Pavey moved into the house vacated by Mr. Lenz.

AUSTIN HORROR

Many Lives Are Lost When The Bayless Dam Bursts at Austin, Pa.

PROPERTY LOSS $6,000,000

Wall Of Water Rushes Half Mile Without Warning, Completely Destroying Town, And Lives Are Snuffed Out.

Dam of the Bayless Pulp and Paper company burned, one mile and a half north of Austin, Pa.

Four hundred million five hundred thousand gallons of water rushed down upon the town.

Between 200 and 300 persons were drowned, crushed or burned to death.

Many of the others believed to have been swept away by the great torrent.

Fire follows bursting of natural gas mains.

Scores of persons caught beneath debris and slowly cremated.

More than 1,000 buildings wrecked.

Heavy rains of past two weeks caused reservoir to fill for first time since erected two years ago.

Food supply has been swept away.

Physicians, nurses and supplies being rushed from surrounding towns over the mountains to Austin.

National Red Cross society will aid in relief work.

Governor Tener has ordered state health and charity officials to the scene, together with Adjutant General Stewart and a large force of state police.

Austin has a population of 3,200.

Costello, town of 450 population, below Austin, also swept away.

Practically every building destroyed by water and fire burning at several points.

Austin, Pa., Oct. 2.—Several hundred were drowned and untold numbers were maimed here when the great dam of the Bayless Pulp and Paper company, holding back more than 500,000,000 gallons of water, went out Saturday. Many bodies have been recovered, many of them so maimed that recognition is impossible. The survivors are in a frenzy. There is no organization, the town being dazed by the force of the calamity which came without a moment's warning. Hundreds of men, women and children are searching through the ruins of the village for their families and friends. The only light is the glare of hundreds of houses which caught fire from broken gas pipes almost before the flood had passed. Chaos reigned from the moment the mighty wall of water tore through the town and there will be no relief until help comes from the surrounding towns. Meantime many bodies lie in the wake of the flood.

Dam of Improved Construction.

The dam was built two years ago. It was 530 feet long, spanning the little valley formed by Freeman run, and rising to the height of 49 feet. It was of concrete, 32 feet wide at the base, and said to be constructed after the most approved plans of modern engineering.

The basin behind it had never been filled with water until this week and Saturday it was noticed that water was running over the top of the structure. Many persons went out of town a mile and a half away to see the unusual sight, and it was while they were watching the overflowing water that the break occurred.

The course of the flood was through the business center of the little village. Many of the buildings were of wood, and those which were not immediately wrecked by the torrent were soon in flames.

So sudden was the onslaught of water that many persons had no time to flee to the hills, but others received the warning and believing it was fire, hastened to the center of the town, only to be caught in the flood and swept away.

The flood passed quickly, leaving desolation in its wake. Houses had been crushed down and tossed about like toys, while hundreds of bodies had been carried down on the crest of the surging torrent.

With the passing of the water, those who had fled to the hills hastened to return to their ruined homes in search of relatives and friends. Here and there bodies had been cast up along the path of the torrent, and about forty bodies were recovered in a short time. Some of them had been battered so badly by the tossing that they were beyond recognition, while others had been carried along with no apparent injury. Many were caught in the burning buildings, and it will be days before the real extent of the calamity will be known.

WEAK, ILL AND MISERABLE.

How many people suffer from backache, headaches and dizziness without realizing the cause? These symptoms of kidney trouble are too serious to neglect.

Mrs. Charles Mann, Osakis, Minn., says: "From a large, healthy woman, I ran down until I was a mere shadow. I could not walk across the room without falling into a chair, utterly exhausted. I spent hundreds of dollars on doctors without relief. Since taking Doan's Kidney Pills, I have regained my lost weight and do not have a moment's uneasiness or pain. They actually saved my life."

Degenerated.

Kid McCoy, the hero of 125 battles, is to open a sanitarium at Stamford. He said the other day to a New York reporter:

"I hope in my sanitarium to restore lots of grumpy middle-aged people to perfect health, and if I give them back perfect health I'll give them back youth and gayety and romance. If middle age is stupid, if middle age is prosaic, it is only because the health of middle age is poor.

"The woman," he continued, "who sends her grumpy mate to my establishment will no longer have to make the bitter complaint of Mrs. Blank.

"'My husband, 15 years ago,' said Mrs. Blank, 'used to kiss me every time we passed through a tunnel. But now—'

"She gave a bitter laugh.

"'Now,' she said, 'he takes a long pull at his traveling flask.'"

Lawn Economics.

"I note," says the sage, "that you allow a sprinkler to spray water upon your lawn almost continuously."

"Yes," said the native. "We do that to make the grass grow."

"But the other day I saw a man pushing a clicker contrivance over the lawn and—"

"Oh, yes; that was a lawn mover."

"And what is its purpose?"

"Why, it cuts the grass."

"Then why do you put water on it to make it grow if you simply cut it down as fast as it comes up?"—Judge.

Not a Bit.

"In getting married Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe showed very little consideration for the public."

"Why so?"

"There's no fun in watching a man and his wife play 'Romeo and Juliet.'"

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY

The Courtship of Miles Standish

With Illustrations by Howard Chandler Christy

John Alden

the open air John Alden, pered and bewildered, like a man insane, and waned alone by the sea-side;
up and down the sands, and ed his head to the east wind, his heated brow, and the fire fever within him.
as out of the heavens, with calyptical splendors, the City of God, in the vision
John the Apostle,
h its cloudy walls of chrysolite,
per, and sapphire,
the broad red sun, and over its rets uplifted red the golden reed of the el who measured the city.

come, O wind of the East!" he laimed in his wild exultation, me, O wind of the East, from ed the Belt 'Round His Waist.

the caves of the misty Atlantic!
ing o'er fields of dulse, and measureless meadows of sea-grass, ring o'er rocky wastes, and the grottos and gardens of ocean!
thy cold, moist hand on my burning forehead, and wrap me in thy garments of mist, to allay the fever within me!"

ke an awakened conscience, the ea was moaning and tossing, ing remorseful and loud the mutable sands of the sea-shore.
re in his soul was the struggle and tumult of passions contending;
e triumphant and crowned, and friendship wounded and bleeding, ionate cries of desire, and im-portunate pleadings of duty!
it my fault," he said, "that the maiden has chosen between us?
my fault that he failed,—my fault that I am the victor?"
within him there thundered a voice, like the voice of the prophet:
hath displeased the Lord!"—and he thought of David's transgression, Bathsheba's beautiful face, and his friend in the front of the battle!
me and confusion of guilt, and abasement and self-condemnation, erwhelmed him at once; and he cried in the deepest contrition:
hath displeased the Lord! It is the temptation of Satan!"

Then uplifting his head, he looked at the sea, and beheld there ly the shadowy form of the Mayflower riding at anchor, cked on the rising tide, and ready to sail on the morrow;
ard the voices of men through the mist, the rattle of cordage own on the deck, the shouts of the mate, and the sailors' "Aye, aye, sir!"
r and distinct, but not loud, in the dripping air of the twilight.
for a moment he stood, and listened, and stared at the vessel, n went hurriedly on, as one who,
seeing a phantom,
s, then quickens his pace, and follows the beckoning shadow.
. It is plain to me now," he murmured; "the hand of the Lord is ding me out of the land of darkness, the bondage of error, ough the sea, that shall lift the walls of its waters around me, Hiding me, cutting me off, from the cruel thoughts that pursue me.
Back will I go o'er the ocean, this dreary land will abandon,
Her whom I may not love, and him whom my heart has offended.
Better to be in my grave in the green old churchyard in England, Close by my mother's side, and among the dust of my kindred;
Better be dead and forgotten, than living in shame and dishonor!
Sacred and safe and unseen, in the dark of the narrow chamber With me my secret shall die, like a buried jewel that glimmers Bright on the hand that is dust, in the chambers of silence and darkness,— Yes, as the marriage ring of the great espousal hereafter!"

Thus as he spake, he turned, in the strength of his strong resolution, Leaving behind him the shore, and hurried along in the twilight, Through the congenial gloom of the forest silent and somber,
Till he beheld the lights in the seven houses of Plymouth, Shining like seven stars in the dusk and mist of the evening.
Soon he entered his door, and found the redoubtable Captain Sitting alone, and absorbed in the martial pages of Caesar,
Fighting some great campaign in Hainaut or Brabant or Flanders.
"Long have you been on your errand,"
he said with a cheery demeanor,
Even as one who is waiting an answer, and fears not the issue.
"Not far off is the house, although the woods are between us;
But you have lingered so long, that while you were going and coming
I have fought ten battles and sacked and demolished a city.
Come, sit down, and in order relate to me all that has happened."

Then John Alden spake, and related the wondrous adventure,
From beginning to end, minutely, just as it happened;
How he had seen Priscilla, and how he had sped in his courtship,
Only smoothing a little, and softening down her refusal.
But when he came at length to the words Priscilla had spoken, Words so tender and cruel: "Why don't you speak for yourself,
John?"
Up leaped the Captain of Plymouth, and stamped on the floor, till his armor Clanged on the wall, where it hung, with a sound of sinister omen.
All his pent-up wrath burst forth in a sudden explosion,
Even as a hand-grenade, that scatters destruction around it.
Wildly he shouted, and loud: "John
Alden! you have betrayed me!
Me, Miles Standish, your friend! have supplanted, defrauded, betrayed me!
One of my ancestors ran his sword through the heart of Wat Tyler;
Who shall prevent me from running

Through the congenial gloom of the forest.

my own through the heart of a traitor?
Yours is the greater treason, for yours is a treason to friendship!
You, who lived under my roof, whom I cherished and loved as a brother;
You, who have fed at my board, and drunk at my cup, to whose keeping
I have intrusted my honor, my thoughts the most sacred and secret,—
You, too, Brutus! ah, woe to the name of friendship hereafter!
Brutus was Caesar's friend, and you were mine, but henceforward Let there be nothing between us save war, and implacable hatred!"

So spake the Captain of Plymouth, as he strode about in the chamber,
Chafing and choking with rage; like cords were the veins on his temples.
But in the midst of his anger a man appeared at the doorway, Bringing in uttermost haste a message of urgent importance,
Rumors of danger and war and hostile incursions of Indians!
Straightway the Captain paused, and, without further question or parley,
Took from the nail on the wall his sword with its scabbard of iron, Buckled the belt round his waist, and, frowning fiercely, departed.
Alden was left alone. He heard the Winding His Sinuous Way.

clank of the scabbard Growing fainter and fainter, and dying away in the distance.
Then he arose from his seat, and looked forth into the darkness,
Felt the cool air blow on his cheek,
that was hot with the insult,
Lifted his eyes to the heavens, and,
folding his hands as in childhood, Prayed in the silence of night to the Father who seeth in secret.

Meanwhile the choleric Captain strode wrathful away to the council,
Found it already assembled, impatiently waiting his coming;
Men in the middle of life, austere and grave in deportment,
Only one of them old, the hill that was nearest to heaven,
Covered with snow, but erect, the excellent Elder of Plymouth.
God had sifted three kingdoms to find the wheat for this planting, Then had sifted the wheat, as the living seed of a nation;
So say the chronicles old, and such is the faith of the people!
Near them was standing an Indian, in attitude stern and defiant, Naked down to the waist, and grim and ferocious in aspect;
While on the table before them was lying unopened a Bible, Ponderous, bound in leather, brass-studied, printed in Holland,
And beside it outstretched the skin of a rattlesnake glittered, Filled, like a quiver, with arrows; a signal and challenge of warfare, Brought by the Indian, and speaking with arrowy tongues of defiance.
This Miles Standish beheld, as he entered, and heard them debating What were an answer befitting the hostile message and menace,
Talking of this and of that, contriving,
suggesting, objecting;
One voice only for peace, and that the voice of the Elder, Judging it wise and well that some at least were converted,
Rather than any were slain, for this was but Christian behavior!
Then outspoke Miles Standish, the stalwart Captain of Plymouth, Muttering deep in his throat, for his voice was husky with anger:
"What! do you mean to make war with milk and the water of roses?
Is it to shoot red squirrels you have your howitzer planted
There on the roof of the church, or is it to shoot red devils?
Truly the only tongue that is understood by a savage
Must be the tongue of fire that speaks from the mouth of the cannon!"
Thereupon answered and said the excellent Elder of Plymouth,
Somewhat amazed and alarmed at this irreverent language:
"Not so thought Saint Paul, nor yet
the other Apostles;
Not from the cannon's mouth were the tongues of fire they spake with!"
But unheeded fell this mild rebuke
on the Captain,
Who had advanced to the table, and thus continued discoursing:
"Leave this matter to me, for to me by right it pertaineth.
War is a terrible trade; but in the cause that is righteous,
Sweet is the smell of powder; and thus I answer the challenge!"

Then from the rattlesnake's skin with a sudden, contemptuous ges ture,
Jerking the Indian arrows, he filled it with powder and bullets Full to the very jaws, and handed it back to the savage, Saying, in thundering tones: "Here, take it! this is your answer!"
Silently out of the room then glided
the glistening savage, Bearing the serpent's skin, and seeming himself like a serpent, Winding his sinuous way in the dark to the depths of the forest.

Too Much Ceremony.

A Cincinnati drummer happened to be put at a table at Columbus with a number of legislators, and the courtly way in which they addressed each other greatly bored the commercial traveler. It was: "Will the gentleman from Hardin do this?" and "the gentleman from Franklin do that?" They invariably spoke to each other as the gentleman from whatever county they happened to hail from.

For 10 or 15 minutes the drummer bore it in silence.

Then he suddenly crushed the statesmen by singing out in stentorian tones to the waiter: "Will the gentleman from Ethiopia please pass the butter!"

That ended the "gentleman from" business.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Thoughtful Child.

A little boy whose grandmother had just died wrote the following letter, which he duly posted: "Dear Angels—We have sent you grandma. Please give her a harp to play, as she is short-winded and cannot blow a trumpet."—Vanity Fair.

SOUND SLEEP
Can Easily Be Secured.

"Up to 2 years ago," a woman writes, "I was in the habit of using both tea and coffee regularly.

"I found that my health was beginning to fail, strange nervous attacks would come suddenly upon me, making me tremble so excessively that I could not do my work while they lasted; my sleep left me and I passed long nights in restless discomfort. I was filled with a nervous dread as to the future.

"A friend suggested that possibly tea and coffee were to blame, and I decided to give them up, and in casting about for a hot table beverage, which I felt was an absolute necessity, I was led by good fortune to try Postum.

"For more than a year I have used it three times a day and expect, so much good has it done me, to continue its use during the rest of my life.

"Soon after beginning the use of Postum, I found, to my surprise, that, instead of tossing on a sleepless bed through the long, dreary night, I dropped into a sound, dreamless sleep the moment my head touched the pillow.

"Then I suddenly realized that all my nervousness had left me, and my appetite, which had fallen off before, had all at once been restored so that I ate my food with a keen relish.

"All the nervous dread has gone. I walk a mile and a half each way to my work every day and enjoy it. I find an interest in everything that goes on about me that makes life a pleasure. All this I owe to leaving off tea and coffee and the use of Postum, for I have taken no medicine." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

A DOG STORY

The other day a man entered a farmer's yard and approaching the house was met by a couple of contemptible little yellow curs, one of which succeeded in tearing a hole in the visitor's trousers and lacerating the skin of one of his legs. The pair of "pets" were followed closely by a bigger canine specimen that some people might perhaps dignify by terming him a dog and a worse mishap to the man was averted by the timely opening of the door and a command to the mongrel to cease hostilities. Now it wasn't a tramp nor criminal but a respectable appearing individual who had legitimate business there and who was indirectly mistreated by the occupants of that home, for they certainly knew the natures of the pestiferous creatures they allowed to run at large. A decent dog is possibly a farm necessity but it is difficult to explain why intelligent people will permit the existence at their homes of the worse than useless curs that are allowed the opportunity to endanger the health of whoever chances to incur their senseless wrath.—C. E. Wilson in Marshalltown Times-Republican.

SPLENDID CANADIAN CROPS

Wheat, Oats and Barley Universally Good Throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The reports that come to hand from the wheat fields of the western Canadian provinces show remarkably good yields in all parts. Yields are recorded of wheat going 35 and 40 bushels in many places, and oats from 60 to 100 bushels per acre. Barley and flax are splendid. The thousands of Americans throughout the United States who have friends in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta will be pleased to learn of the great success that has followed their efforts. Many of these have not confined themselves to the growing of grain, but have also gone into the cattle industry. On the luxurious grasses that are so abundant there, in almost all districts, make this industry safe and profitable. The land sales reported by the railway companies and by the different land companies show the great increase that will likely take place during the next year in farming operations. What has been said time and time again may now be well repeated, that there is no place on the American continent where the same opportunities are afforded the man looking for a home, for the young man starting out in life, the man with a growing up family, who desires wider scope for his ambition. The Canadian government agents located at different points in the states will be glad to advise the reader of the conditions, and relate to him instances of the great success that has followed farming in Western Canada.

RASH ALL OVER BABY'S BODY

Itched So He Could Not Sleep

"On July 27, 1909, we left Boston for a trip to England and Ireland, taking baby with us. After being in Ireland a few days a nasty rash came out all over his body. We took him to a doctor who gave us medicine for him. The trouble started in the form of a rash and was all over baby's body, head and face, at different times. It irritated, and he would scratch it with all his might. The consequence was it developed into sores, and we were afraid it would leave nasty scars on his face.

"When we reached England we took baby to another doctor, who said his condition was due to change of food and climate, and gave more medicine. The rash got no better, and it used to itch and burn at night so bad that the child could not sleep. He was completely covered with it at different times. It was at this time that my mother advised us to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for about nine months the places disappeared. There are not any scars, or other kind of disfigurement, and baby is completely cured by the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. We have no further trouble with baby's skin. Nothing stopped the itching, and allowed baby to sleep but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Mrs. Margaret Gunn, 29 Burrell St., Roxbury, Mass., March 12, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to Cuticura," Dept. 14 K, Boston.

HERE IS SIMPLE LUNCH

DAINTY AND AMPLY SUFFICIENT FOR THE PURPOSE.

Also Has the Valuable Qualification of Being Easy to Serve When Chance Visitors Arrive at a Busy Time.

Although this lunch is dainty enough to tempt the most capricious appetite, yet it is sufficiently satisfying to serve as the only meal between breakfast and dinner. Hard boil as many eggs as are necessary, allowing two eggs for each plate required. When cool enough to handle remove the shells and carefully cut each egg in half lengthwise. Crumble all the yolks in a bowl, add salt, pepper, paprika, mustard to taste, and finely chopped cold ham or veal in the proportion of about a teaspoonful for each egg. Mix well. Then moisten with lemon juice and olive oil in proportion to suit the taste, adding enough liquid to make a very soft, smooth paste. Replace this mixture in the empty whites and arrange four halves around a lettuce leaf on a plate. In the center place a generous tablespoonful of cut up radishes and celery, being careful in cutting these that each piece of raddish shows some of the bright red outside. Around the outside of plate, between the halves of egg, put more radishes, cut in larger pieces than those used in the center. Then put the plates in the ice box until the sandwiches are prepared. Make these of thinly sliced white bread spread with butter and cheese. While any kind of cheese will make tasty sandwiches, if American cheese is used it is better to grate it and then sprinkle it over the buttered bread than merely to slice it. When the sandwiches are ready to serve remove the plates of salad from the ice box and over the center of each pour some mayonnaise dressing. Coffee or a light beer, depending upon one's preferences and convictions, is the drink to be served. And the salad is so satisfying that few will feel the need of a sweeter course to follow.

If one has the mayonnaise dressing ready, this lunch can be prepared very quickly by systematizing the work to be done. If one has no mayonnaise the salad will be just as delicious if the celery and radishes are marinated in French dressing while the eggs and sandwiches are being prepared. The French dressing then should be passed around at the table.

Veal Steak.

Select a good, meaty piece of veal from the leg in one piece, about two inches thick. Fry about eight or ten slices of bacon in a deep steel or iron frying pan; do not fry too crisp, and when done remove them and pour off the fat, leaving just enough on pan to fry the veal. Brown the veal well, on both sides. When well browned lay on top the bacon slices and pour on enough boiling water to barely cover all; salt to taste and add to water sliced three medium sized onions. Cover tightly (use a cover with an iron on top) and let simmer slowly for about two hours, according to thickness of meat. About ten minutes before it is done rub to a smooth paste in water a heaping tablespoonful of flour to thicken gravy. A little left over meat gravy or soup stock adds richness to gravy.

To Keep Watermelon Fresh.

"It will be flat and stale by tomorrow," they said of the perfectly good half watermelon that was left. But it wasn't, for I melted a little paraffin in a jelly cake pan, dipped the cut end into it and put the melon into the cellar. Two days later when the watermelon was cut it was as fresh and had as good flavor as if it had been kept it in its own green shell.—Good Housekeeping.

Preserving Time.

Plums preserved not too richly make a tart and excellent winter fruit.

Before grapes get too ripe is the best time to make jelly.

Peaches which are too green make a very poor canned product.

Yellow tomatoes, with lemon stewed down rich and thick, are liked in many families.

The queen of fruits for some purposes, the quince, will soon be in market.

Pickled Lambs' Tongues.

Wash well and trim neatly twelve lambs' tongues. Boil in salt water until tender. Skin and pack in glass jars while tongues are hot. Put in a very few whole allspice and cloves, cover with hot vinegar and seal at once.

Home Fried Potatoes.

Cut raw potatoes in medium thick slices. Put a tablespoonful of lard into a frying pan, and when hot turn in the potatoes, season to taste, cover and fry brown.

Sailing of the Mayflower

In the gray of the dawn, as the guests uprose from the meadows,
There was a stir and a sound in the slumbering village of Plymouth;
Trampling and clicking of arms, and the order imperative, "Forward!"
Given in tone suppressed, a tramp of feet, and then silence.
Then, ten, in the mist, marched slowly out of the village.
Each the stalwart it was, with eight of his valorous army,
Led by their Indian guide, by Hobomok, friend of the white men,
Onward marching to quell the sudden revolt of the savage.
Dim they seemed in the mist, or the mighty men of King David;
Each in heart they were, who believed in God and the Bible,—
Who believed in the smiting of Midianites and Philistines.
Before them gleamed far off the crimson banners of morning;
Behind them loud on the sands, the hurried billows, advancing,
Fell along the line and in regular order retreated.

Many a mile had they marched, when at length the village of Plymouth
Rose from its sleep, and arose, intent on its manifold labors.
Fair was the air and soft; and slowly the smoke from the chimneys
Hung over roofs of thatch, and pointed steadily eastward;
Some came forth from the doors, and paused and talked of the weather,
Saying that the wind had changed, and was blowing fair for the Mayflower;
Full of their Captain's departure, and all the dangers that menaced,
Long gone, the town, and what should be done in his absence.
Busily sang the birds, and the tender voices of women
Penetrated with hymns the common tasks of the household.
When the sea rose the sun, and the billows rejoiced at his coming;
Beautiful were his feet on the purple tops of the mountains;
Golden on the sails of the Mayflower riding at anchor,
Stained and blackened and worn by all the storms of the winter.
Safely against her masts was hanging and flapping her canvas,
Tried by so many gales, and patched by the hands of the sailors.
Silently from her side, as the sun rose over the ocean,
Sped a puff of smoke, and floated outward; anon rang
Over field and forest the cannon's roar, and the echoes

His Musket, and So Stride Out.

Heard and repeated the sound, the signal gun of departure!
Answered with louder echoes replied the hearts of the people!
Forth, in voices subdued, the chapter was read from the Bible,
Then the prayer was begun, but ended in fervent entreaty!
Anon from their houses in haste came forth the Pilgrims of Plymouth,
Men and women and children, all hurrying down to the sea shore,
Gazing with tearful eyes, to say farewell to the Mayflower,
Homeward bound o'er the sea and leaving them here in the desert.

Foremost among them was Alden. All night he had lain without slumber, Turning and tossing about in the heat and unrest of his fever.
He had beheld Miles Standish, who came back late from the council,
Stalking into the room, and heard him mutter and murmur,
Sometimes it seemed a prayer, and sometimes it sounded like swearing.

Standing Dejected, Unconscious of All.

Once he had come to the bed, and stood there a moment in silence;
Then he had turned away, and said: "I will not wake him;
Let him sleep on, it is best; for what is the use of more talking!"
Then he extinguished the light, and threw himself down on his pallet,
Dressed as he was, and ready to start at the break of the morning,— Covered himself with the cloak he had worn in his campaigns in Flanders,— Slept as a soldier sleeps in his bivouac, ready for action.
But with the dawn he arose; in the twilight Alden beheld him
Put on his corselet of steel, and all the rest of his armor, Buckle about his waist his trusty blade of Damascus,
Take from the corner his musket, and so stride out of the chamber.
Often the heart of the youth had burned and yearned to embrace him,
Often his lips had essayed to speak, imploring for pardon;
All the old friendship came back, with its tender and grateful emotions;
But his pride overmastered the nobler nature within him,—
Pride, and the sense of his wrong, and the burning fire of the insult.
So he beheld his friend departing in anger, but spake not,
Saw him go forth to danger, perhaps to death, and he spake not!
Then he arose from his bed, and heard what the people were saying,
Joined in the talk at the door, with Stephen and Richard and Gilbert, Joined in the morning prayer, and in the reading of Scripture,
And, with the others, in haste went hurrying down to the sea shore,
Down to the Plymouth Rock, that had been to their feet as a doorstep
Into a world unknown,—the cornerstone of a nation!

There with his boat was the Master, already a little impatient
Lest he should lose the tide, or the wind might shift to the eastward,
Square-built, hearty, and strong, with an odor of ocean about him,
Speaking with this one and that, and cramming letters and parcels
Into his pockets capacious, and messages mingled together
Into his narrow brain, till at last he was wholly bewildered.

Nearer the boat stood Alden, with one foot placed on the gunwale,
One still firm on the rock, and talking at times with the sailors,
Seated erect on the thwarts, all ready and eager for starting.
He, too, was eager to go, and thus put an end to his anguish,
Thinking to fly from despair, that swifter than keel is or canvas,
Thinking to drown in the sea the ghost that would rise and pursue him.
But as he gazed on the crowd, he beheld the form of Priscilla
Standing dejected among them, unconscious of all that was passing.
Fixed were her eyes upon his, as if she divined his intention,
Fixed with a look so sad, so reproachful, imploring and patient,
That with a sudden revulsion his heart recoiled from its purpose,
As from the verge of a crag, where one step more is destruction.
Strange is the heart of man, with its quick, mysterious instincts!
Strange is the life of man, and fatal or fated are moments,
Whereupon turn, as on hinges, the gates of the wall adamantine!
"Here I remain!" he exclaimed, as he looked at the heavens above him, Thanking the Lord whose breath had scattered the mist and the madness, Wherein, blind and lost, to death he was staggering headlong.
"Yonder snow-white cloud, that floats in the ether above me,
Seems like a hand that is pointing and beckoning over the ocean.
There is another hand, that is not so spectral and ghost-like,
Holding me, drawing me back, and clasping mine for protection.
Float, O hand of cloud, and vanish away in the ether!
Roll thyself up like a fist, to threaten and daunt me; I heed not Either your warning or menace, or any omen of evil!
There is no land so sacred, no air so pure and so wholesome,
As is the air she breathes, and the soil that is pressed by her footsteps.
Here for her sake will I stay, and like an invisible presence
Hover around her for ever, protecting, supporting her weakness;
Yes! as my foot was the first that stepped on this rock at the landing,
So, with the blessing of God, shall it be the last at the leaving!"

Meanwhile the Master alert, but with dignified air and important,
Scanning with watchful eye the tide and the wind and the weather,
Walked about on the sands; and the people crowded around him Saying a few last words, and enforcing his careful remembrance.
Then, taking each by the hand, as if he were grasping a tiller,
Into the boat he sprang, and in haste shoved off to his vessel,
Glad in his heart to get rid of all this worry and flurry,
Glad to be gone from a land of sand and sickness and sorrow,
Short allowance of victuals and plenty of nothing but Gospel!
Lost in the sound of the oars was the last farewell of the Pilgrims.

The Common Cares of the Household.

O strong hearts and true! not one went back in the Mayflower!
No, not one looked back, who had set his hand to this plowing!

Soon were heard on board the shouts and songs of the sailors Heaving the windlass round, and hoisting the ponderous anchor.
Then the yards were braced, and all sails set to the west wind,
Blowing steady and strong; and the Mayflower sailed from the harbor,
Rounded the point of the Gurnet, and leaving far to the southward Island and cape of sand, and the Field of the First Encounter,
Took the wind on her quarter, and stood for the open Atlantic,
Borne on the send of the sea, and the swelling hearts of the Pilgrims.

Long in silence they watched the receding sail of the vessel,
Much endeared to them all, as something living and human;
Then, as if filled with the spirit, and rapt in a vision prophetic,
Baring his hoary head, the excellent Elder of Plymouth
Said, "Let us pray!" and they prayed and thanked the Lord and took courage.
Mournfully sobbed the waves at the base of the rock, and above them Bowed and whispered the wheat on the hill of death, and their kindred Seemed to awake in their graves, and to join in the prayer that they uttered.
Sun-illumed and white, on the eastern verge of the ocean
Gleamed the departing sail, like a marble slab in a graveyard;
Buried beneath it lay for ever all hope of escaping.

How Good You Have Been to Me.

Lo! as they turned to depart, they saw the form of an Indian,
Watching them from the hill; but while they spake with each other,
Pointing with outstretched hands, and saying, "Look!" he had vanished.
So they returned to their homes; but Alden lingered a little,
Musing alone on the shore, and watching the wash of the billows
Round the base of the rock, and the sparkle and flash of the sunshine,
Like the spirit of God, moving visibly over the waters.

The Hidden Purpose.

A young lieutenant from a New York regiment surveyed the Texas scenery gloomily and reflected upon his great distance from the lights of Broadway. The smoke from a smelter and the swirling sand from the low lying hills had spoiled the lieutenant's disposition. "Tell me," said an editor from El Paso, "isn't there some hidden purpose behind this mobilization?" "There is," replied the lieutenant. "We are going to force Mexico to take back Texas."

The Gun Camera.

A remarkable method of making birdseye photographs is by the use of a "gun camera," which is shot several feet into the air from the top of a standard in the head of which is an explosion chamber. The camera is set to expose from one to ten seconds after the explosion, when it reaches its full height. It must be caught in a net when it comes down to prevent it from being smashed.

Height of Fame.

"And how is your son Henry getting on in literature?" asked the visitor.

"Oh, he's doing famously," said the proud mother. "His autograph brought $10 the other day."

"Really?"

"Yes—signed to a promissory note for three hundred. I bought it myself."—Harper's Weekly.

The Kansas Way.

Here is the way a Kansas paper duns its subscribers: "If you have frequent fainting spells, accompanied by chills, cramps, corns, bunions, chilblains, epilepsy and jaundice, it is a sign you are not well, but liable to die any minute. Pay your subscription in advance and thus make yourself solid for a good obituary notice."

Often the Way.

"Now that your daughter has graduated she will have more time on her hands." "Yes." "I suppose she expects to help her mother?" "No, she expects to join another bridge club."

NURSE'S STORY OF ULCER CURE

Case of Six Months' Standing Entirely Healed.

After long suffering and the use of many ineffectual medicines, this case from Augusta, Me., comes to light as entirely healed. The authenticity of the case is apparent when you appreciate that the bearer of the tale is a graduate nurse. The following is the letter, as received:

"I must write and tell you the good Resinol Ointment has done. I applied it to an ulcerated leg of six months' standing. Almost everything had been tried to heal it. Resinol was applied twice a day for four weeks, and the ulcers are entirely healed. It is now six months since the treatment and no indication of a return of the trouble. I have used Resinol for eruptions on children's faces, and for everything that seemed to need an ointment, with satisfactory results in every case."

Mrs. I. E. CAMERON, Augusta, Me.

The first application of Resinol will relieve itching and irritation in skin diseases, and stop pain in burns and scalds. Frequently chafing, sunburn and poison ivy eruptions are cured overnight.

It is highly beneficial as a general skin remedy, and after one trial you will appreciate this to such an extent that you will never be without it.

You can procure Resinol Ointment, Resinol Soap and Resinol Medicated Shaving Stick from any druggist. Sample sent free if you will mention Department No. 59. Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

WHEN HE WAS YOUNG

"Don't talk to me," said the man with the heavy eyebrows, "about the charms of ingenuous youth or the happy days when we believed in the world and were green! I suffered in those good old days.

"If there is any agony worse than not being exactly sure of the right thing to do in any situation I'd like to know it! There's an immense comfort that comes with getting wise and sophisticated with accumulating years.

"I guess I was about seventeen when I went to spend a vacation with my married sister, who lived in Chicago. It had been my first year away at school in a small college town near our old home and Chicago was a great proposition for me. I certainly had the time of my young life and in addition to that I fell in love.

"It was my first experience and so it marked an epoch. And she was a poem. Sometimes nowadays when I run across a girl who looks like a cross between a French fluffy haired doll, a Christmas angel and little Eva, it reminds me of Gwendolyn and I wonder how much she weighs now and how large her family is.

"In those days she was a fragile, ethereal creature, who had just learned how to use her eyes and worked them overtime for fear she would forget the method. Whenever she turned them on me I felt repaid for all the empty seventeen years which had gone before.

"Well, when I had to tear myself away at the behest of a heartless college I felt that I wanted to give Gwendolyn something so that she would not forget me. I had visions of diamond tiaras and ropes of pearls as the appropriate testimonials for her, but I took the precaution of consulting my sister. She informed me I'd get in all wrong if I sent Gwen anything more than candy or books or flowers. That being the case, I marched into the most expensive candy shop in town. My good will was a trifle restricted by my pocket book, which was flat. Two dollars was what I decided I could spend. The candy shop was a gorgeous place with bonbons the like of which I had never seen before. I browsed about and finally ran onto a tray of candied violets. They were new to me and they certainly were pretty. I approached a clerk.

"'Give me,' said I, 'two dollars worth of those!'

"The clerk, accustomed to sprinkling a half dozen of the violets on the top of a box of candy for decoration only, looked puzzled, but filled my order. It made about as big a package as a nickel's worth of chocolate drops. I swallowed hard and plunged.

"'Better make it four dollars worth,' I muttered. She doubled the order and even then the package was wretchedly small. I couldn't think of insulting Gwendolyn with it and I didn't dare switch my order to something else under the stony disdain of the clerk. To cut it short, I sent Gwen six dollars' worth of candied violets and I bet she had a fit when she got 'em! I know that my sister had one at my mere telling of what I had done. She said that if Gwendolyn hadn't any more sense than to eat them up I'd probably killed her and that if she did have sense and gave them away in all likelihood she'd be sued for damages. If anyone mentioned candied violets in my presence for months after that I'd take a chill. It was just as if I had tried to prove my love by sending the young woman a barrel of dill pickles.

"It was the very next summer that I tagged my sister and her husband abroad. They had been indiscreet enough to mention what ship they were sailing on—indiscreet because they were afraid that I'd insist on going and spoil all their fun. Sure enough, when the boat sailed they found me on deck, grinning at their disgusted surprise. Gus got back at me, though. I was green to ocean travel, just as I was to numerous other things, and I observed for three days at a certain time that a steward came, spoke to my brother-in-law and that the latter looked bored and disappeared, I inquired into it. Gus regarded me long and seriously.

"'Tommy,' said he in a shocked tone, 'do you mean to tell me that you have neglected arranging with the bath steward for your hour? Heavens, boy, don't let anyone know it, and I'll see what I can do for you! Didn't you know it is one of the rules of the boat that every passenger must take a tub bath twice a day? Dear me, I suppose I should have told you! What'll they do? Well, of course, they can't drop you overboard, but they can confine you to your cabin—now don't you worry, I'll fix it!'

"He did. Gus certainly fixed it thoroughly. It was a slow boat and for the remaining seven days of the trip that infernal steward would come and lean over me sadly and in a sepulchral tone inform me that it was my bath hour. And he came at 10:30, when I was always walking with some pretty girl, and at four, when every other soul on board was having tea and a jolly time. And nobody gave it away to me till we landed! Oh, there are lots nicer stretches in life to my mind than the vernal ones of simple minded youth!"

The Vacant Literary Throne.

There is, we must admit, today no monarch in any tongue upon the literary throne, no sovereign world-name in poetry or prose, in whom as has happened before now not so many generations ago, in royal succession, to Scott, Byron, Goethe, V. Hugo, Tolstoy—all the civilized world, Teuton, Latin, Celt, Slav, Oriental, are interested, for whose new works it looks, or where it seeks the gospel of the day. Nabochlish, to use an Irish word that became a favorite with Sir Walter Scott; it does not matter. Do not let us nurse the humor of the despondent editor who mournfully told his readers, "No new epic this month."

Nobody can tell how the wonders of languages are performed, nor how a book comes into the world. Genius is genius. The lamp that today some may think burns low will be replenished. New orbs will bring light. Literature may be trusted to take care of itself, for it is the transcript of the drama of life, with all its actors, moods and strange flashing fortunes. The curiosity that it meets is perpetual and insatiable, and the impulses that inspire it can never be extinguished.—John Morley, before the English Association.

A Wise Mayor.

Mayor Crump, at a Democratic banquet in Memphis, said of a political turncoat:

"He is as inconsistent in politics as man is in love.

"Man's inconstancy in love is, you know, proverbial. The average man, as soon as he wins a woman, tires of her. The advice I'd give to every girl is this:

"'There is only one way to keep a man's love, and that is never to return it.'"

COUNTY ASSESSORS

Tax Law Revision Commission Make Radical Recommendation

TO FIX THE RESPONSIBILITY

Tax Experts Would Relieve Supervisors, Also Urge That General Assembly Make the Tax Commission Permanent.

Des Moines.—The establishment of the office of county assessor and a permanent tax commission to relieve the state executive council of the duties of making tax levies will be recommended to the next general assembly in a bill prepared by the tax commission provided for by a law passed by the last general assembly to recommend changes in the Iowa tax laws.

These two reforms, which the members of the commission deem most important, were decided upon at the meeting of the commission the past week at the state house.

All business of assessing will be consolidated in each county under one man, if the recommendation of the commission is carried out. The office of township assessor and city assessor will be abolished.

Recommend County Assessor.

The five members of the temporary commission are agreed that the establishment of the office of county assessor is one of the best reform steps the state can take in its tax business.

Many states recently have made the change and in every case the work has been expedited and all concerned better satisfied with the results. The plan fixes responsibility. Where one man has charge of the entire county, the little troubles that are continually cropping out under the present system will be done away with. Any irregularities will be easily traced. The county assessor's office will have sufficient salary attached to insure the service of the most competent men. I am sure the tax business of the counties would be handled better under the proposed method.

Permanent Tax Commission.

Iowa will be following the lead of other states in the establishment of a permanent tax commission. Wherever a tax commission has been established, the benefit of the plan has been apparent within a short time in a better equalization of taxes and in most cases, a reduction is the rule. A tax commission devotes its entire time to a study of the question and undoubtedly can give better service than the executive council, for instance, which is composed of state officials who have their time well employed by other important state business.

Only Temporary Board.

The present tax commission is only a temporary board, empowered by the legislature to work over the tax laws of the state and make a report of its findings. Its life will expire before the next session of the general assembly. A report of all its recommendations will be made to Gov. B. F. Carroll not later than Oct. 1, 1912.

The members of the commission, all of whom have been in attendance at the meeting, are: M. H. Cohen of Des Moines, chairman; Andrew C. Ripley of Garner, B. E. Stonebraker of Rockwell City, J. P. McConologue of Mason City and Charles N. Voss of Davenport.

Barney Plans Picture Display.

Illustrated lectures on food and dairy products and their care in the home and on the place of production is the newest move of Commissioner Barney to bring home to the people of Iowa the need of strict obedience to the food and dairy laws of the state.

Commissioner Barney is gathering photographs of proper and improper methods of preparing food products, of handling food and dairy products, of dairy farm sanitation, of caring for food in the home, and, in fact, of every phase of the pure food problem which can be illustrated.

These lectures will be given free of charge at state and district conventions, at fairs and wherever possible to show them. Their first appearance will be at the state teachers' convention in November.

New Law Source of Trouble.

The revenue department of State Auditor Bleakly's office is having all kinds of trouble over the new bank assessment law which was passed by the last legislature. Under the new law the assessors when they assess bank stock must not deduct the indebtedness. Many of the assessors have sent in abstracts without complying with the new law in any way, shape or manner. Many of them have also assessed monies and credits under the new law when it does not become effective until next year.

BOGUS SCALES UNCOVERED

Report Is Made To State Commissioner of Astonishing Condition In Southeast Iowa.

Des Moines.—Twenty-nine out of every thirty scales in the retail stores of Iowa, so far as he has investigated, have been tampered with to cheat the customer, according to a report made to Commissioner Barney of the food and dairy department by Inspector Flynn. Inspector Flynn has completed a tour of southeastern Iowa, giving practically all of his attention to the weight and measure frauds.

The report says: "Twenty-nine out of every thirty scales which I examined I found to have been tampered with in the interest of the dealer. The average loss is from one to two ounces. The trick is done by bending the dial on the side of the scale which faces the customer so that it starts at from one to two ounces ahead of the zero mark on the scale. The customer seldom looks at the scale before the article is put onto it, but he always watches, if he watches the scale at all, its appearance when the article is being weighed. When the dial points to sixteen ounces the customer is satisfied that he has received full measure. If he could see the other side of the scale, that which is toward the dealer, he would find that the dial registered from fourteen to fifteen ounces.

"I find also that dealers over the state are using the false bottom or no bottom measures. I picked up one of these at a prominent Davenport store the other day. I carried it in and the dealer said it held a half bushel. I filled it with potatoes, weighed the crate into which the potatoes were emptied, and found that the half bushel measure was seven pounds shy in legal weight. That means a loss of fourteen pounds to the bushel by buying your potatoes by one of those new-fangled measures."

Ad Valorem System Favored.

The temporary tax commission decided to recommend to Governor Carroll the ad valorem system of taxation. The ad valorem system takes no regard of the ability of the citizen to pay the tax, but instead places a general, uniform assessment upon all classes of property.

The decision to recommend the ad valorem system of assessment and taxation was not reached, however, until the commission has spent many days in discussion, and then only by a division. It is understood that when it comes time to make the recommendation to Governor Carroll that there will be a minority report on the ad valorem proposition.

The commission adjourned until about the first of December, when a continuous session lasting a month will be started.

As a result of the fall's work the commission has practically outlined a comprehensive system. It provides two centralized authorities, one state and the other county. The state authority is to be supreme in everything, more advisory, however, than active. The county authority is to be the supervisor of assessments, who shall have power to appoint the local assessor for each city, town and township and who shall be supreme as to county taxes. They will be given an ad valorem system to administer.

Beet Sugar Men Given a Lift.

The sugar beet industry in Iowa was given a material lift by the state railroad commission when it made a rule allowing some of the by-product to take the same rate as corn and other animal foods.

When beet sugar is being manufactured there is created a by-product which makes an excellent feed for cattle. Heretofore the beet sugar manufacturers could not dispose of this by-product at a profit because of the rate that was charged by the railroads for its transportation.

By reducing the rate to the corn and general feed rate the commission has made it possible for this new beet feed to compete with the older kinds of animal food. In this way the promoters of the beet sugar industry in Iowa will be enabled to see more profits in the plants and it is believed that with this chance of adding to the profits of the industry there will be a general stimulating of the beet sugar industry in Iowa.

Civil Service Examinations.

Civil service examinations for government positions will be held in Des Moines on October 18th, 19th, 25th, 26th, and 30th. On October 18th and 19th examinations will be given for the office of scientific assistant in the department of agriculture. On October 25th and 26th, printer, Philippine service; teacher of agriculture, aid in bureau of standards, botanical artist, plant pathologist, specialist in botany, assistant in crop acclimatization, manual training teacher, and on October 30 for the position of soil scientist in laboratory investigation.

MUNYON PREACHES HOPE PHILOSOPHY

New Association Gaining Many Members.

FAITH'S CURATIVE POWER

NOTED HEALTH EXPERT GIVES REASON FOR BIG SUCCESS IN MEDICINE

Tremendous success has attended the organization of the new Munyon "Hope Cult." Professor Munyon claims that he has secured more converts than he even anticipated, and says that his "Hope Cult" is growing in leaps and bounds. It is said that the total membership of the association throughout the United States is now well over the half million mark.

In a statement for publication Prof. Munyon said:

"I want to talk to every sick, ailing and despondent person in this city. I want to preach my new creed to them. I want to tell them about my new philosophy of health, which is the fruit of a lifetime of study and experience in dealing with sick folk.

"I want to expound the Great Truth that I have learned that there is more curative power in an ounce of Hope than in pounds of Dope. That sick people should not take medicine except as a medium through which the great curative power of Hope may be made effective. Medicines are necessary in the present state of the world's progress because they give a patient physical support and strength and renewed vigor with which to brace up the will power. One knows, from the action of the proper medicines, that he or she is feeling better by this inspired hope and faith, which complete the cure.

"I think that probably a million persons at least in the United States have declared themselves cured by my medicines, and I know that these people have had the best remedies medical science had to offer. I have always contended that if there is any virtue in medicine my followers should have the best, but I verily believe that more than one-half of those who have been lifted to health from the bondage of chronic illness, through taking my medicines, have been really cured by the knowledge that they had the utmost in medical lore at their command, and the Hope this inspired.

"I am not in any sense a practicing physician. I employ at my laboratories in Philadelphia a large staff of expert physicians and chemists, and I have many other physicians in various cities of the United States detailed to give free advice to the sick and afflicted. My headquarters are at Munyon's Laboratories, 53d and Jefferson Sts., Phila., Pa., and I have there a staff of duly registered physicians and consulting experts, and to all who desire it I offer the best of medical advice absolutely free of charge."

Write today, addressing Prof. J. M. Munyon personally and your letter will have a special care.

In Bed Seven Weeks With Terrible Kidney Trouble.

A. Dearth, Main St., Camden, O., says: "I was in bed seven weeks with kidney trouble and grew worse in spite of all the doctor could do. Kidney secretions were in terrible condition. If left standing they thickened like glucose and had to be removed with a knife. My own doctor gave me up. I then called in a specialist who said I was beyond recovery. I had lost over 20 pounds and was but a shadow of my former self. I used one box of Doan's Kidney Pills and soon felt better. Continuing, I was cured and have not had the slightest trouble since."

MAY SETTLE TODAY

Growing Hope on Both Sides That Strike Will Be Averted

STILL AWAIT McHENRY NOTE

Judge Has Not Yet Officially Declined Task—Today's Conference May Result In Completing Board.

Des Moines, Oct. 9.—The truce between the Des Moines City Railway company and its employes will continue in force for today at least. Messrs. Urick and Guernsey will meet probably at noon prepared to resume their wearisome search for the third member of the board of arbitration, the resumption being made necessary by the declination of Judge W. H. McHenry, who was chosen Saturday evening, to act in that capacity. Contrary to expectation, Judge McHenry failed yesterday to give formal notice of his refusal to accept the task, and on both sides the hope is expressed that he may be persuaded to reconsider his determination unofficially expressed soon after the news of his selection was made public. However, should Judge McHenry stand firm in his intention to decline, it is thought that Messrs. Urick and Guernsey can agree on another arbiter. There were several other names submitted which have not been declined and one of them may be chosen. When Judge McHenry was agreed to by Mr. Guernsey, the union men took it as an indication of good faith and no hasty action in the strike matter will be taken.

ITALIANS WILL END SLAVERY

Reported That Arabs Are Returning to Town Ready to Surrender to Conquerors of Turks.

Rome, Oct. 9.—The Italian authorities at Tripoli issued a proclamation suppressing slavery. Tripoli was the only remaining port on the coast of Africa where slavery still prevailed, notwithstanding the efforts of Great Britain and France to prevent the traffic. Advices from Tripoli say groups of Turkish soldiers are coming in to surrender. The Arabs, armed at the last moment by the garrison with Mauser rifles landed by the steamer Derna, are gradually returning to Tripoli and offering their submission.

FAIRFIELD HAS ELECTRICITY

Unofficial Test of Hydro-Electric Station On Skunk River Said to Be Very Satisfactory.

Mount Pleasant, Oct. 9.—Electric current was sent from Oakland to Fairfield for the first time yesterday. For six hours electricity was furnished from the Iowa Power company's hydro-electric plant on the Skunk river for all of Fairfield except the commercial establishments. The test, which was an unofficial one, is said to have been satisfactory. One of the Fairfield light companies has a contract for use of the electricity generated at Oakland, where a 5,000 horse power plant recently has been built.

NEW PLANT WILL BE ERECTED

Company Selects Site For the Building at East Seventh Street and Grand Avenue.

Des Moines, Oct. 9.—W. M. Campbell of Pittsburgh, Pa., has selected the site for the new bakery to be erected by him in Des Moines. The building and machinery will cost approximately $60,000. The bakery will be modern throughout and will be devoted exclusively to the manufacture of four kinds of bread. It is expected that the plant will be in operation shortly after Jan. 1.

Vote On Sewage Plant.

Mount Pleasant, Oct. 9.—Citizens of Mount Pleasant will vote Tuesday, Oct. 24, on the question of establishing a new sanitary sewer district down Snipe Run valley and on the erecting of a terminal sewage disposal plant. An expenditure of $30,000 is referred to the electors.

Farmers Sues For Injuries.

OLD SOLDIERS MEET

Veterans Gather Around Camp Fire of Their Regiment

THE OLD THIRTY-NINTH IOWA

Colonel of Civil War Volunteers Speaks at Colfax Meeting—Reminiscences of Days of Nation's Strife Are Recalled.

Des Moines.—Thirty-nine volunteers some of them tottering and feeble, all of them bearing the marks of age, but in whose hearts beat with the fire of past youth, the love of the flag and of the country, met in reunion the past week at Colfax, Ia. They are members of the old Thirty-ninth Iowa regiment, and this is the fourteenth annual reunion of these old soldiers.

A splendid program was given in the Methodist church. Col. David J. Palmer of Washington made the principal address. Maj. John F. Lacey of Oskaloosa also spoke. D. C. Harper made an address on "War Itinerary of the Thirty-ninth Iowa as It Appears Today," following the speech by Colonel Palmer which opened the campfire session. "Marching Through Georgia," was sung by the ladies' chorus. Mrs. Jennie Wheedon, past Iowa department president of the W. R. C., spoke, as did Mrs. Eleanor J. Hawk, past department president Iowa W. R. C., followed by a business meeting and the bidding of goodbyes until next year, when those whom death has spared will again gather to fight over the old battles.

Herman Confers With Gotch.

Humboldt.—Jack Herman, manager for Zbyszko, the Polish wrestling champion, was in Humboldt this week and had an interview with Frank Gotch regarding a match for the title during the coming season. Herman offered Gotch $10,000 for his share regardless of the result.

Little Child Hangs Herself.

Des Moines.—Marguerite, the 19-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hanlon of 1007 East Twenty-second street court, accidentally hung herself with a small hemp cord attached to the clothes line while at play in the yard of her home.

Kill Off Canadian Thistle.

Marshalltown.—Fearing that the pesky Canadian thistle is going to get a foothold in the county, farmers have petitioned both the board of supervisors and the city council to take action to rid the Iowa Central right-of-way, entering this city, of the noxious weed.

Burglars Raid Barnum.

Fort Dodge.—Two burglars, one suspect caught and another hunted by a posse, entered a number of business places at Barnum, secured considerable booty, and made their escape before the thefts were discovered.

Fall From Tree Proves Fatal.

Mason City.—Falling from a tree, where he was engaged in picking apples, and being impaled upon a picket fence, resulted in the death a few hours later of Charles Hess, a wealthy farmer of Mitchell county.

Oldest Resident Dies.

Washington.—Mrs. Rebecca Keister the oldest person in Washington county is dead at the age of 94 years. She came to Iowa from Pennsylvania and had been a resident of this county for fifty-two years.

Des Moines.—The fortieth annual state convention of the Iowa Equal Suffrage association will be held at Perry, Iowa, October 10, 11 and 12. The first meeting will be held at 6:30 P. M., October 10. The official call for the meeting has just been issued by Harriet Belvel Evans of Corydon, state president.

All local suffrage societies are entitled to three delegates for the first ten members and one additional delegate for each additional ten or fraction of ten members.

Plead Guilty to Swindling.

Davenport.—Ed Ellis and Walter Nolan pleaded guilty in the United States district court here to charges of being implicated in the operations of the famous Mabray gang of swindlers, and were fined $200 each and sentenced to three months in the Polk County jail at Des Moines. Ellis is the man said to have engineered the deal whereby John Cavanaugh of Davenport was swindled out of $37,500 at New Orleans several years ago.

Interurban Files Articles.

Des Moines.—Plans for the construction of an interurban railroad from Red Oak to Des Moines are progressing, as evidenced by the filing of a copy of the articles of incorporation for the company with the secretary of state. The company incorporated under the laws of Arizona. The paid up capital stock is listed at $150,000. Many southern Iowa capitalists are interested.

Madden Given Long Sentence.

Des Moines.—Convicted of the killing of Florence Durtt, William Madden (colored), was sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary at Fort Madison by Judge Bradshaw of the criminal division of the district court. Madden was indicted on a charge of murder and the jury found him guilty of the crime of manslaughter.

Verdict $3,000 Against Pierce.

Des Moines.—A jury in Judge Brennan's division of the district court has returned a verdict of $3,000 against J. M. Pierce, proprietor of the Homestead, in the personal injury suit brought against him by Leonard T. Albrecht. The boy was struck by an automobile owned by Pierce and injured severely.

DOCTORS FAILED TO HELP HER

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Pound, Wis.—"I am glad to announce that I have been cured of dyspepsia and female troubles by your medicine. I had been troubled with both for fourteen years and consulted different doctors, but failed to get any relief. After using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier I can say I am a well woman. I can't find words to express my thanks for the good your medicine has done me. You may publish this if you wish." —Mrs. HERMAN SIETH, Pound, Wis.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills, and suffering women owe it to themselves to at least give this medicine a trial. Proof is abundant that it has cured thousands of others, and why should it not cure you?

If you want special advice write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. It is free and always helpful.

A Reader Cures His Constipation—Try It Free

Simple Way for Any Family to Retain the Good Health of All Its Members.

The editors of "Health Hints" and "Questions and Answers" have one question that is put to them more often than any other, and which, strangely enough, they find the most difficult to answer. That is "How can I cure my constipation?"

Dr. Caldwell, an eminent specialist in diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels has looked the whole field over, has practised the specialty for forty years and is convinced that the ingredients contained in what is called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, has the best claim to attention from constipated people.

Its success in the cure of stubborn constipation has done much to displace the use of salts, waters, strong cathartics and such things. Syrup Pepsin, by training the stomach and bowel muscles to again do their work naturally, and with its tonic ingredients strengthening the nerves, brings about a lasting cure. Among its strongest supporters are Mr. John Graveline of 98 Milwaukee Ave., Detroit, Mich., Mr. J. A. Vernon of Oklahoma City and thousands of others. It can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, or if you want to try it first a free sample bottle can be obtained by writing the doctor.

For the free sample address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

From the Register:

This week will about see the roof on the new church.

Will Hartfelder is out again after having the measles.

In about another week the old Reformed church building will become a dwelling house of seven rooms. This will make another house to rent here, which will help some.

Early Sunday morning, Oct. 8, occurred the death of Mrs. Ludwig Guth, at her home in Meservey. She had been sick for about two weeks, her death being largely due to the infirmities of old age. Mr. Ludwig Guth, the aged husband who is blind, will now make his home with his son August northeast of town

The big tanks have been placed in position in the pump house this week. They will hold about 6,500 gallons each—sufficient to give a good supply. In case of fire, the pump can be started at once and there will be no lack of protection. About everything has now been received—pump, engine, hose, hose-carts, hydrants, etc., and will be placed in position as fast as possible.

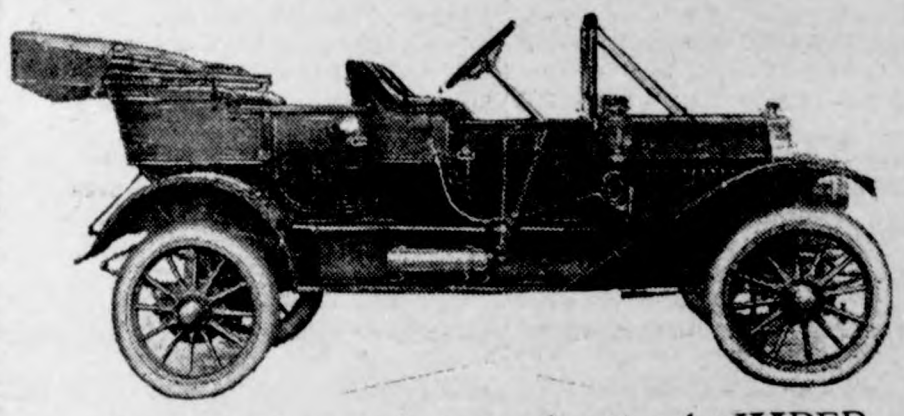
THE IMPERIAL

"THE GET THERE KIND"



It is with pleasure that we advertise the IMPERIAL. When so doing it is hard to say too much in favor of this line of IMPERIAL Automobiles. They have the record up-to-date for running and covering more miles of hard road-going, with the least expense, least adjustments.

The Burd Auto Co., Waterloo, Iowa, says: "The Imperial Automobile has not been equaled yet regardless of price." They run out 37 last season. Up to date there hasn't been one adjustment made. Their contract calls for 100 Imperials for 1911.

The Imperial is built in ten models, from a 35 H. P. two-passenger gentleman's Roadster, to a 60 H. P. seven passenger touring car. Buy the car that bears the name IMPERIAL, and get a dollar's worth of automobile for every dollar you invest.

Italian-Turkish War

Italy has made propositions to Turkey that are expected to bring peace. It proposes to annex Tripoli and pay indemnity. Italy is to control all civil and military affairs, while the caliph is to be supreme in all religious affairs.

• • •

That an armistice nas been arranged between Italy and Turkey, as reported from Berlin, is strenuously denied by the Italian government. The Corriere D'Italia asserts the government is opposed absolutely to indemnifying Turkey for Tripoli.

• • •

Derna was bombarded and hospitals and barracks were damaged as well as other buildings. Many were killed and wounded. The bombardment followed an unsuccessful attempt by Italian bluejackets to make a landing from a warship in the harbor.

• • •

A dispatch to a London news agency from Pera says that the Turkish torpedo boats Tokai, Hamid Abad, Alpagut and Antalia, while returning from the Ionian sea, were surprised by an Italian squadron near Mitylene. A smart engagement followed and three of the torpedo boats were severely damaged and sank. The fourth escaped by hoisting a foreign flag.

• • •

Domestic

Mgr. Falconio, apostolic delegate, has sent a circular letter to all archbishops and bishops in the United States ordering them to discontinue the practice of asking a contribution at the door of Roman Catholic churches and of charging a fee for a seat in the churches.

• • •

In the United States circuit court at Baltimore Judge John C. Rose rendered a decision in favor of the government in its dissolution suit against the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing company and others, the so-called "bathtub trust." The action was brought under the Sherman anti-trust law and the alleged illegal combination must dissolve.

• • •

President Taft arrived at San Francisco after a strenuous day of rear-platform speeches commencing at the Oregon state line. He spoke on the tariff, the trusts and other topics, but he made so-called "dollar diplomacy" the subject of his principal address, which he delivered in Sacramento. He defended his Central American treaties and leclared that they were the logical result of the Monroe doctrine.

• • •

The remains of a woman's skirt and a petticoat hidden with the torn remnant of an oilcloth toilet bag, found under a bridge on the Pine creek road a mile north of the spot near Dixon, Ill., where the murdered body of Bessie Kent Webster was found, is thought to be the clothing of the murdered woman.

• • •

August Wilcox of Morrice, Mich., has just been paid $5.04 due him from the United States government when he was postmaster at Bridgewater, Mich., 70 years ago.

• • •

Sahip Cin Amat of Seattle, Wash., is under arrest charged with forgery of a postal savings bank certificate. This is the first attempt at such forgery which has come to light.

• • •

Admiral Washington L. Capps, who went to Havana to inspect the wreck of the Maine for the navy department, is at the Philadelphia navy yard, but has not yet submitted his report to the department.

Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, progressive Republican leader, has decided to start early next month on a speechmaking swing through the middle west. The tour will last until congress meets in December.

Army officials of Washington hope to announce by the first of the year that all in that service are immune from typhoid fever, due to administration of prophylactic. All enlisted men under forty-five years old, who have not had the fever are to be given the treatment.

For the first time in over twenty-five years Nashville, Tenn., elected a negro, Dr. S. P. Harris, city councilman.

• • •

A monster hubbard squash raised on his farm in southern Sawyer county was brought into Winter, Wis., by Roy Van Alstine. It measured 23 inches through the center and 30 inches long, and weighed 100 pounds. Van Alstine is remembered as the man who captured John Dietz, the Cameron Dam outlaw.

• • •

Woman suffrage has triumphed in California. Straggling returns have wiped out the majority previously recorded against the amendment and gave it a majority of 2,051.

• • •

Twenty-one persons were injured and many more were severely shaken up, when two trains on the Aurora, Elgin and Chicago railroad collided in Austin, a suburb of Chicago. None will die. The rear coach caught fire as it crashed into the one ahead and burned down to the trucks.

• • •

The dissolution of the "electrical trust," as the General Electrical company and its subsidiaries are known, was ordered at Toledo by Judge Kellits in a decree in the United States district court. The General Electric has about forty subordinate firms under its control.

Produces More Coal Than Any Other County in Iowa

POLK COUNTY STANDS SECOND

The Year Has Been Banner One For The Coal Mining Industry In State—More Taken Out Than Ever Before.

Des Moines.—Monroe county outstripped all the other coal producing counties in Iowa in the number of tons of coal mined during the year ending June 30, 1911, according to statistics in the annual report of the state mine inspector's office.

During the twelve months covered by the report, 2,214,104 tons were mined in Monroe county. Polk county was second with 1,663,291 tons. Appanoose county was third with 859,435 tons, and Mahaska fourth with 855,435 tons.

The year was a banner one for the coal mining industry in Iowa, more coal being mined in the three districts during the period than ever before in the history of the mining industry in Iowa.

The mine output of the state amounted to 7,590,935 tons, as compared to 7,222,480 tons in 1910 and 7,346,253 tons in 1909.

Army of the Tennessee.

Council Bluffs.—Gov. B. F. Carroll of Iowa gave the formal address of welcome at the opening of the most memorable reunion of the Army of the Tennessee since its birth forty-one years ago. Two other military organizations are participating in the reunion. They are the surviving members of the Iowa commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, the Fourth Iowa infantry, Gen. Grenville M. Dodge's first regiment, and Dodge's Second Iowa battery.

Police Arrest Three Suspects.

Oskaloosa.—Local police, arrested Joe Wilson, Mike Sullivan and John Ray, charged with breaking into the storage house of Clarence Vermillion, a dealer in explosives. A cache was discovered in the woods near here, in which great quantities of dynamite, nitro-glycerine and caps had been stored, apparently to be used in safe blowing expeditions.

Dental Conference at Iowa City.

Iowa City.—The annual session of the University District Dental society will be held in Iowa City, Wednesday, October 18th. Among the noted dentists who will take part in the program which has been arranged, are: Dr. Austin James of Chicago; Dr. E. T. Tinker of Minneapolis, Minn., and Dr. Conzett of Dubuque.

Farmers' Institute at Eldon.

Eldon.—The second meeting of the Farmers' Institute will be held at Eldon, January 4th, 5th and 6th. Professor Holden, of Ames, as well as Professor Stewart, of Ames, will lecture on "The Care of the Soils," and Professor Hauser will give the farmers the results of scientific researches with small grains.

Would Check City Officials.

Iowa City.—A novel organization is about to be formed in Iowa City under the leadership of Henry H. Rate, a prominent glove manufacturer. He proposes to organize all the people of the city who have had trouble with the city officials. The purpose is to resist domineering by the city officials.

Iowa Newspaper Man "Stung."

Creston.—A man giving his name as John G. Manning, appeared in Shannon City the past week, and wanted to buy the Sun, published by Horace E. Greeley. The men finally made terms and Manning produced a draft apparently drawn by a New York bank, being unable to get the cash in Shannon City the stranger and Mr. Greeley went to Grand River where upon the endorsement of Mr. Greeley the bank at that place cashed the $350 draft, Manning then handed Mr. Greeley $10 to bind their bargain and placing the balance of the proceeds in his pocket disappeared. The draft has been pronounced a forgery by the New York bank.

Fire at McClelland, Iowa.

Council Bluffs.—Fire of unknown origin at McClelland destroyed several business houses with an aggregate loss of more than $15,000. The heaviest losers are: Berry Brothers, grocers, $6,000; T. J. Hatch, meat market, $500; Hugh H. Dounds, building, $1,200; R. W. Tauzer, pool hall, $500; W. E. Fehr, pool hall, $2,000; Elmer Tauzer, livery barn, $3,000.

Announces His Candidacy.

Des Moines.—Capt. John D. Brown of Leon, senator in the last general assembly has announced his candidacy for department commander of the G. A. R., to succeed Capt. Lot Abraham. One of the interesting features in connection with his candidacy to succeed Mr. Abraham is the fact that Captain Brown's life was saved during the war by Abraham.

Iowa Librarians Elect.

Mason City.—The Iowa Librarians' association elected the following officers: president, Miss Grace Rose, Davenport; vice president, Miss Addie Barton, Mason City; secretary, R. L. Dickinson, Grinnell; treasurer, L. R. Parvin, Cedar Rapids; regis trar, Miss Sarah Palmer, Red Oak.

New Road Projected.

Dubuque.—The inland village of Luxemburg will have railway facilities if the plans of leading men aided by S. G. Durant, a railway builder from Omaha, materialize. A survey is under way. It is probable the line will connect with the Illinois Central at Farley.

are moments in life, when heart is so full of emotion, by chance it be shaken, or its depths like a pebble careless word, it overflows, its secret,
the ground like water, can be gathered together.
I was shocked, when I you speak of Miles Stand-his virtues, transforming his defects into virtues, his courage and strength,

even his fighting in Flanders, fighting alone you could win heart of a woman, erlooking yourself and the in exalting your hero.
I spake as I did, by an irtible impulse.

these words, I can see," again interrupted the maiden,
"How very little you prize me, or care for what I am saying.
When from the depths of my heart, in pain and with secret misgiving,
Frankly I speak to you, asking for sympathy only and kindness,
Straightway you take up my words, that are plain and direct and in earnest,
Turn them away from their meaning, and answer with flattering phrases.
This is not right, is not just, is not true to the best that is in you;

"You Will Forgive, I Hope."

For I know and esteem you, and feel that your nature is noble, Lifting mine up to a higher, a more ethereal level.
Therefore I value your friendship, and feel it perhaps the more keenly
If you say aught that implies I am only as one among many,
If you make use of those common and complimentary phrases
Most men think so fine, in dealing and speaking with women,
But which women reject as insipid, if not as insulting."

Mute and amazed was Alden; and listened and looked at Priscilla, Thinking he never had seen her more fair, more divine in her beauty.
He who but yesterday pleaded so glibly the cause of another,
Stood there embarrassed and silent, and seeking in vain for an answer.
So the maiden went on, and little divined or imagined
What was at work in his heart, that made him so awkward and speechless.
"Let us, then, be what we are, and speak what we think, and in all things
Keep ourselves loyal to truth, and the sacred professions of friendship.
It is no secret I tell you, nor am I ashamed to declare it:
I have liked to be with you, to see you, to speak with you always.
So I was hurt at your words, and a little affronted to hear you Urge me to marry your friend, though he were the Captain Miles Standish.
For I must tell you the truth: much more to me is your friendship
Than all the love he could give, were he twice the hero you think him."
Then she extended her hand, and Alden, who eagerly grasped it,
Felt all the wounds in his heart, that were aching and bleeding so sorely,
Healed by the touch of that hand, and he said, with a voice full of feeling:
"Yes, we must ever be friends; and of all who offer you friendship Let me be ever the first, the truest, the nearest and dearest!"

Casting a farewell look at the glimmering sail of the Mayflower,
Distant, but still in sight, and sinking below the horizon,
Homeward together they walked, with a strange, indefinite feeling,
That all the rest had departed and left them alone in the desert.
But, as they went through the fields in the blessing and smile of the sunshine, Lighter grew their hearts, and Priscilla said very archly:
"Now that our terrible Captain has gone in pursuit of the Indians,
Where he is happier far than he would be commanding a household,
You may speak boldly, and tell me of all that happened between you,
When you returned last night, and said how ungrateful you found me."
Thereupon answered John Alden, and told her the whole of the story,— Told her his own despair, and the direful wrath of Miles Standish.
Whereat the maiden smiled, and said between laughing and earnest,
"He is a little chimney, and heated hot in a moment!"
But as he gently rebuked her, and told her how much he had suffered,—
How he had even determined to sail that day in the Mayflower,
And had remained for her sake, on hearing the dangers that threatened,—
All her manner was changed, and she said with a faltering accent,
"Truly I thank you for this: how good you have been to me always!"

Thus as a pilgrim devout, who toward Jerusalem journeys,
Taking three steps in advance, and one reluctantly backward,
Urged by importunate zeal, and withheld by pangs of contrition;
Slowly but steadily onward, receding yet ever advancing,
Journeyed this Puritan youth to the Holy Land of his longings, Urged by the fervor of love, and withheld by remorseful misgivings.

SEVEN ARE KILLED

Fast Freight and Passenger Trains Collide Near Omaha

OVER TWENTY ARE INJURED

Mistake on Part of Freight Crew Thought to Be Responsible for Accident on Union Pacific Early Sunday.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 16.—Seven people were killed and twenty-two injured, four of them seriously, in a collision between Missouri Pacific passenger train No. 105, northbound, en route for this city, and a fast freight train. The accident occurred at Ft. Crook at 10 o'clock yesterday morning.

Fort Crook is ten miles south of this city. The accident is believed to have resulted from a misunderstanding of orders on the part of the freight crew.

A passenger train due to leave this city for the south about the time of the accident, was converted into a relief train and sent to the scene of the accident. Dr. Klick, local surgeon for the Missouri Pacific road, and the staff of Union Pacific surgeons were on board this train.

Shortly before noon the relief train returned to this city with the uninjured and several of those who were slightly injured. Of these all were sent on their way. The more seriously injured are being cared for at the army hospital at Fort Crook.

Governor Gilchrist of Florida was a passenger on the northbound train, but was uninjured. The dead:

F. W. PETRING, merchant, Nebraska City.

O. W. KEELER, passenger brakeman, Atchison, Kas.

MRS. FRED W. ROWTMANN, Nebraska City.

WISTERIAN ROWTMANN, 8 years old, daughter of Mrs. Rowtmann.

COFFIN CASE NEARS FINISH

Final Arguments In the Coffin Separate Maintenance Suit Expected To Finish Today.

Fort Dodge, Oct. 16.—Final arguments in the Coffin separate maintenance suit will be given before Judge Albrook at Webster City today. L. S. Coffin, the defendant, was on the stand Saturday afternoon and concluded his testimony and cross-examination at a night session. He reiterated constantly his predominant purpose to please his wife and make her happy and said all criticism was to improve her. Admitting he spoke angrily and hastily at times he said he always apologized.

Testimony to the effect that Mrs. Coffin had called him an old fool and said he might be brought home dead any time and she would not care was denied by the plaintiff.

COLLEGE IS FIFTY YEARS OLD

Many Greetings Come From Friends, Including One From King Haakon of Norway.

Decorah, Oct. 16.—With brilliantly illuminated campus and buildings and a concert by the student band, Luther college closed the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of its founding after a day that was full of momentous events. The most important of all was the presentation to the college of $236,000 by Dr. H. G. Stub, through whose efforts the money had been raised among the friends of the school. It is more than enough to secure the $50,000 offered by James J. Hill.

Dietz Makes Guilty Plea.

Clinton, Oct. 16.—Criminal trials of the September term ended when Dr. Adam Dietz, accused of attempted criminal assault on the person of 14-year-old Mildred Alfred of Thompson pleaded guilty. He with Elevin Brown convicted of manslaughter in connection with the death of Other Zalso will be sentenced tomorrow.

A Wonderful News Service

Have you ever paused to think what a marvelous organization must be necessary to lay before you each day an accurate account of the happenings of yesterday in Europe, Asia, Africa, South America, Australia, the islands of the sea and the whole expanse of our own continent, all in a single newspaper? The intricate network of cables and telegraph lines, the complicated chain of news-gathering agencies stretching across continents and oceans, the innumerable reporters working daily for you under tropic suns and over arctic snows—have you ever felt the romantic thrill of it all in reading a great modern newspaper such as the Chicago Record-Herald? We mention this paper especially because of the completeness of its domestic and foreign news service. It has a correspondent in every town or city of importance in the United States, a veritable army of them in all. In addition it has the benefit of the foreign news service of the New York Herald, famous for its world-wide cable system and for the reliability of its foreign news; also that of the New York World and the New York Journal of Commerce, besides that of the great co-operative news-gathering organization, the Associated Press. With such a vast and complete news service it is not strange that the Record-Herald so easily holds its own as one of the great newspapers of the world.

You are not experimenting on yourself when you take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a cold as that preparation has won its great reputation and extensive sale by its remarkable cures of colds, and can always be depended upon. It is equally valuable for adults and children and may be given to young children with implicit confidence as it contains no harmful drug. Sold by all dealers.

CALLED TO HIS REWARD

Mr Boehm, a respected citizen of Klemme, died at his home in this city last Saturday evening, the cause of death being given as arteriosclerosis. He had been sick for some time and was confined to his bed several weeks. His advanced age was against his recovery, and death came to his relief at the time above stated. Funeral services were held from the German Methodist church on Tuesday, Rev. H. W. Schneider officiating. Interment was made in Klemme cemetery.

Johannis Christian Heinrich Wilhelm Boehm was born in Mecklenburg, Schwerin, Germany, June 24, 1830, and died October 14, 1911, at the age of 81 years, 3 months and 20 days. He came to America in 1850 first locating at Michigan City, Indiana. Three years later he came to Elkport, Clayton county Iowa. Three years ago he became a resident of Klemme where he resided until his death. In the year 1855 he was married to Miss Friederike Koehn. He is survived by his aged wife, two sons living in Clayton county, and three daughters—Mrs. August Lau Sr., Mrs. J. W. Waterman and Mrs. Fred Musfelt—all residing in Klemme; he also leaves twenty grand-children and nine great-grand-children. He received his religious training in the Lutheran church.

The following from out of town were present at the funeral: Wm. Koehn and wife from Elkport, Iowa; Christopher Behrens and wife and son from Volga City, Iowa; Chris Behrens from Little Port, Iowa; Wm Boehm from Elkport, Iowa, and Ben Lau from Chicago.

The Des Moines Capital can be secured daily from the present date until Jan. 1, 1912, for 50c This is an exceptionally good offer and should be taken advantage of at once in order to secure full benefits. Let us send in your subscription.

FROM TEXAS
Some Coffee Facts From the Lone Star State.

From a beautiful farm down in Texas, where gushing springs unite to form babbling brooks that wind their sparkling way through flowery meads, comes a note of gratitude for delivery from the coffee habit.

"When my baby boy came to me five years ago, I began to drink Postum, having a feeling that it would be better for him and me than the old kind of drug-laden coffee. I was not disappointed in it, for it enabled me, a small, delicate woman, to nurse a bouncing, healthy baby 14 months.

"I have since continued the use of Postum for I have grown fond of it, and have discovered to my joy that it has entirely relieved me of a bilious habit which used to prostrate me two or three times a year, causing much discomfort to my family and suffering to myself.

"My brother-in-law was cured of chronic constipation by leaving off coffee and using Postum. He has become even more fond of it than he was of the old coffee.

"In fact, the entire family, from the latest arrival (a 2-year-old who always calls for his 'potie' first thing in the morning), up to the head of the house, think there is no drink so good or so wholesome as Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

LABOR CONDITIONS

Factory Inspector Believes Mrs. Starkweather is Mistaken

ASKED TO MAKE INSPECTION

State Official Points Out Only One Defect In Iowa's Laws On This Subject, and Says Statutes Are Generally Praised.

Des Moines.—Believing that Mrs. Mary Starkweather has a wrong impression of labor conditions in Iowa, Factory Inspector Ribble is going to invite her to accompany him in inspecting some of the factories and stores of Des Moines.

"I believe that the stores of Des Moines and the manufacturing plants of the city are run as nearly in accordance with the law as possible," said Mr. Ribble. "I rather welcome the suggestion of Mrs. Starkweather that a woman inspector be appointed to assist in the work. I also would welcome the appointment of several more men for this department has so much to do that it is impossible to get over the state more than once a year.

"A woman inspector would not be able to do more than a man, but she would be able to do considerable. Mrs. Starkweather seems to think that we have not the power to enter some buildings and places, but the law gives us this permission. As for entering the homes, that is a different matter.

Inspecting Big Task.

"We now have two state inspectors who must visit more than 3,600 establishments in Iowa. This is a big task. In every town we visit we work with the truant officer, who is generally in touch with the situation as far as child labor is concerned. The Iowa law on child labor is said to be the best of any measure adopted by any state of the union. There is only one point not covered and that is that there is no way to take care of the child who is without resources and must depend on his labor. In these cases the state should provide funds to keep him in school until he reaches the age at which he may be permitted to work. This would include children from the poor families, where it is absolutely necessary to put the child to work. When we find such cases there should be a way of the state providing funds to keep the child and pay to the family the sum of money that would be earned were the child at work.

Iowa Receives Praise.

"Iowa received high praise at the national convention of factory inspectors for the excellent laws enacted on this line and these laws were reommended to other states as good examples to follow. The conditions in the state are not ideal, but we find that employes of labor try and observe the law.

"We welcome assistance in our work, but we do not welcome criticism, and therefore I am going to ask Mrs. Starkweather to accompany me to some of the establishments and see for herself, also to provide her with a copy of the law so that she may become familiar with it in every detail."

National Dairy Show.

Governor Carroll has named the following delegation to the national dairy cattle congress to be held in Chicago, October 26th to November 4: Hon. C. J. Fulton, Fairfield; Arthur Repart, Burlington; J. J. Richardson, Davenport; E. R. Shoemaker, Waterloo; Hon. B. W. Newberry, Strawberry Point; George McKay, Buckingham; J. W. Fowler, Grinnell; J. R. Patents Granted Iowans.

Patents granted to Iowans for the week ending Oct. 10, are as follows: Bucket for transporting plastic material, Charles L. Bartlett of Cedar Rapids; metallic tire, James B. Crawford and J. R. Milliken of Sioux City; eyelet manufacturing machine, Louis Eisenbien, assignor of one-fourth to J. B. Sax of Ottumwa and one-fourth to E. L. and H. A. Roth; acetylene gas lamp, Lorenzo Evans, of Hiteman; rail joint, Frank Gadeck of Mystic; toilet paper holder and cutter, John S. Juline of Des Moines; trowel, John R. Morris of Waterloo; cash register, Joshua L. Morris of Council Bluffs and W. D. Jamieson of Shenandoah; disk sharpener, Henry H. Vernon of Hawarden; stanchion, W. L. Wagner, of Ankeny.

BUTTERMILK IS WASTED

Sioux City Man Claims Useful Beverage Is Thrown Away Because Of Heavy Freight Rates.

Des Moines.—The state board of railroad commissioners has under consideration the establishment of a low rate on tank car shipments of buttermilk. John Thompson, of Sioux City, has taken the matter up with the state board, and a hearing will be had at an early date. In a recent letter to the commission, Mr. Thompson stated that millions of gallons of buttermilk are going to waste in Iowa every year because the freight rates prohibit its shipment. He says that from fifteen to twenty million gallons of buttermilk are poured into the sewers at Sioux City annually. Mr. Thompson's idea is to establish a tank car rate for a short haul not to exceed two or three cents per hundred pounds. If such a rate were in force, Mr. Thompson argues, farmers would find the feeding of buttermilk to stock profitable, and would consume every gallon that is now wasted.

At present buttermilk is freightable under the fourth class rate, with no provision for carload shipments.

Lays Down Rules For Medics.

The state board of health, through Secretary Sumner, has made a rule that students in medical colleges who fail in their sophomore year must drop out of college and complete their preliminary work before they can continue the study of medicine in any Iowa medical college. The ruling will materially affect the welfare of many medical students who, when they fail the first year, take the same year's work over again, pass the examination, and go on with their course.

The ruling has been established as the result of a request from Drake University Medical college to the secretary to define the status of medical students who fail on their second year's examinations. One of the second year men who failed last June in the examinations is back again seeking to continue his work. Under the rule adopted by the board and Secretary Sumner, he cannot continue his studies.

To Get Around the Law.

A clever method of getting around the Iowa insurance law, which prohibits insurance policies to protect physicians, surgeons, dentists and druggists against suits for malpractice came to light when there was filed in the office of Secretary of State Hayward the articles of incorporation of the Physicians' and Dentists' Protective association, an Arizona corporation.

The corporation has a capital stock of $100,000, of which the sum of $1,000 is available for use in Iowa. The articles provide that the purpose of the corporation is to defend "physicians, dentists, surgeons and druggists when they are sued for damages for malpractice."

State Auditor Bleakly stated that his department is powerless to interfere, as there is no direct insurance clause in the articles of incorporation.

Warns Against Defective Flues.

"With the arrival of cool weather, people are starting fires in their stoves and furnaces," declared Fire Chief William Burnett. "They cannot be too careful about starting the first fires. They should examine the flues and see that they are not stopped up or that they have outlets. The majority of winter fires are caused by defective flues. In many cases the flue has been stopped up by a few bricks which have fallen from the chimney during the summer months. I have known cases where new tenants have connected the stove pipe with a 'dummy' flue. The result is that the house is set on fire. People are very careless in the building of flues. It is one of the most important things in building a house."

Carroll May Be President.

Governor Carroll, according to reports in the state house, will become president of a large Des Moines insurance company immediately upon retirement from his office as the chief executive of Iowa. The governor has kept up his interest in insurance matters ever since he retired as state auditor and is today considered one of the very best informed insurance men of the state.

The governor is out of the city and the report could not be confirmed. It is said that he and his business associates, who are among the most aggressive financiers of the city, will secure the control of one of the Des Moines companies.

Wants Into Iowa.

The Prudential Casualty company of Indianapolis, Ind., have asked State Auditor Bleakly for permission to sell insurance in Iowa. The capital stock of the concern amounts to $600,000.

SHIONABLE FRINGES

NILLE POPULAR FOR FALL HAT TRIMMING.

s, Pompons, Tassels and Ros- es Fashioned by the Clever Trimmer—"Rat-Tail" is the Prettiest and Best.

inges of all descriptions, and es- lly those of chenille, appear on ew fall hats as a trimming. The rness of trimmers has fashioned into plumes, pompons, cockades, ls and rosettes, and they are about the crowns as a finish. "rat-tail" fringe of chenille, like shown in the pictures, is the test and best liked. Narrow, flat, fringes are used to cover crowns sometimes entire shapes), laid after row over a silk foundation. tail fringes are shown in silver gilt fabrics, and merit a better than that given them, for they elegant, giving a hint of splendor illinery. The tinsel fringes are sparingly used than those of or chenille.

he two models shown here are in k and white, but may be had in r color combinations. Fig. 1 is y fine when developed in white adcloth with crown of black vel- , and trimming of white chenille ge. This shape may be bought in ght and in scratch felts, or in n felts. It comes in buckram, , ready for covering with silk or vet. It is high crowned, but not reme and is best suited to youth- faces.

he soft hat of black velvet shown Fig. 2 is a fine example of milli- y art; a new shape and becoming almost any face. The brim edge outlined with a piping of white in. The conical crown is made on ice-net foundation and is therefore pely but not hard, or rigid in out- . A band of white chenille fringe ished with a plume of the fringe de on a wire stem complete the del. These hats show the latest in fall millinery and besides this ntage are tasteful and practical. Good color combinations for these hats are blue with green, brown with black, brown with white, purple with silver, petunia with silver, grey with white, etc. The hats would be pretty also made up in two shades of one color.

TO SOOTHE NERVOUS PEOPLE

Decorations and Furniture of the Boudoir Should Have Harmonizing and Restful Effect.

The boudoir when furnishing can be anything that fancy dictates imagine it in blue tones—blues which are soft and blend one into the other in perfect harmony. There might be a blue carpet with touches of mauve woven into its pattern. That pinky mauve which goes so well with blue chintzes should be in colors of mauve and blue, and a white paper on which sweet peas are the note of color would harmonize well. With a couch and large, comfortable chairs, a bureau, a small table and a bookcase of satinwood or of inlaid mahogany the room would be luxuriously dainty and restful. Another boudoir where the deep chintz covered chairs and settee rests upon a white Bokhara carpet with notes of dim red and black is considered charming. The walls are of a warm sage green and the curtains and window seating of that shade of red which seems to have faded to a sober pinkness. There are shelves full of books and a table with a bowl of flowers. On the mantelpiece and china shelf there are curios from all over the world. A few photographs and old etchings adorn the walls. The woodwork is of deep chestnut. This boudoir achieves what a boudoir should always do, an expression of its owner.

Ideal Fabric.

Silk serge is one of the ideal fabrics for the all-around coat, and there is a new sort of crepe de chine with a thread or two of worsted in it that is to be reckoned with. Both are light of weight, very durable, come in a most satisfactory range of colors, and have sufficient body to afford protection from early fall breezes Lined and interlined, they will be used through the winter for dress coats and suits as well.

HANGE IN SILK FASHIONS

e Winter Will Find Women Wear- ing Gros-Grain of Their Grand- mothers' Days.

Dame Rumor whispers that there is be a change in silk fashions, and is winter will find women wearing gros-grain of their grandmothers' ye, and those women who can af- d them stiff brocades heavy with reads of gold and metal, such as re used long ago and revived for coronation. Worth, by the way, taken a great fancy to these fab- s and we may expect to find many his wonderful creations developed m these rare and beautiful mate- ls.

Ottoman silks, says the worthy me, will be used again, this time ncipally as collar facings and vers, cream white, deep yellow and onation red being the favorites in lor, any of which will be stunning th a navy or black serge suit.

Uncut velvets, too, so soft that they most resemble a ribbed silk, are pearing over the horizon. These in rls are called "velours epingles." Silks, velvets and velveteens, in fact, all the heavy old fashioned materials are in the foreground, so much so that one wonders if women are returning to the day of hair cloth and the fashionable ambition that one's gown must stand alone.

Venise a Big Seller.

Venise in the heavy raised point type, also the flatter varieties, is being used in every manner of design, says the Dry Goods Economist. Every period in the history of lace making appears to have been searched for patterns that are novel and beautiful. The increased demand for these handsome laces has given the real lace industry an impetus, and the workers, with the added experience they are acquiring, are able to produce better lace and in larger quantities.

A Smart Effect.

A girl with an assortment of jabots and frills should study the colors most becoming to her and fashion a number of odd tailor bows and knots of velvet and ribbon to pin at her throat as a sort of fastening for the neckwear.

Terrible Suffering

Eczema All Over Baby's Body.

"When my baby was four months old his face broke out with eczema and at sixteen months of age his face, hands and arms were in a dreadful state. The eczema spread all over his body. We had to put a mask or cloth over his face and tie up his hands. Finally we gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a few months he was entirely cured. Today he is a healthy boy." Mrs. Inez Lewis, Baring, Maine.

Hood's Sarsaparilla cures blood diseases and builds up the system.

To Farm on Copper Lands.

A party of Houghton capitalists have under consideration the establishment at a point on the Copper Range railroad south of Houghton of a 600-acre experimental farm. The lands have already been secured, but are at present heavily timbered.

Steps will be tken during the coming winter to cut the timber, and early next spring the stumps will be removed and the land made ready for cultivation. It is hardly probable that crops will be planted before 1913, but the enterprise when established will prove one of the biggest from an agricultural standpoint i nthe copper country.—Michigan Manufacturer.

PIMPLES ON FACE 3 YEARS

"I was troubled with acne for three long years. My face was the only part affected, but it caused great disfigurement, also suffering and loss of sleep. At first there appeared red, hard pimples which later contained white matter. I suffered a great deal caused by the itching. I was in a state of perplexity when walking the streets or anywhere before the public.

"I used pills and other remedies but they failed completely. I thought of giving up when nothing would help, but something told me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a Cuticura Booklet which I read carefully. Then I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and by following the directions I was relieved in a few days. I used Cuticura Soap for washing my face, and applied the Cuticura Ointment morning and evening. This treatment brought marvelous results so I continued with it for a few weeks and was cured completely. I can truthfully say that the Cuticura Remedies are not only all, but more than they claim to be." (Signed) G. Baumel, 1015 W. 20th Place, Chicago, Ill., May 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 28 K, Boston.

EVER TAKE A MUSIC BATH?

They Are as Good for the Soul, Holmes Says, as Water for the Body.

One must be educated, no doubt, to understand the more complex and difficult kinds of musical composition. Go to the concerts where you know that the music is good, and that you ought to like it whether you do or not. Take a music bath once or twice a week for a few seasons, and you will find that it is to the soul what the water bath is to the body. I wouldn't trouble myself about the affectations of people who go to this or that series of concerts chiefly because it is fashionable. Some of these people whom we think so silly will perhaps find, sooner or later, that they have a dormant faculty which is at last waking up, and that they who came because others came, and began by staring at the audience, are listening with a newly found delight. Everyone of us has a harp under the bodice or waistcoat, and if it can only once get properly strung and tuned it will respond to all outside harmonies.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WEAK?

There are two ways to tell if you have weak kidneys. The first is through pains in the back. The second by examining the kidney secretions. If you suspect your kidneys, begin using Doan's Kidney Pills at once. Mrs. J. L. Warrick, 406 W. Mulberry St., Lebanon, Ohio, says: "No tongue can tell the agonies I suffered. My feet and limbs were lifeless and there were weeks when I could not put my feet to the floor or stand alone. As a last resort, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. In six weeks I was as free from kidney trouble as if I had never had it."

CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Made Safe by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. Chas. Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing woman's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

Natick, Mass.—"I cannot express what I went through during the change of life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold, I had creepy sensations, and I could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I also had a tumor. I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it had worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. AVIATOR ELY KILLED

Loses Control of Biplane and Falls Fifty Feet to Death

LIVES ONLY A FEW MINUTES

Fatal Accident Occurs At Macon, Ga. In the Presence of Many Thousands Assembled at the State Fair Grounds.

Davenport.—Eugene Ely, Aviator, met death at the Georgia State Fair, Thursday afternoon, when his machine failed to rise from a sensational dip, and plunged fifty feet to the ground. The dead aviator is the son of N. D. Ely, a prominent Davenport attorney. He was born twenty-seven years ago near Williamsburg, Ia., and when a small boy came with his parents to this city. Here he attended the public schools. He became an expert chauffeur and auto mechanic.

Several years ago he went to California, and it was while on the Pacific coast that he learned aviation. He met a man who had bought an aeroplane and while endeavoring to learn to fly it had met with an accident which partly demolished the machine.

Young Ely then bargained for it, and, after securing possession, he repaired it and soon became master of the art of flying. His skill soon gained the attention of Glenn Curtiss. He was taken under his management and has been flying for him ever since.

Ely gave an exhibition in this city two weeks ago. His flights in the air at that time bordered on the marvelous. As Aviator Walsh watched his work, the latter remarked: "Ely cannot keep that work up long," meaning he would sooner or later be killed by reason of his daring.

Since taking up aviation Ely is reputed to have acquired a comfortable fortune.

GIVEN UP TO DIE.

Cured By Doan's Kidney Pills After Doctors Gave Up Hope.

J. L. Richardson, Red Key, Ind., says: "For five months I was confined to my bed, a helpless invalid. I almost went crazy. Twenty-five hours passed without a passage of the urine. The doctors began to take the water from me with a catheter. They did this once a day for fifty days. Finally my doctor told me my time was up. The next day a friend advised me to take Doan's Kidney Pills. When I had used five boxes, I got out of bed and improved until entirely well. For five years I have not had the slightest trouble."

...ariety Actor Tackles Second Grave-digger in Hamlet and Steals All the Laughs.

A company playing "Hamlet" was ...ced to find an actor to play the Second Gravedigger on account of the ...illness of the second comedian of the ...ompany. The only actor available ...was a variety performer, who had no ...reverence for Shakespeare and no respect for the traditions of the classic drama. The Second Gravedigger was a comedy part, and he knew that he could "get away with it."

When the First Gravedigger threw off the first waistcoat, revealing another underneath, the audience tittered. The removal of the second waistcoat brought a loud laugh, and the third produced a roar. The First Gravedigger was delighted. He had never played to such an appreciative audience, and visions of good notices in the papers and a possible increase in salary began to loom up before his eyes. As he threw off the fourth waistcoat he turned partly around, and the cause of the unusual hit was disclosed to him.

The Second Gravedigger, being accustomed to build laughs on lines and business of other actors, saw his opportunity and seized it. As fast as the First Gravedigger would throw the waistcoats on the ground, the variety comedian would pick them up and put them on. The new business was much funnier to the audience than the old, with which it was thoroughly familiar.

Not content with having stolen the laughs from the regular comedian in this scene, the new man went further. When the First Gravedigger said to him, "Go, get thee to Yaughan; fetch me a stoup of liquor" (to which there is no reply in the text), the assistant sexton replied:

"Yaughan told me to tell you that you couldn't have any more liquor from him 'til you paid for the last you got."—The Bookman.

SHIFT

If Your Food Fails to Sustain You, Change.

One sort of diet may make a person despondent, depressed and blue and a change to the kind of food the body demands will change the whole thing.

A young woman from Phila. says:

"For several years I kept in a run-down, miserable sort of condition, was depressed and apprehensive of trouble. I lost flesh in a distressing way and seemed in a perpetual sort of dreamy nightmare. No one serious disease showed, but the 'all-over' sickness was enough.

"Finally, between the doctor and father, I was put on Grape-Nuts and cream, as it was decided I must have a nourishing food that the body could make use of.

"The wonderful change that came over me was not, like Jonah's gourd, the growth of a single night, yet it came with a rapidity that astonished me.

"During the first week I gained in weight, my spirits improved, and the world began to look brighter and more worth while.

"And this has continued steadily, till now, after the use of Grape-Nuts for only a few weeks, I am perfectly well, feel splendidly, take a lively interest in everything, and am a changed person in every way." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

FIRE PREVENTION

First Observance of Its Kind In This State November 1

WASTE $250,000,000 YEARLY

Buildings Costing That Large Amount Burn Annually Owing To the People's Lack of Knowledge of Preventing Fires.

Des Moines.—November 1 will be "Fire Prevention Day" throughout Iowa, and will be the first in this state.

The movement was officially started by Governor Carroll. The day bids fair to prove of inestimable value to the state of Iowa as the years pass and the people come to realize the value of setting aside one day of the year when they shall give their attention to the matter of fire prevention.

For some unaccountable reason the people have this year failed to show much enthusiasm for the observance of the day, although the governor officially set aside November 1 as "Fire Prevention Day." The mayors of very few of the cities of the state, not over four at the outside, have taken any official notice of the proclamation. Even in Des Moines the mayor, up to the first of last week, had taken no steps looking to the observance of the day in this city.

That fire prevention day should be observed no one can deny. If the people of Iowa can, by the observance of one day in the year, cut down the fire losses in this state, even for a small amount, that day, it is argued cannot be accounted as lost in the great battle which is being waged to reduce the enormous fire losses of the United States, which amount to more in this country than in the balance of the civilized world combined. The annual fire waste in this country is $250,000,000, a large part of which could be saved if the people would give some scientific attention to the work of preventing fire losses.

Have Good Idea For Law.

"The Iowa State Association of Police Chiefs will ask the next legislature to pass a law making it a felony to carry concealed weapons," declared Chief of Police Geo. Yeager, of Des Moines. Chief Yeager returned from Waterloo, where he attended the chief's convention. He is author of the new bill which will be presented to the next legislature. "The police chiefs will also ask the legislature to pass a bill which requires a record to be kept of each weapon sold, for what use, and the name and description of the purchaser. This would be invaluable to police officers in running down murderers and other criminals. In case of a murder nowadays, the police may find the revolver or other deadly weapon near the scene. This is the only clew to the murderer. With a record kept of each firearm and the name and description of the owner it would be easy to run down the criminal. Iowa laws are lax in the carrying of concealed weapons. If it were a felony to carry firearms few men would carry guns. The number of murders and suicides would be cut to a minimum. People who were required to carry guns, such as janitors and watchmen, could be sworn in as special police officers."

Conditions Ripe For Typhoid.

Secretary Sumner of the state board of health has issued a warning to the people of the city and state to watch their water and milk at this season of the year in order to prevent typhoid fever. There are several cases of the disease near the state fair grounds, which he believes to have been caused by the water from wells. "The exceptionally dry summer followed by the heavy fall rains which have washed the surface matter on the earth into wells and reservoirs, have brought ideal conditions for an epidemic of typhoid fever this fall," said the secretary. "I want to warn the people to carefully watch their milk and to boil the water, as there is grave danger, because of the conditions I have outlined, that typhoid fever epidemics will break out in almost any part of the state."

Carroll Aspires To Cummins' Seat.

Governor Carroll will be a candidate for the senate against Senator Cummins, according to political talk at the capitol. There has been much speculation as to what Governor Carroll will do after the expiration of his term of office. Inasmuch as C. C. Pugh, a close friend of Governor Carroll, has intimated in his newspaper correspondence that the governor intends running for the senate, the report is taken seriously by state politicians

WANT TRIAL POSTPONED

Liquor Dealers Ask Supreme Court For Delay Of Action Attacking Their Right To Operate.

Des Moines.—The liquor dealer interests of Des Moines through their attorneys have filed a motion with the supreme court asking that the hearing on the question of the operation of saloons during the trying out of consent petitions be set for Nov. 14 in place of Oct. 26, the date set on the docket.

The Iowa Amendment association which brings the case in the supreme court to test the right of saloons to do business between the period of expiration of consent petition and decision in court, has agreed that the case be heard on the later date. The attorneys claim that they have not had time to prepare arguments in defense.

If the high court of the state rules in favor of the Iowa Amendment association, the saloons in Des Moines and Valley Junction will have to close their doors until a decision on the legal sufficiency of the consent petitions circulated in these two cities is handed down by the supreme court. The five year time limit on consent petitions in the state expired on July 1 of this year. According to law the petitions asking for renewal of consent were circulated and are now being contested by the temperance forces in the district court. The Iowa Amendment association argues that the saloons have no legal right to operate following expiration of consent and before decision on validity of last consent petition.

State After Church Insurance.

The state insurance department has announced that any representative of the National Mutual Church Insurance company of Chicago found soliciting business in Iowa may be placed under arrest. The decision to make this drastic warning is the first move on the part of the state insurance department to put a stop to contraband insurance business in Iowa.

A statement outlining the position of the department has been issued. It reads: "The National Mutual Church Insurance company of Chicago, claiming to be the official Methodist Mutual, is sending circulars into Iowa soliciting insurance on church property. This company is not licensed to write insurance in Iowa, could not be and their representative will be subjected to arrest. Their circulars explain his absence from the state by saying that the company transacts all its business at the home office in Chicago instead of in the states and territories where the churches are located." The state law says that no suit can be maintained in any Iowa court upon an insurance contract where the company, association or individual writing the insurance has not been licensed to sell insurance in Iowa.

Tighten Up On Would-Be Druggists.

Radical changes in the methods of conducting their state examinations has been announced by members of the state pharmacy commission. The changes affect the equipment for taking the examinations and the marks which shall be attained to register for the examination. Hereafter if the executive council will stand for the necessary expense, the state pharmacy commission will have the equipment necessary to give those who take the state pharmacy examinations a practical chance to fill prescriptions. This will be a part of the examination as much as answering questions. "Every state which is keeping step with the times has the equipment to give those taking the examinations as much as answering tions as part of the examination," said Commissioner Clements. "We shall ask the state to give us the proper equipment and to have it ready, if possible, before the next quarterly examination. We have also adopted the oral examination system which is used with the written examination. It works excellently."

To Stand Behind Suit.

The League of Iowa Municipalities at their Davenport meeting indorsed the suit commenced by secretary Pierce to require the state executive council to comply with the Iowa law regarding keeping of records as municipal officers are required to do. The municipalities and commercial clubs of Iowa will bear the expenses of the suit.

The league decided to meet next year in Sioux City. It adjourned after electing officers as follows: President, Mayor A. C. Mueller, or Davenport; vice president, Mayor K. A. Scharles, of Le Mars; secretary and treasurer, Frank C. Pierce of Marshalltown.

If You Have a Sickly Youngster Try This Free

The family with young children that is without sickness in the house now and then is rare, and so it is important that the head of the house should know what to do in the little emergencies that arise. A child with a serious ailment needs a doctor, it is true, but in the majority of instances, as any doctor knows, the child suffers from some intestinal trouble, usually constipation.

There is no sense in giving it a pill or a remedy containing an opiate, nor is flushing of the bowels to be always recommended. Rather give it a small dose of a mild, gentle laxative, tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which, by cleaning out the bowels and strengthening the little stomach muscles, will immediately correct the trouble.

This is not alone our opinion but that of Mrs. N. H. Mead of Freeport, Kans., whose granddaughter has been taking it successfully and of Mrs. J. R. Whiting of Lena, Wis., who gives it to her children and takes it herself. It is sold in fifty cent and one dollar bottles at every drug store, but if you want to test it in your family before you buy it send your address to Dr. Caldwell and he will forward a supply free of charge.

OBITUARY

And still another of our respected citizens has been called by the Death Angel. The final summons came to Carl Griffen last Thursday, October 19th. He had been sick for some time, nevertheless his death was unexpected and came as a severe shock to the relatives and his many friends. Dropsy was the cause of his death.

Mr. Griffen was a good neighbor, a kiud husband and father, an upright and honorable citizen, and his passing will be sincerely mourned.

Carl Griffen was born at Fala Province Hanover, Germany, on June 10, 1845; died October 19, 1911, aged 66 years, 4 months and 9 days. He emigrated to Giard, Clayton county, Iowa, in 1872 and on January 11, 1876, was married to Hannah Topel, who died while they lived in Oregon. He was married to Caroline Knocke in 1889, then making his residence in Hancock county, Iowa. He identified himself with the Methodist Episcopal church in his youth. He loved God and His people; was an inspiration to the minister in giving close attention during the service. His sickness gave him considerable unrest, but he bore it all patiently. He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife, three daughters, two sons and one step-son, many grandchildren, one brother and one sister living in Germantown, also several brothers and sisters in Germany.

Funeral services were held at Germantown German Methodist church conducted by the pastor, H. W. Schneider, assisted by Rev. G. Haefner.

NEW IOWA RAILWAY

Dubuque and Delaware Counties To Be Benefited

RESIDENTS PUSH THE DEAL

Citizens of Communities To Be Benefited Provide the Money To Push the Work of Building.

Dubuque, Oct. 23.—If plans which are not only under way but are well developed materialize, the region about Colesburg and Luxemburg will echo the whistle of a locomotive within a short time.

The railway project which has been in process for the past several weeks is taking definite form, and if enthusiasm among the people of the communities directly interested and those of the immediate surrounding territory may be accepted as a forecast of results the success of the proposition already is assured.

The acquisition of a railway is no new idea with the communities of northwestern Dubuque and northeastern Delaware counties. No less than three distinct projects have been before them. Each in turn has fallen through, due to a variety of reasons, but principally because on the crucial test the promotion end of the enterprise failed to make good.

There is a new deal back of the present affair. There is no promotion stock, no scheme to swing the money end of it through Wall street exploitation. It is a plain case of the community to be benefited by the line paying for the road and receiving in return the manifold advantages accruing from its presence.

LARGE FARM CHANGES HANDS

Seventeen Hundred and Forty Acres of Farm Land In One Body Is Sold at Advanced Price.

Ida Grove, Oct. 23.—A deal was recently consummated in the purchase of the famous Barlow ranch, nine miles south of Sioux City, by Alvern Wendel, a neighboring farmer. This tract consists of 1,740 acres and the price paid was $156,600, or $90 per acre. Mr. Wendel, who lives on an adjoining farm of 1,000 acres, purchased the farm of C. L. Voss, of Denison, who bought it of the Capt. H. A. Barlow estate eighteen months ago for $65 an acre. On the Barlow ranch is a fine residence, erected years ago by Captain Barlow, a wealthy Englishman, at a cost of about $20,000.

YIELD FOUR TONS PER ACRE

Dry Weather Seems To Have Been Very Satisfactory To Alfalfa Field In Story County.

Story City, Oct. 23.—M. O. Marvick has finished harvesting his fourth crop of alfalfa this year. The dry weather of the past summer seems to have been strictly to the liking of Marvick's alfalfa field. When everything in the ordinary grass line looked seared and yellow, the alfalfa loomed up greener and juicier than ever. The four-acre field looked like a veritable oasis in a barren desert. The four cuttings have averaged about a ton to the acre each, making something like sixteen tons of fine hay from the little field.

ROBINS STARTS MOVEMENT

Plans Being Made For Big Parade of Men On Tuesday Night.

Cedar Rapids, Oct. 23.—Before one of the largest crowds of men ever gathered at a religious meeting in Cedar Rapids, Raymond Robins of Chicago, expert on social service, fired the opening gun of the Men and Religion Forward Movement campaign. Rev. John Marquis, president of Coe college, presided. Great plans are being made for a big parade Tuesday night, which will be one of the features of the eight-day religious convention.

MASON CITY PAVING IS DONE

Thirty-one Blocks of Cement Pavement Was Laid By Iowa City During Past Season.

Mason City, Oct. 23.—A total of thirty-one blocks of pavement, all of it cement, was laid by the city this season. With half a block of cement yet to be laid the entire contract made last winter will be completed, the first time in the history of local street paving work that contracts have been finished within the time specified. The city now has 110 blocks of pavement of a little more than six and one-quarter miles.

NEXT TUESDAY NOVEMBER 7

Have you money enough to buy a farm at $150 to $200 per acre in the Corn Belt? If so, would you invest at these prevailing prices, considering that mortgages there are yielding a better rate of interest than the farms are earning on their high valuations? You no doubt would prefer cheaper land that would produce as much, or the same priced land that would produce more, or even higher-priced land provided it would earn two or three times as much. You wouldn't go farming on $200 land in Iowa or Illinois with the expectation of being able to make it pay for itself, would you?

If you haven't $8,000 with which to buy a 40-acre Corn Belt Farm, but have $640 to buy a 40-acre Fruit Belt Farm which, with the little additional expense of preparation in clearing, will produce as many dollars in most all of the staple crops, it would be a good purchase, wouldn't it? And when your Fruit Belt Farm is developed in fruit and earns twice, thrice, and even four times as much as the Corn Belt Farm does in corn, then it becomes a remarkably good investment, doesn't it?

That Fruit Belt Farm is to be had in the Swigart Tract in Mason, Manistee and Lake Counties, Michigan. If you really want it, you had better be doing something about it while the opportunity lasts. A crop or two of potatoes will give back to you the cost of the land. Farmers already there are doing it. If you are coming to Chicago, call in, get acquainted, and see samples of the crops. Or drop a postcard and I will send you literature. Any letter you write I will answer fully and promptly.

If a man's ambition for getting land amounts to as much as the small railroad fare for the short trip, and a couple of days' time investigating, then we are willing to put our time against his, furnish teams and guides free, and drive with him as long as he likes over thousands of acres, including some fine tracts recently added. 5 per cent. discount for all cash or terms as low as $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 per month on 40 acres. Payments annually, if preferred. Price now $10 to $35 per acre and much of the land $16 per acre.

Next Tuesday, November 7, an excursion will leave Swigart's Chicago offices at 11:00 A. M. A special Pullman car will be attached to the Pere Marquette train for the exclusive use of our excursionists; no extra charge. You can be back in Chicago at 7 A. M. Thursday or Friday following, being absent only one or two days, as you prefer, or stay as long as you wish. $6 round trip from Chicago; fare rebated on your purchase. Good accommodations for both men and women at Michigan headquarters. Drop me a postal you are coming.

A day or two spent on the ground itself, and you will know more than from a great deal of reading. Now is a good time to go and see the lands. Come and verify your judgment. The hour is ripe for action. Delays never did anybody any good. GEORGE K. SWIGART, Owner, 1248-49-50, First National Bank Bldg., Corner Dearborn and Monroe Streets, Chicago.

March of Miles Standish

hile the stalwart Miles Standish was marching steadily north-through forest and swamp, along the trend of the sea-long, with hardly a halt, the of his anger and crackling within, and the lurous odor of powder more sweet to his nostrils all the scents of the forest.

d moody he went, and much volved his discomfort;
was used to success, and to victories always,
be flouted, rejected, and ed to scorn by a maiden, be mocked and betrayed by friend whom most he had ed!
too much to be borne, and fretted and chafed in his r!

e am to blame," he muttered, mine was the folly.
s a rough old soldier, grown and gray in the harness, the camp and its ways, to do the wooing of maidens?
ot a dream,—let it pass,—let anish like so many others!
thought was a flower, is only eed, and is worthless;
my heart will I pluck it, and w it away, and henceforward fighter of battles, a lover and er of dangers!"
e revolved in his mind his y defeat and discomfort, e was marching by day or ly- at night in the forest, up at the trees, and the con- lations beyond them.

a three days' march he came n Indian encampment on the edge of a meadow, be- en the sea and the forest;
at work by the tents, and the rriors, horrid with war-paint, about a fire, and smoking and king together;
hen they saw from afar the den approach of the white e, e flash of the sun on breast- and saber and musket,

Forth He Sprang at a Bound.

tway leaped to their feet, and o, from among them advancing, to parley with Standish, and er him furs as a present;
dship was in their looks, but in eir hearts there was hatred.
s of the tribe were these, and brothers gigantic in stature, as Goliath of Gath, or the ter- rible Og, king of Bashan; was Pecksuot named, and the other was called Wattawamat.
their necks were suspended their knives in scabbards of wampum,
Two-edged, trenchant knives, with points as sharp as a needle.
Other arms had they none, for they were cunning and crafty.
"Welcome, English!" they said,—these words they had learned from the traders Touching at times on the coast, to barter and chaffer for peltries.
Then in their native tongue they began to parley with Standish,
Through his guide and interpreter, Hobomok, friend of the white man,
Begging for blankets and knives, but mostly for muskets and powder,
Kept by the white man, they said, concealed, with the plague, in his cellars,
Ready to be let loose, and destroy his brother, the red man!
But when Standish refused, and said he would give them the Bible, Plunged It Into His Heart.

Suddenly changing their tone, they began to boast and to bluster.
Then Wattawamat advanced with a stride in front of the other,
And, with a lofty demeanor, thus vauntingly spake to the Captain:
"Now Wattawamat can see, by the fiery eyes of the Captain,
Angry is he in his heart; but the heart of the brave Wattawamat
Is not afraid at the sight. He was not born of a woman.
But on a mountain, at night, from an oak-tree riven by lightning,
Forth he sprang at a bound, with all his weapons about him,
Shouting, 'Who is there here to fight with the brave Wattawamat?'"
Then he unsheathed his knife, and, whetting the blade on his left hand, Held it aloft and displayed a woman's face on the handle,
Saying, with bitter expression and look of sinister meaning:
"I have another at home, with the face of a man on the handle;
By and by they shall marry; and there will be plenty of children!"

Then stood Pecksuot forth, self-vaunting, insulting Miles Standish;
While with his fingers he patted the knife that hung at his bosom,
Drawing it half from its sheath, and plunging it back, as he muttered:
"By and by it shall see; it shall eat; ah, ah! but shall speak not!
This is the mighty Captain the white men have sent to destroy us!
He is a little man; let him go and work with the women!"

Meanwhile Standish had noted the faces and figures of Indians
Peeping and creeping about from bush to tree in the forest,
Feigning to look for game, with arrows set on their bow-strings,
Drawing about him still closer and closer the net of their ambush.
But undaunted he stood, and dissembled and treated them smoothly;
So the old chronicles say, that were writ in the days of the fathers.
But when he heard their defiance, the boast, the taunt, and the insult,
All the hot blood of his race, of Sir Hugh and of Thurston de Standish, Boiled and beat in his heart, and swelled in the veins of his temples.
Headlong he leaped on the boaster, and, snatching his knife from its scabbard Plunged it into his heart, and, reeling backward, the savage Fell with his face to the sky, and a fiendlike fierceness upon it.
Straight there arose from the forest the awful sound of the war-whoop,
And, like a flurry of snow on the whistling wind of December,
Swift and sudden and keen came a flight of feathery arrows.
Then came a cloud of smoke, and out of the cloud came the lightning,
Out of the lightning, thunder; and death unseen ran before it.
Frightened the savages fled for shelter in swamp and in thicket,
Hotly pursued and beset; but their sachem, the brave Wattawamat, Fled not; he was dead. Unswerving and swift had a bullet
Passed through his brain, and he fell with both hands clutching the greensward Seeming in death to hold back from his foe the land of his fathers.

There on the flowers of the meadow the warriors lay, and above them, Silent, with folded arms, stood Hobomok, friend of the white man.
Smiling, at length he exclaimed to the stalwart Captain of Plymouth:
"Pecksuot bragged very loud, of his courage, his strength and his stature,— Mocked the great Captain, and called him a little man; but I see now Big enough have you been to lay him speechless before you!"

Thus the first battle was fought and won by the stalwart Miles Standish.
When the tidings thereof were brought to the village of Plymouth,
And as a trophy of war the head of the brave Wattawamat
Scowled from the roof of the fort, which at once was a church and a fortress,
All who beheld it rejoiced, and praised the Lord, and took courage.
Only Priscilla averted her face from this specter of terror,
Thanking God in her heart that she had not married Miles Standish;
Shrinking, fearing almost, lest, coming home from his battles,
He should lay claim to her hand, as the prize and reward of his valor.

BIGGEST CITIES OF WORLD

London Still Far In Lead, but New York Is Growing Faster Than Any Other.

London, the largest city in the world, has a population, as now officially announced, of 7,252,963, as against 6,581,402 in 1901—an increase in ten years of 671,561, or only 10.2 per cent. The population of New York is 4,766,883, and with a gain in the ten years of 38.7 per cent., is growing faster than any other great city in the world. At the rate at which the two largest cities are growing it will take a long time for New York to catch up with London; but it would be a great misfortune if it ever did catch up—there is too much congestion in New York already. The third city in size is Paris, whose population is probably 3,000,000. The fourth city is perhaps Berlin, which had a little over 2,000,000 five years ago. Tokyo and Chicago fall a little under the 2,500,000 mark, and St. Petersburg, Vienna, Canton, Peking, Moscow and Philadelphia are below 2,000,000.—Rochester Post-Express.

Great Saving of Time.

The manager of one of the electric light companies of the western part of the country has greatly facilitated the business of making the monthly readings of meters by having these instruments placed on the rear porches of houses instead of in the cellars. About half of the meters of this company are now located in some convenient and protected place in the rear of the house, where it is always accessible without regard to the presence or absence of the inmates of the house. The result is that the average time formerly consumed by the inspector has been cut about in half.

PAPER BAG COOKERY

VEGETABLES COOKED IN THIS MANNER ARE DELICIOUS.

Combines the Advantages of Baking and Boiling—Delights of New Method Are Many, But It Has Limitations.

The Soyer method of paper bag cookery is never better than when applied to fresh vegetables. A great many vegetables are better when baked in the oven than when cooked in water on the top of the stove, because the juices are better preserved. But the one great objection to baking a vegetable has been the fact that it is likely to grow dry with cooking and acquire a hard crust over the surface. When inclosed in a paper bag the moisture arising from it as it cooks forms an envelope of steam around it and keeps it from drying. The steam cannot escape while inclosed in the bag.

Beets are delicious, cooked in this way, if the oven is hot and they are allowed plenty of time to bake. None of their juices and flavor is lost as in boiling, but when done they are perfectly tender and their skins can be as easily slipped off as when they have been boiled. Very young carrots have a most delicious flavor when baked in one of these cooking bags, a flavor that is quite foreign to the when the are boiled in water. Tomatoes cooked in paper bags are also delicious. They taste much like the boiled ones, but are better, and retain their shape perfectly. If sealed up tight and placed on a grid shelf none of their juices will escape from the bag.

New potatoes baked in bags are without a dry, hard crust, the skin being so tender it can be pulled off with the hand, but many people will prefer to bake potatoes in the old way, as when cooked in the steam filled bag they are too much like boiled potatoes. They lack something of the nutty flavor of the ordinary baked tuber.

Kohlrabi when cooked in this way does not give forth its cabbage-like odor as when boiled, but it is not improved in flavor.

If the summer cottage does not furnish a stove with good broiling facilities, and a porterhouse steak is wanted for dinner, try baking it in a paper cooking bag in the oven. The juices of the meat will be retained and form a delicious gravy, which will not soak through the paper as might be supposed if it is placed upon a grid shelf, where the hot air of the oven can circulate under it as well as over it. It makes a very nice change from broiling, too, as the flavor is different. For ordinary occasions, however, many people will prefer the broiled steak, in spite of the fact that some of the juices are lost in the fire. M. Soyer allows about fifteen or twenty minutes to cook a steak in a paper bag.

The delights of paper bag cooking are many. To the weary housekeeper the best of all is the fact that it alleviates to some extent the burden completely, as writers in search of a sensation would have one believe. The originator of the idea does not assure the housewife of any such good luck. Soups, omelettes and similar egg dishes, the homely cabbage, with some of its relatives; jams, except in limited quantities, and all pasties, such as macaroni, are baked by M. Soyer from this novel method of cookery.

Economy Jelly.

Prepare fruit in the ordinary way, put through the jelly bag; put juice on and boil without adding sugar; can as you would any fruit, having jars or bottles hot; any time during the winter when sugar is cheaper open jars and make your jelly in from eight to fifteen minutes.

Stuffed Rolled Roast.

Wipe two pounds steak, cut from the round, three-fourths of an inch in thickness. Spread with stuffing prepared with one and one-half cupfuls cracker crumbs, one-fourth cupful butter, melted, one-half cupful boiling water, salt, pepper and sage. Roll, fasten and bake 45 minutes.

Summer Squash Fried.

Slice the squash, dip in beaten egg, season well with pepper and salt, roll in flour and fry in hot butter or lard. Choose a squash with a tender skin.

Bran for Matting.

Instead of salt water some housewives use bran for cleaning matting. A bag of cheesecloth is filled with bran; this is moistened from time to time, and the matting scrubbed with it. After the bran wash the matting is wiped off with a fresh cloth dipped in salt water.

To Remove Scorch.

Wet starch to form a paste, cover the scorched place and put in the sun to dry; if badly scorched, repeat and it will soon disappear.

SKIN AFFECTIONS ARE OFTEN CONTAGIOUS

How to Prevent Them.

The skin and its millions of pores are open to every form of contagion, from the accidental cut, sore, scald or burn, or the appearance of boils, carbuncles or felons, to the more serious diseases of the skin. It is not necessary to more than suggest that every family and every one, carry, ready for immediate use, the world's great standard skin remedy—Resinol Ointment. This ointment, indorsed and recommended by thousands of physicians, nurses and experts, remains the standard of standards. It is scientifically compounded from natural ingredients, each one, and all together, particularly adapted to the skin. It is put up in screw-top opal containers, selling for fifty cents and a dollar, according to size. Resinol Ointment is as easy to apply as cold cream. It is utterly impossible for it to harm the most delicate skin, for it contains only the highest grade of remedial agents, without even a trace of mercury or lead, or any other poison. The ointment is sold by all druggists. Sample sent free if you will mention Department No. 51. Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

An Unbeliever.

"Sir," said the haughty American to his adhesive tailor, "I object to this boorish dunning. I would have you know that my great-great-grandfather was one of the early settlers."

"And yet," sighed the anxious tradesman, "there are people who believe in heredity."—Argonaut.

Successful Economy In Baking.

Most housewives assume when they buy a big can of baking powder at a low price that they have been economical. They have to a slight extent—but when they use that cheap "big can" baking powder, and find it so uneven in quality, or so unreliable that the baking falls, there isn't so much economy in it after all, for the wasted materials far outweigh the few cents saved in the price.

SUCCESSFUL economy, is in the reach of every woman that desires it. She has only to order Calumet Baking Powder, and use it according to instructions. Then, she will achieve economy. For not only does Calumet sell at a reasonable price—25c per pound—but it is so carefully made by experienced chemists that failure is impossible. Only the best materials are used and the proportions of the ingredients are so exact and so uniform that EVERY baking comes from the oven, light, sweet, and beautifully raised. Calumet guarantees you against failure, and that is what constitutes real economy in baking.

Why not use Calumet, a baking powder that you can always rely upon? You can get no better at any price, for at the World's Pure Food Exposition, Calumet received the Highest Award.

Not If He Knew It.

"That's a nice little game you played on that girl in not showing up at the church when you were to be married to her."

"Well, it wasn't a tie game."

ALMOST CRAZY WITH ECZEMA

"I, the undersigned, cannot give enough praise to the Cuticura Remedies. I had been doctoring for at least a year for eczema on my foot. I had tried doctor after doctor all to no avail. When a young girl I sprained my ankle three different times, paying little or no attention to it, when five years ago a small spot showed upon my left ankle. I was worried and sent for a doctor. He said it was eczema. He drew a small bone from the ankle about the size of a match and about an inch long. The small hole grew to about the size of an apple, and the eczema spread to the knee. The doctors never could heal the hole in the ankle. The whole foot ran water all the time.

"My husband and my sons were up night and day wheeling me from one room to another in the hope of giving me some relief. I would sit for hours at a time in front of the fireplace hoping for daybreak. The pain was so intense I was almost crazy, in fact, I would lose my reason for hours at a time. One day a friend of mine dropped in to see me. No more had she glanced at my foot than she exclaimed: 'Mrs. Finnegan, why in the world don't you try the Cuticura Remedies!' Being disgusted with the doctors and their medicines, and not being able to sleep at all, I decided to give the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment a trial. After using them three days that night I slept as sound as a silver dollar for eight long hours. I awoke in the morning with but very little pain, in fact, I thought I was in heaven. After using the Cuticura Remedies for three months I was perfectly restored to health, thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I will be sixty-four years of age my next birthday, hale and hearty at present." (Signed) Mrs. Julia Finnegan, 2234 Hebert St., St. Louis, Mo., Mar. 7, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 12 K, Boston.

Bank Change at Kanawha

A deal was closed last week which takes away one of Kanawha's pioneer families and effects a change in banking circles. Mr. Geo. W. Mason has sold the majority of his bank stock, also his fine residence, to Mr. Neil Hanson, of Thor, Iowa. Mr. Hanson will move here and will take an active part in the affairs of the bank. The change will take place about December 1st. Mr. Mason's plans for the future are not matured, except that he will probably locate in a western or coast state.—Kanawha Record.

There is little danger from a cold or from an attack of the grip except when followed by pneumonia, and this never happens when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. This remedy has won its great reputation and extensive sale by its remarkable cures of colds and grip and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. For sale by all dealers.

New Express Rates

The shippers of Iowa who make use of the express companies are reminded by Attorney General Cosson that on the first day of November the new express rates went into effect in Iowa. Shippers should insist upon having the new rates instead of the old in all cases where the shipment is entirely within the state. The reduction in rates amounts to about six per cent, but in many cases it will be found the reduction is much more than that. The companies will have schedules on file as required by the order of the railroad commission made last year.

"I do not believe there is any other medicine so good for whooping cough as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," writes Mrs. Francis Turpin, Junction City, Ore. This remedy is also unsurpassed for colds and croup. For sale by all dealers.

Board Would Tour State With Experts of National Repute

DR. WILEY WILL BE INVITED

Health Board Is Planning a Special Train, Carrying Number of Experts of National Reputation, to Teach Health Measures.

Des Moines.—National sanitarians, food experts and animal experts will accompany a monster state health train which is to traverse Iowa in the interest of public health, if plans to be submitted to the state board of health are carried out.

It is planned to have a dairy car, a public health car and an animal husbandry car. The dairy department will try to get Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, head of the national pure food department; the veterinary department will try to get A. D. Malvin, head of the national bureau of animal husbandry, and the state board of health will try to secure the services of Dr. Evans, former health commissioner of Chicago, for the train. These three men will give lectures in various towns. The train will be run on the plan of the corn and dairy specials which have gone out from Des Moines in the past.

The state board of health will meet this week to take up the proposition. It is planned to raise the money with which to defray the expenses by popular subscription. If it is possible to get the money the train will be sent out. An effort will be made to have Dr. Oscar Dowling of Louisiana accompany the train. He ran a similar trin over that state and practically cleaned up the state from a public standpoint.

One Way to Cut Prices.

A new scheme for reducing the cost of living is the Co-operative Meat company, the articles of incorporation for which were recently filed with the secretary of state. The proposition of the incorporators is a simple one. When the store is opened for business the housewife who goes there for her daily meat supply will sign for a five or ten dollar certificate, as she thinks best. When she has traded out five dollars worth, for instance, her bill is footed up, five per cent is deducted from it and she pays the balance of the bill. If she signs for a ten dollar certificate she gets ten per cent discount.

The promoters of the proposition promise that if they can get 300 customers who will take either the five or the ten dollar certificates, thus agreeing in advance to buy five or ten dollars worth of meat, that they will begin killing their own meat. They promise that when they kill their own meat they will reduce the price from three to five cents per pound, besides giving each certificate holder the five or ten per cent discount, according to the value of the certificate.

Patents To Iowans.

The following patents have just been issued to residents of Iowa: Jno. H. Stewart and J. M. Schenk, assignors to The Cement Tile Machinery company, Waterloo, formerhead for the machines; Charles C. Young, Des Moines, obstetrical forceps; Russell Hatten, State Center, combined cranking and power shaft; Edgerly R. Bailey Clarinda, centrifugal separator; Albert E. Beall and C. F. Sielenger, Clinton, assignors to Iowa Motor Wheel company, vehicle wheel; Theodore Doll, Nora Springs, furniture caster; Franklin P. Gable and A. C. Buttman, Grandview, horse detaching device; Thomas F. Grady, Dubuque, flue expander and beader; Christie McMillen, Perry, calk former William Morrison, Des Moines, assignor to Vesta Accumulator company, Chicago, binoxid-of-hydrogen electrodes.

Hospital Expense Going Up.

The average cost per capita for the care of inmates at the fourteen institutions under the jurisdiction of the state board of control was higher last month than for some time past, according to statistics compiled for the department. The average cost was 62 cents per capita. In March last the cost per capita was 60 cents, while a year ago it was 50 cents.

New Iowa Corporations.

First National Securities and Savings corporation, Denver; capital stock, $1,000,000; for use in Iowa, $30,000.

Palmquist Drug and Jewelry company, Hartley; capital stock, $10,000.

Auto Engine and Supply company, Fort Madison; capital stock, $30,000.

Carroll Is Inspecting.

Governor Carroll has begun his annual inspection of state institutions. He is at Clarinda, where he is making an inspection of the state insane hospital. He will slip quietly out to the various institutions from time to time during the winter.

HORTICULTURAL REPORT OUT

Use of the Orchard Heater Discussed Also Discussion of Everbearing Strawberry Is Included.

Des Moines.—The edition of the annual report of the Iowa State Historical society for the year 1910 has been received at the office of Wesley Greene, state horticulturist, from the state printer.

The book contains the proceedings of the last convention of the horticultural society and also the transactions of all auxiliary societies.

Considerable space is given in the book to a discussion of the use of heaters in orchards to prevent the destruction of fruit crops by frost. Many kinds of heaters are explained and their use urged upon all fruit growers in Iowa.

An extensive discussion of the everbearing strawberry is also included. The horticulturists are slowly producing a berry that will produce fruit five months out of the year in Iowa, according to Mr. Greene.

Stata Teachers' Convention.

The entire educational system for Iowa and the proposed change of the state school laws will be given special consideration by the teachers of Iowa who meet in fifty-seventh annual session in the Coliseum on Nov. 9, 10 and 11.

On Thursday morning, Nov. 9, the educational council, which is the legislative department of the state association and convenes prior to the general sessions of the association for the purpose of discussing school laws, will discuss at length the administration of local units or the township, city and county board organization and the administration of the state educational system. These same subjects are given further consideration in the sectional and departmental meetings to be held independent of the general sessions.

The complete program for the state association meetings will be issued this week to the teachers of the state by Supt. Frank L. Smart of Davenport, chairman of the executive committee.

More Facts In Horse Exhibit.

Pending the hearing of further evidence, the executive committee of the state board of agriculture is withholding its decision in the case of Peter Hopley & Sons of Lewis, Cass county, charged with irregularities in the exhibition of a horse at the Iowa state fair this fall.

Hopley won a first premium on a colt which was entered as a pure bred Belgium animal. Exhibitors in the same department contested the premium, charging that Hopley's entry was a cross-bred colt.

Harry Hopley appeared at the hearing, which was held in the offices of the department of agriculture at the state house. A general denial of the charge was made.

Charles E. Cameron, of Alta, president of the state board of agriculture, who presided at the hearing, said that the board would make no decision in the case until further evidence had been heard.

Board After Unlicensed Doctors.

War against physicians in Iowa who are practicing without licenses was declared by the state board of health at the concluding session of the quarterly meeting of the board.

There are a number of physicians in the state who are practicing in violation of the law. The health board is going after these men, and force them to secure licenses or get out of the state.

To examine medical colleges relative to their standing, a committee of four was appointed. The committee consists of Dr. DeBey, Dr. G. A. Huntoon of Des Moines, Dr. Seevers of Centerville, the new member of the board, Dr. G. H. Sumner, secretary of the board. The committee will go to Chicago next week. Dr. E. E. Richardson of Webster City was chosen to represent the Iowa board at a health convention to be held at Columbia, S. C., next month.

High Court Rules In Usury Case.

The fact that a state law may provide a penalty for usury does not affect the status of a national bank under the federal law, so the supreme court holds in an opinion handed down in the case of Ira Ingraham against the Merchants' National Bank of Greene.

"What the United States statutes undoubtedly mean," the opinion says, "is that any state court that has jurisdiction of actions involving the question of usury shall have jurisdiction of actions arising under them."

Visits Iowa Schools.

Hon. Harland Updegraft of Washington, D. C., in charge of the school administration bureau of the national department of education, was a visitor at the office of State Superintendent Deyoe this week. He is making a tour of the middle-western states for the purpose of becoming familiar with the progress of education in these states and to learn of any new methods which are being adopted by the wide-awake states of the middle-west, such as Iowa.

The Courtship of Miles Standish

The Spinning Wheel

th after month passed away, and n autumn the ships of the rchants with kindred and friends, with ttle and corn for the Pilgrims.
the village was peace; the men re intent on their labors, with hewing and building, with rden-plot and with merestead, with breaking the glebe, and wing the grass in the meadows, ding the sea for its fish, and ting the deer in the forest.
the village was peace; but at es the rumor of warfare
the air with alarm, and the ap-ehension of danger.
y the stalwart Miles Standish s scouring the land with his ces,
g valiant in fight and defeating
e alien armies,
s name had become a sound of r to the nations.
was still in his heart, but at es the remorse and contrition h in all noble natures succeed
e passionate outbreak, like a rising tide, that encount-n the rush of a river,
g its current a while, but makg it bitter and brackish.

while Alden at home had built
m a new habitation, substantial, of timber roughwn from the firs of the forest.
en-barred was the door, and the f was covered with rushes;
d the windows were, and the indow-panes were of paper, to admit the light, while wind
d rain were excluded.
too, he dug a well, and around planted an orchard:
may be seen to this day some e of the well and the orchard.
to the house was the stall, here, safe and secure from an-oyance.
n, the snow-white steer, that d fallen to Alden's allotment division of cattle, might rumine in the night-time the pastures he cropped, made agrant by sweet pennyroyal.

when his labor was finished, with eager feet would the dreamer the pathway that ran through e woods to the house of Pris-lla,
y illusions romantic and subtile
eceptions of fancy,
re disguised as duty, and love the semblance of friendship.
of her he thought, when he fashned the walls of his dwelling; of her he thought, when he elved in the soil of his garden; of her he thought, when he read his Bible on Sunday

Praise of the virtuous woman, as she is described in the Proverbs,—
How the heart of her husband doth safely trust in her always,
How all the days of her life she will do him good, and not evil,
How she seeketh the wool and the flax and worketh with gladness,
How she layeth her hand to the spindle and holdeth the distaff,
How she is not afraid of the snow for herself or her household,
Knowing her household are clothed with the scarlet cloth of her weaving!

So, as she sat at her wheel one afternoon in the autumn,
Alden, who opposite sat, and was watching her dexterous fingers,
As if the thread she was spinning were that of his life and his fortune,
After a pause in their talk, thus spake to the sound of the spindle.
"Truly, Priscilla," he said, "when I see you spinning and spinning, Never idle a moment, but thrifty and thoughtful of others,
Suddenly you are transformed, are visibly changed in a moment;
You are no longer Priscilla, but Bertha, the Beautiful Spinner."
Here the light foot on the treadle grew swifter and swifter; the spindle
Uttered an angry snarl, and the thread snapped short in her fingers;
While the impetuous speaker, not heeding the mischief, continued:
"You are the beautiful Bertha, the spinner, the queen of Helvetia;
She whose story I read at a stall in the streets of Southampton,
Who, as she rode on her palfrey, o'er valley and meadow and mountain,
Ever was spinning her thread from a distaff fixed to her saddle.
She was so thrifty and good, that her named passed into a proverb.
So shall it be with your own, when the spinning-wheel shall no longer Hum in the house of the farmer, and fill its chambers with music.
Then shall the mothers, reproving, relate how it was in their childhood,
Praising the good old times, and the days of Priscilla, the spinner!"
Straight uprose from her wheel the beautiful Puritan maiden, Pleased with the praise of her thrift from him whose praise was the sweetest,
Drew from the reel on the table a snowy skein of her spinning, Thus making answer, meanwhile, to the flattering phrases of Alden:
"Come, you must not be idle; if I am a pattern for housewives, Show yourself equally worthy of being the model of husbands.
Hold this skein on your hands, while
I wind it, ready for knitting;
Then who knows but hereafter, when fashions have changed and the manners,
Fathers may talk to their sons of the good old times of John Alden!"
Thus, with a jest and a laugh, the skein on his hands she adjusted,
He sitting awkwardly there, with his his arms extended before him,
She standing graceful, erect, and winding the thread from his fingers, Sometimes chiding a little his clumsy manner of holding,
Sometimes touching his hands, as she disentangled expertly Twist or knot in the yarn, unawares —for how could she help it?—
Sending electrical thrills through every nerve in his body.

Lo! in the midst of this scene, a breathless messenger entered,
Bringing in hurry and heat the terrible news from the village.
Yes; Miles Standish was dead!—an Indian had brought them the tidings,— Slain by a poisoned arrow, shot down in the front of the battle,
Into an ambush beguiled, cut off with the whole of his forces;
All the town would be burned, and all the people be murdered!
Such were the tidings of evil that burst on the hearts of the hearers.
Silent and statue-like stood Priscilla, her face looking backward
Still at the face of the speaker, her arms uplifted in horror;
But John Alden, upstarting, as if the barb of the arrow Piercing the heart of his friend had struck his own, and had sundered
Once and forever the bonds that held him bound as a captive,
Wild with excess of sensation, the awful delight of his freedom, Mingled with pain and regret, unconscious of what he was doing, Clasped, almost with a groan, the motionless form of Priscilla, Pressing her close to his heart, as for ever his own, and exclaiming:
"Those whom the Lord hath united, let no man put them asunder!"

Even as rivulets twain, from distant and separate sources,
Seeing each other afar, as they leap from the rocks, and pursuing Each one its devious path, but drawing nearer and nearer,
Rush together at last, at their tryst-ing-place in the forest;
So these lives that had run thus far in separate channels,
Coming in sight of each other, then swerving and flowing asunder, Parted by barriers strong, but drawing nearer and nearer,
Rushed together at last, and one was lost in the other.

Artist Who Had No Arms

Miss Sarah Biffen, de Mentholon and Hiles Held Brushes in Their Teeth or Toes.

Miss Sarah Biffen was a conspicuous example of the skill which armless people sometimes acquire in spite of their affliction. She was miniature painter to Queen Victoria and her work was widely known for its beauty and delicacy.

She was born without arms, but as a girl, having a great wish to become an artist, she worked earnestly for years until she could paint by holding the brush in her teeth. In 1821, according to the Raja Yoga Messenger, the judges, without any knowledge of the means she was compelled to use, awarded her the gold medal of the Society of Arts, a prize sought by hundreds of others.

M. de Mentholon and Bertram Hiles other artists who were deprived of the use of their arms. The former had only one foot, which he used to paint with.

Mr. Hiles lost both his arms in an accident, being run over by a street car when he was only 8 years old and when he was just beginning to acquire skill in drawing. He spent two years in patient toil learning to draw by holding the pencil in his teeth, at the end of which time he won a first-class certificate from a local art school.

Where David Copperfield Was Written

"Bleak House" at Broadstairs, England, which has failed to find a purchaser, is of interest to the Dickens lover because the greater part of "David Copperfield" was written there. But it is not the "Bleak House" of the novel, which is definitely located in Hertfordshire. The novelist and his family appear to have been somewhat tightly packed in their Broadstairs home. When Lord Carlisle contemplated paying a visit to "Our watering place" in 1851, Dickens wrote promising him the North Foreland Lighthouse for a night light in his bedroom, and he continues: "As we think of putting mignonette boxes outside the windows for the younger children to sleep in by and by, I am afraid we should give your servant the cramp if we hardily undertook to lodge him." During the last few years the house has been transformed out of all recognition.

Ruskin Pitied Americans.

It is not only the half million bricks of Tattershall that have been numbered for trans-shipment across the Atlantic. Ruskin, when he was a boy, pitied the Americans for being so unhappy as to live in a country that has no castles. They will have a castle now, and no nation likes to be pitied. But the other importation, made by Mrs. Gardner as an addition to her Italian villa near Boston, was that of an entire chapel as it stands, with all its interior furnishings, even to the half-burned candles in the altar. The monks who served the chapel had been scattered by the strong hand of the law, and the building was to be devoted to the pick ax. The courageous American lady had it packed up in a Venetian hill country, where it stood, and carried down piecemeal and embarked.—London Chronicle.

THE TEA PENALTY.
A Strong Man's Experience.

Writing from a busy railroad town the wife of an employe of one of the great roads says:

"My husband is a railroad man who has been so much benefited by the use of Postum that he wishes me to express his thanks to you for the good it has done him. His waking hours are taken up with his work, and he has no time to write himself.

"He has been a great tea drinker all his life and has always liked it strong.

"Tea has, of late years, acted on him like morphine does upon most people. At first it soothed him, but only for an hour or so, then it began to affect his nerves to such an extent that he could not sleep at night, and he would go to his work in the morning wretched and miserable from the loss of rest. This condition grew constantly worse, until his friends persuaded him, some four months ago, to quit tea and use Postum.

"At first he used Postum only for breakfast, but as he liked the taste of it, and it somehow seemed to do him good, he added it to his evening meal. Then, as he grew better, he began to drink it for his noon meal, and now he will drink nothing else at table.

"His condition is so wonderfully improved that he could not be hired to give up Postum and go back to tea. His nerves have become steady and reliable once more, and his sleep is easy, natural and refreshing.

He owes all this to Postum, for he has taken no medicine and made no other change in his diet.

"His brother, who was very nervous from coffee-drinking, was persuaded by us to give up the coffee and use Postum and he also has recovered his health and strength." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

No Chop Suey In China.

"I have just come from a trip to China," said the foreign agent, "and I found everything to eat there except chop suey. While seeing the sights in various Chinese cities I would occasionally drop into a restaurant to have a bite of native food. An order for a bowl of chop suey invariably was met by a mystical shake of the head. The fact is that they don't eat chop suey in China. An intelligent Chinaman tells me that chop suey is eaten only by pigs, cats and Americans. It is the American corruption of some Chinese dish that probably was very good. There is a legend to the effect that it was invented by some practical joker in San Francisco's Chinatown, and from there is has spread over the entire United States and most of Europe. Even London, Paris and Berlin now have their chop suey joints where respectable natives go and consume the stuff under the impression that they are being wicked. Chinamen in American tell me that chop suey is eaten only by the poorer Chinese, who order it in the dingier restaurants because it is cheap."

A Wise Mayor.

Mayor Crump, at a Democratic banquet in Memphis, said of a political turncoat:

"He is as inconsistent in politics as man is in love.

"Man's inconstancy in love is, you know, proverbial. The average man, as soon as he wins a woman, tires of her. The advice I'd give to every girl is this:

"'There is only one way to keep a man's love, and that is never to return it.'"

We Need One

Many of our surrounding towns have organized Commercial Clubs or Booster Clubs composed mainly of the progressive business men of the respective towns, the object of which is to promote all the legitimate enterprises for the business and moral good of the community. The object is a worthy one. to say the least, and such a club may, if the members are awake and pull together, do a great amount of good for a town and community.

Klemme needs such an organization and there is no really good reason why she shouldn't have one. There are a number of things we as a town need and should have.

We need at least two rural mail routes, and the town owes this to its farmer patrons.

We need and should have a good creamery and we believe our farmers would support one.

There are many, many things a Booster Club might accomplish if it would work for them, things that every live town has and which help them to grow in population and in a business way.

We believe that Klemme should have a business organization of this character.

A Fine Sermon

Rev. H. A. Keck, of Garner, gave a very able address on the subject "Temperance," in the Klemme English Methodist church last Sunday evening. Rev. Keck seems to be a very fluent speaker on almost any subject and especially does he seem to be well posted on the temperance question.

During the course of his remarks he stated that there are seven holders of federal licenses to sell liquor in Hancock county—mentioning that there is one at Garner, one at Britt, one at Kanawha and one at Klemme. He also said that the report was current that an effort would be made to get saloons in this county; but he did not think it was seriously contemplated, and if so, that it would fail. It was a very able discourse. Whenever it is known that Rev. Keck is to speak in Klemme, he is sure to be greeted by a full house.

The Standard Bearers will meet tomorrow at the H. F. Ludeke home.

Mr. Ortmeyer, from Charles City, visited at the Griewe home over Sunday.

All kinds of good coal and coke for winter. Let me fill your coal bins NOW while coal is plentiful. There will be a shortage when cold weather comes. H. G. Miller. 5tf

We have made arrangements whereby we can furnish the Daily Chicago Record-Herald and the Klemme Times both one year for $4.00, the price of the Record-Herald alone. Take advantage of this liberal offer while you can.

Among the Klemmeites who registered for land in the recent Rosebud opening in South Dakota, three were successful in drawing C. L. Yahnke's number is something over 3000. A. Kirkwood's something like 5100 and Lew Lewis' about 5200. As generally only about 30 per cent of the lucky ones ever file, these gentlemen may get a good piece of land if they so desire.

Reception for Band

The Klemme Band was made the victim of a surprise reception last Thursday night, some of the Klemme ladies being the instigators. Anyway, it was supposed to be a surprise, and it sure was to some of the band boys. However, it was noticeable that a number of them were togged out in their Sunday best, so they must have had some kind of a hunch.

Be that as it may, it was a very enjoyable social occasion. A nice lap supper was served during the course of the evening.

Now we do not mean to infer that only the band was present. Not at all. The guests numbered between 100 and 150 and all seemed to enjoy themselves. The party was held in the fine new garage of the Ridder Auto Company, which was very kindly turned over by Mr. Ridder to the ladies for the occasion.

The band boys feel grateful to those who worked in getting up this reception, and they responded with much music—the best they had on hand. (Being a member of the band, modesty forbids any more flattering mention of this part of the entertainment.)

The lecture course for the coming winter will be opened on the evening of November 10th by that popular lecturer, H. V. Adams. Mr. Adams needs no introduction to a Klemme audience as this will be his third appearance on our lecture courses. He never fails to interest his audience, and we can most heartily recommend him. If you want to hear the best, don't miss Mr. Adams, November 10.

A DESPAIRING WOMAN.

Weak, Tired and Almost Helpless From Wasting Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. Emily Howes, 1700 Burling St., Chicago, Ill., says: "I had awful pains through my hips and frequently wished I had never been born. I seemed to have lost all interest in life. I doctored for female trouble, thinking my condition was due to some derangement of that nature, but got no better. Finally I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and to my surprise I began to improve. They not only corrected the kidney action but stopped the pain and sickness I had thought was due to female trouble."

"When Your Back Is Lame, Remember the Name—DOAN'S." 50c. a box at all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Astonished the "Cop."

Police Lieutenant "Barney" Keleher always has a new story to tell.

"Two of our 'finest' were walking along Broadway not so long ago," began the lieutenant, unfolding his latest offering, "and their attention was attracted to the bronze figure of an ape standing upright in the window of a large jewelry store.

"What kind of an animal is that supposed to be?" asked one of the other.

"'You surprise me with your thickness,' returned the second cop. 'That's a gorilla. Never hear of them before?'

"'Sure, and I read about them in the histories,' he answered. 'My, what a lot of damage they did during the Civil war! How did a general ever make those things mind him?'"—New York Sun.

BABY'S TERRIBLE SUFFERING

"When my baby was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt.

"We tried a great many remedies, but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things, and doctors, too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more." (Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 18 K, Boston.

BEETS PAY A PROFIT

Steamboat Rock Farmers Will Clear $15,000 From 300 Acres

THEY FIND EXPENSE SMALL

Conservative Estimate Places Yield at Ten Tons An Acre, While Many Insist Average Will Be Over Twelve.

Steamboat Rock.—The 300 acres of sugar beets planted in the vicinity of Steamboat Rock will be worth $15,000 to $16,000 at a conservative estimate of ten tons to the acre, and some farmers think the average will be nearer twelve tons to the acre. The farmers receive $5 per ton for their beets loaded on the cars ready to be shipped to Waverly. Out of the $50 or more received per acre they pay $16 per acre for the hand labor of weeding and hoing, which is done by Russians who make their homes on the farms during the season. The seed costs $1.50 per acre and the commercial fertilizer $1.50 per acre. The beet sugar company furnishes free use of a seeder. The farmer buys a special beet plow and lifter.

While it is thought by some that beets are injurious to the land, H. A. Gellhorn made a trip to Hampton recently to find out about the effect of the beets on the land for his own good. His investigation proved favorable as he contracted for forty acres for next season.

Station Agent Robbed.

Dewitt.—A masked robber pulled off a sensational robbery in the C. & N. W. railroad depot at this place, and at the muzzle of a revolver forced A. J. Ward, the 19-year-old night operator, to hand over all the money he had, $19.51. Just before the robber appeared, Day Agent Hall took $200 of the company's money and placed it in a bank.

Iowa Plant Is Failure.

Chicago.—Judge K. M. Landis, in the United States district court, has appointed the Central Trust company receivers for the United Woolen Mills, a $200,000 corporation, upon application of creditors, who allege the concern is bankrupt. The concern has eighteen stores throughout the west and a $100,000 woolen mill at Benaparte, Iowa.

Bad Auto Mix Up.

Muscatine.—Three persons were injured badly and two automobiles demolished in a collision which occurred about ten miles east of the city. August Othmer and several others were returning from Davenport and while traveling at the rate of thirty miles an hour, collided with a heavy car owned by Isaac Eis.

Tomatoes But Half Crop.

Marshalltown. — That the dry weather of the summer reduced the tomato crop to at least one-half is found in the canning record of a local plant, upon the completion of the tomato pack Saturday. The season's pack amounts to about 5,000 cases, just about half of what was expected.

Lay Plans to Get Money.

Iowa City.—Presbyterian church delegates from West Liberty, Wilton, Marengo, Williamsburg, Conroy, Brooklyn, Washington, West Branch and Tipton in meeting assembled at Iowa City have outlined various methods and means of financing and helping the funds of the church.

Is Held To Grand Jury.

Chariton.—Sam Goldwater,, charged with killing Mike McLain, at the Rock Island restaurant, had his hearing before Justice Leinen, and was bound over to the grand jury without bond to answer to the charge of murder in the first degree.

New Armory at Corning.

Des Moines.—Governor Carroll and Adjutant-General Logan will go to Corning, November 7th, where they will take part in the exercises incident to the dedication of the new armory at that place.

To Observe Founders' Day.

Mount Pleasant.—Iowa Wesleyan college celebrated founders' day the past week, the observance being an annual one in which tribute is paid those who have aided the institution.

Miss Lulu White Conscious.

Iowa City.—Lulu White of Colo, who fell from the interurban bridge Sunday, is recovering consciousness after ninety-six hours of sleep and surgeons now believe she will recover.

Big Price For Iowa Farm.

Fort Dodge.—A 320-acre tract of land near Dayton was sold Friday for $200 an acre. Farm land values in this locality have risen on an average of $35 an acre this year.

Lowry W. Goode A Suicide.

Des Moines.—Lowry W. Goode, 58, president of the Cairo and Norfolk railway company and a quarter of a century ago, "the biggest man in Des Moines," committed suicide Thursday at a hotel in Boston, Mass. Always imbued with the "promotion spirit," Mr. Goode conceived the idea of erecting houses on a vast expanse of territory now North Des Moines. He founded first the Highland Park college. He erected several hundred homes in North Des Moines and was responsible for the erection of several large office buildings.

Will Open New Mines.

Des Moines.—New coal fields are to be developed north of the city, it is said, on a tract of 174 acres, which has been purchased from T. M. Walker by the Claremont Development company for $75,000. The deed was filed this week. It is believed that rich coal deposits underlay the land. Its exact location is about a mile north of the city limits and along the east bank of the Des Moines river just opposite the mouth of Beaver creek.

Potatoes Getting Cheaper.

Marshalltown. — Farmers in the northern part of this county are harvesting their late potatoes, and for a dry year the tubers are producing a fine yield. Some fields have gone 100 bushels to the acre. Delivered on cars, at Liscomb, in wagon load lots, the producers are receiving 45 cents per bushel.

Would Save 1900 Acres.

Fort Madison.—A petition has been filed by the Mississippi River Power company to establish a drainage district for the Green Bay bottoms above this city. Building a drainage district would save about 19,000 acres of land in Lee and Des Moines counties that would be overflowed by the building of the dam at Keokuk.

Henry County Land High.

Mount Pleasant.—Fred Schrader of Mount Pleasant has purchased eighty acres of land three miles southeast of Swedesburg for $200 an acre. Another eighty acres three miles northwest of Milton owned by J. C. Mart, has been sold to H. A. Henkle for $125 an acre.

Death of Hamilton Wilcox.

Griswold.—Hamilton Wilcox, a leading citizen of Griswold, Iowa, was buried the past week in this city. Some years ago Mr. Wilcox was well known in the democratic party as a local leader. His life was devoted to business, and he accumulated quite a fortune.

Catholics Plan School.

Storm Lake.—St. Mary's Catholic church will erect a fine sisters' school in this city as soon as possible in the spring at a cost of $20,000. Announcement of the intention was made after the proposition had been under consideration for sime time.

Council Bluffs Gets Convention.

Centerville.—Council Bluffs was chosen as the location for the next Iowa Baptist state convention, following a spirited contest in the session of the convention. Keokuk, Mason City and Washington had issued invitations to tht convention.

Station Safe Blown Open.

Storm Lake.—For the second time in three years cracksmen blew the safe in the Minneapolis & St. Louis station in this city. The burglars did not secure anything of value, as Agent Davis had taken all the money out.

Emmetsburg Attorney Dead.

Emmetsburg.—C. E. Cohoon, prominent attorney and socialist leader, ex-candidate for the supreme bench, dropped dead from heart failure in the federal court room at Council Bluffs.

Big Sum For Broken Leg.

Mason City.—By settlement out of court, Stephen Casey, fireman for the Milwaukee road, received $7,000 for a broken leg caused when the cylinder head of an engine blew out.

Mystic Recovers From Fire.

Mystic.—Since the big fire here a year ago Mystic has been rebuilt and where there were formerly old weather beaten frame structures there are now handsome brick blocks.

Charged With Forgery.

Burlington.—The police arrested A. J. Reese, a carpenter of this city, on the charge of passing eight forged checks amounting to about $200. Reese has a wife and three children.

Continuance Is Refused.

Keokuk.—Judge W. S. Hamilton in the district court refused to grant a continuance to John Roland, charged with the murder of Mrs. Lilly Jones. The trial will begin Tuesday, Oct. 31.

Big Barn Is Total Loss.

Iowa City.—John J. Edwards, two miles southwest of Iowa City, met with a $2,500 loss by fire which destroyed his barn and all its contents.

LITTLE RUSE DIDN'T SUCCEED

Youngster's Scheme Was All Right, But Economical Father Was a Match for Him.

The proprietor of the most prominent hotel in the town of S——, Ky., is a man of a very economical nature, in fact he is an extremist in this feature. He has a six-year-old, red-headed son that didn't inherit his father's economical disposition. Recently the son was very much in need of a five-cent piece for soda water purposes. He went into the dining-room, where he was free from observation, and removed his shoe strings and placed them in his hip pocket for future reference. Returning to the office he approached his father and said:

"Pa, give me a nickel to get me a pair of shoe strings."

His father glanced down at his son's shoes, then turning around approached the office safe and opened it in silence. He took out the cash box and raising the lid extracted a pair of new shoe strings which he handed to his son without a word. The youngster took the string with a crestfallen air and then to the amusement of the onlookers exclaimed:

"Stung again, by granny."

"Hubby, you have a lock of my hair, haven't you?"

"Next my heart."

PULITZER DEAD

Fighting Journalist Dies On Board His Yacht

TWO GREAT PAPERS

His Way Up From Menial Days to the Ownership of Two Great Newspapers In New York and St. Louis.

York, Oct. 30.—Joseph Pulitzer, proprietor of the New York World, died of heart failure today on board his yacht Liberty in the harbor of Charleston, S. C., after an illness of two days. The news was received here in a telegram from his secretary.

Joseph Pulitzer, proprietor and publisher of the New York World and St. Louis Post-Dispatch, was born in Hungary, April 10, 1847, and received a good classical education under private tutors and at the Vienna university. He came to this country when 17, entered the union army as a private in a Missouri regiment and served to the end of the war. On his return he returned to St. Louis, where he made a precarious living by serving as a waiter in a cafe. His ability was discovered by Carl Schurz and Carl Dilthey. In 1878, Pulitzer purchased the St. Louis Dispatch and, consolidating it with the St. Louis Post, formed the Post-Dispatch. While connected with that paper he studied law and was admitted to practice. In 1869 he was elected member of the Missouri state legislature. In the early '80s he went to New York and bought the New York World on May 10, 1883. Two years later he was elected to congress to represent the Ninth New York district of the Forty-ninth congress. He resigned, however.

HONEY IS VERY WHOLESOME

Real Value So Out of Proportion to Cost It Should Be on Every Table.

Most suburbanites would keep a few hives of bees if honey values were better understood. Even when the honey must be purchased its real value is so out of proportion to its cost that it should be included among the everyday necessities.

Comparatively few housewives use honey as a substitute for sugar in baking, but managers of large bakeries, always on the alert to find the best and most economical ingredients to use in their productions, value it at its true worth, and use it in making their choicest products, because it provides a variety of flavor. It produces lighter and finer cakes, and those in which it is used have superior keeping qualities.

Honey is in the fat, heat and energy producing class of foods.

Many people who do not keep bees and a few that do conside honey a luxury, when if freely used it will save enough of either butter or sugar to much more than equal its cost. For example: Have a pitcher of strained honey at hand and as each cake is taken from the griddle pour honey over it and fold like an omelet. The result will be cakes that will be "simply delicious" without the use of butter—and every housewife knows that hot cakes call for a great deal of butter when that is used.

Honey has greater sweetening power than sugar and less is needed. In a sponge cake that would call for a cupful of sugar three-fourths of a cupful of honey is sufficient. To make such a cake beat the three-fourths of a cupful of honey with the yolks of three eggs, beat in one cupful of flour, a little at a time, then add four tablespoonful of hot water, and lastly fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the three eggs, with any flavoring desired.

TO MAKE KITCHEN CABINET

Home-Made Affair That Is Easily Made and a Convenient Adjunct to Kitchen.

My kitchen had no kitchen cabinet, but I determined to have one. I had a kitchen table 2 by 4½ feet. I first nailed a cleat across the legs of this table at each end, and on them I laid a shelf. Three boxes 8 by 10 inches and 3½ feet long placed one on top of the other made the cabinet. I covered it inside and out with building paper. Oilcloth would have been better, but the paper can be kept looking nice for a long time by wiping with a damp cloth. Two cracker boxes with the lid hinged, and an inch block nailed on each bottom corner to hold the castors make flour and meal bins, which easily slide under the shelf.—Mrs. Bertha Jackson.

Wine Sauce.

One-fourth cup butter, ½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons milk, 2 tablespoons wine Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually, add the milk and wine very slowly to the first mixture to prevent separation. It should not be chilled but kept in a warm place until served.

Cheap Fruit Cake.

Mix together one cup molasses, one-half cup brown sugar, one-half cup butter, one cup hot water, one dessertspoon soda, two cups flour, one dessertspoon spices, and add currants citron and raisins to your liking. Bake in a quick oven.

Sash Curtain Hint.

When laundering sash curtains starch them only part way up, as the rod can be more quickly inserted with less danger of tearing the curtains.

Apple Snow.

Boil about five apples to a pulp sweetening to taste. When cool place in a large bowl, together with the white of one egg, juice of one lemon and one cup of sugar. Beat the mixture about thirty minutes with a wire egg beater. The result is three times the amount you started with, enough to serve ten people.

Nature.

Not from nature up to nature's God, but down from nature's God look nature through.—Robert Montgomery.

CANADA'S IMMENSE WHEAT FIELDS

THE ATTRACTION FOR THREE TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAYS.

Last August there visited the Canadian west the vice-president of the largest individual hardware company in the United States. As his firm have a turnover of millions, and deals extensively with farm implements, this man took a deep interest in crop conditions in Canada, and on his return he embodied his findings in an article for the Hardware Reporter. This article should be of special interest to farmers.

The writer speaks of the importance of the spring wheat crop of Western Canada. He might also have spoken of the importance of the oat crop and also of the winter wheat crop, as well as barley. Winter wheat during the past few years has been a great success, and experiments have shown that it can be grown with success in almost any portion of the three provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. But apart from this, the spring wheat crop is the one generally grown, and all who know anything of grain, anyone who has had anything to do with markets, knows or has heard of the high character of this cereal and the splendid yields that are annually produced. Reproducing from this article:—

"In a land of such great sweep, and of such difference in soil and climate, there are many resources, but none are at present of the same overwhelming importance as the spring wheat crop. In the interminable prairie stretches of the northwest provinces it is the one absorbing topic of interest and of conversation during its growing and its harvesting, for upon its success or failure hangs the weal or woe of a large part of the Dominion. Its influence extends far down into the United States, drawing thousands of farmers northwards with the lure of cheap lands, but likewise beyond the great lakes, even to the easy going maritime provinces, calling the flower of their young men to its opportunities. Development in these prairie provinces goes on at high pressure for everything hangs on the outcome of spring wheat. Success has emboldened the raisers of this one all-important crop, and each year there is further incursion into those northern fields that only a short time ago were regarded as Arctic wastes. The Canadian Northwest seems to be one of those modern agricultural examples set forth to drive the final nail in the coffin of that ancient Malthusian delusion that population tends to outrun the means of subsistence, since the only fear now among Canadian economists is as to the danger of overstocking the wheat market. Only about two and one-half per cent of possible arable lands in the northwest provinces is now under cultivation, and this year the crop promises to be close to 200,000,000 bushels, so that your imagination and your arithmetic can easily supply the answer as to the possible or even probable outcome."

During the months of July and August the weather was unfavourable and the production of a 200 million yield of wheat will not likely be realized, but even with this, the threshing reports coming to hand show that the crop will be a splendidly paying one.

Literary Criticism.

They were discussing a certain authoress at dinner, and a well-known critic raised a laugh by remarking: 'Well, her hair's red, even if her books are not."

The mild young man in the corner made a mental note of the sally for future use, and at another party shortly afterward he carefully guided the conversation into literary channels, Titbits informs its readers. Fortunately, some one mentioned the desired name, and he triumphantly cried out: "Well, she's got red hair, even if her books haven't!"

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, their heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which contains no dangerous narcotics nor alcohol.

The ingredients, as attested under oath, are Stone root (Collinsonia Canadensis), Bloodroot (Sanguinaria Canadensis), Golden Seal root (Hydrastis Canadensis), Queen's root (Stillingia Sylvatica), Black Cherrybark (Prunus Virginiana), Mandrake root (Podophyllum Peltatum), with triple refined glycerine, prepared in a scientific laboratory in a way that no druggist could imitate.

This tonic contains no alcohol to shrink up the red blood corpuscles; but, on the other hand, it increases their number and they become round and healthy. It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers; for the run-down, anæmic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing. Stick to this safe and sane remedy, and refuse all "just as good" medicines offered by the druggist who is looking for a larger profit. Nothing but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will do you half as much good.

Wise and Otherwise

Probably the standpat party in China is almost as securely rooted to the eternal rocks as Joe Cannon is in this country.

A woman is afraid her husband will catch cold if he doesn't wear his rubbers in the rain and that if she does she will look like a fright.

His enemies must concede that Mr. Taft is a great and successful traveler.

Women suffragists have adopted a yell. They feel so deeply in the matter that they were tempted to make it a roar.

The court that granted a divorce on the ground that her husband had concealed his real character from her has set a dangerous precedent well calculated to give a wide spread impetus to divorce.

"Mrs. Ida VonClassen, who has been much in the public eye, has been sent to an insane asylum, charged with having an exaggerated ego." Well, if that is to be precedent, the nation would do well to get ready to build additional insane asylums on a stupendous scale.

Soon there will be nothing left of Turkey but the wish-bone.

It takes more than a fierce mustache to convince people that Wickersham eats a trust or two for his breakfast every morning.

Mr. Taft will have to run against the high cost of living.

A Reno judge says that he will grant no divorce to a person with an affinity. That is the very kind that wants the divorce most.

It seems to us that the people who worry the most about the hobble skirts are the fellows who do not wear 'em—yet.

Appetite Not a Necessity.

Dr. John R. Murlin of New York, assistant professor of physiology at the Cornell university medical college, in an article in the October number of the Journal of the Outdoor Life, compares the food we eat to the fuel used in furnishing steam and power for an engine. In selecting our food he says that we should eat enough to furnish energy for the day's work, but that much more than this is not needed. He holds that the appetite is not a necessity for good digestion. "There is no fallacy of nutrition," he says, "greater than that which supposes that a food cannot be digested and utilized without appetite." Most of the food we eat, fully four-fifths, goes to supply energy for our everyday tasks, while less than one-fifth goes to supply building material.

No More Room.

The railway carriage was crowded, but a very fat old gentleman who sat by the window calmly ignored the ominous looks of the passengers for taking up so much room.

A boy selling buns poked his head in at the window and inquired:

"Buns, sir?"

The old gentleman was slightly deaf, and, not noticing the buns, thought the boy wanted a seat in the already packed carriage; so he remarked:

"Full up, my boy! No more room inside!"

A roar of laughter followed his reply, and the old gentleman innocently wondered as to the cause of their merriment.—London Tit-Bits.

DIET FOR THE TUBERCULOSIS

General Idea That Too Much Food Cannot Be Given, Is Shown to Be Erroneous.

Many traditions with regard to the feeding of tuberculosis patients and with regard to food in general, are given severe blows in a series of articles published in the October number of the Journal of Outdoor Life, the official organ of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Dr. John R. Murlin of New York, assistant professor of physiology at the Cornell university medical college, holds in an article entitled "The Dynamic Principles of Nutrition," that a consumptive will gain weight and do well on three pints of whole milk, eight ounces of cream, five ounces of milk sugar, six eggs and two slices of buttered toast as a ration for 24 hours. The entire diet, with the exception of the bread and butter could be prepared in advance and served for a cost of about fifty cents for the day. Miss Cecilia Flick of the Henry Phipps institute of Philadelphia also offers some sample diets which the ordinary family can prepare for even less than fifty cents a day.

Dr. David R. Lyman of Wallingford, Conn., and Dr. Paul B. Johnson of Washington, D. C., both agree that the ordinary person eats too much, and that the old notions about stuffing a tuberculosis patient at all times and seasons have been proven false. Dr. Lyman holds that eggs are not a necessary article of the consumptive's diet, and that a tuberculosis patient should eat anything that agrees with him that is nourishing. He thinks that a tuberculosis patient should eat only a little more than a person in ordinary good health.

Immensity of Nature.

They were on a trip in Switzerland, and had that day braved all dangers and ascended one of the highest points in the Alps.

He was very fat, and as he stood panting and mopping his brow at the top of the mountain, he turned to his wife and said, with pathos in his voice:

"See, dear, how small one is in the face of the immensity of nature."

"Small, indeed!" answered his better half. "Why, you're standing in front of me, hiding the whole of Mont Blanc and the best part of the valley of Chamonix!"—Exchange.

Fever's On.

"There's no fever like the football fever," said George H. Earle, Jr., at a dinner party in Philadelphia. "Let me tell you about a broker's boy in Third street.

"A Third street broker sat at his desk the other morning when his office boy entered and said respectfully:

"'If you please, sir, my grandfather's dead and I'd like to get off early to go to the funeral match—I mean the football ceremony—that is—'

"And then, blushing scarlet, the boy withdrew."

STATE BOARD MEETS

Board of Education Gives University Department Wide Scope

UNABLE TO GET PRESIDENT

Committee That Visited Eastern Cities Report That In Every Instance They Found the Teachers Were Better Paid.

Des Moines.—The state board of education adjourned without selecting a president for the Iowa state college at Ames, to succeed A. B. Storms, who resigned a year ago. The monthly session was held at Ames. Although the board was hopeful of securing E. E. Sparks, president of the Pennsylvania state college, to take the place, it is stated that Mr. Sparks will not leave the east.

"We are anxious to secure a new president for the Iowa state college and we are doing a lot of casting around," said Mr. Boyd, secretary of the finance committee. "We would be happy if we could get a man who would be as successful as John G. Bowman has been at the state university."

An institute of fine arts at the state university at Iowa City was created by the board and Prof. C. F. Ansley, who is at present at the head of the English department, was selected to head the new department. This action was taken so as to give the students in the fine arts department, at present under C. A. Cummings, full credit on their work for degrees. The change does not affect Professor Cummings' work, but includes it under the general head.

The report of the committee appointed to visit the colleges for the blind and to make recommendations for the improvement of the college for the blind at Vinton, filed its report with the board. The members of the committee were A. B. Funk, Charles R. Brenton, Thomas Lambert and W. R. Boyd. George D. Eaton, superintendent of the Vinton institution, accompanied the committee on the eastern trip last month.

The principal changes recommended by the committee are:

Discard double beds and install single ones.

A manual training laboratory.

A printing office to print books for the blind.

Factory for making baskets.

Systematic effort to make adult blind self supporting.

Cottage system for housing of pupils.

One paragraph of the report follows:

"In every instance we found the teaching force better compensated than our own and more teachers in proportion to the number of students enrolled than in Iowa. So far as our own institution is concerned, this may be said, that taking into consideration the amount of money at its disposal, Iowa is getting more for a dollar than is being obtained in any of the institutions visited. With a continuation of the spirit now at our institution and with a slightly increased support fund, splendid results could be obtained."

Saloon Question at Plainfield.

Does a railway track cut off a part of a city from its main business district?

Upon the determination of this question hinges the chances of the one saloon in Plainfield to continue in operation. H. H. Sawyer, attorney for the Iowa Amendment association with headquarters in Des Moines, presented this unique argument in court at Charles City in an effort to defeat the purpose of the liquor interests to do business in Plainfield. The saloon in Plainfield is located in that part of the city which is on the south side of the railway tracks This is contrary to the intent of the mulct saloon law, contends Mr. Sawyer, since the law restricts the operation of saloons only to main business streets of all cities.

State Board Buys Potatoes.

The state board of control purchased 5,000 bushels of first class Minnesota potatoes for use at the state insane hospital at Mt. Pleasant. The contract price is 72 cents per bushel delivered at the side tracks at the institution. It is probable that the same price will also be paid for potatoes for use at the reformatory at Anamosa. The contract price includes the freight for first class Minnesota potatoes.

Husband and Wife in Bankruptcy.

Ralph R. Cook and Eva M. Cook, of Adel, Dallas county, have filed an application in voluntary bankruptcy in the United States district court. The husband gives his liabilities as $8,825.45 and assets, $2,962; and his wife gives her liabilities at $1,805.51, and assets at $50

A SERIOUS ERROR.

Many a case of kidney disease has proven fatal because the symptoms were not recognized. If you suffer from backache or bladder irregularities, follow the advice of G. H. Tuttle, Rogers street, Broken Bow, Nebr. Says Mr. Tuttle: "I was confined to my home for weeks, unable to walk more than ten feet at a time. The doctor said I had gravel, and his treatment helped me temporarily, but soon the symptoms returned with greater severity than before. Being urged, I used Doan's Kidney Pills and received almost instant relief. In a few weeks' time I was completely cured."

The time a man begins to fear for the future of his country is when he fears he is going to lose a job in the election.

Urgent Necessity.

A distinguished theologian was invited to make an address before a Sunday school. The divine spoke for over an hour, and his remarks were of too deep a character for the average juvenile mind to comprehend. At the conclusion, the superintendent, according to custom, requested some one in the school to name an appropriate hymn to sing.

"Sing 'Revive Us Again,'" shouted a boy in the rear of the room.

If They All Knew.

A woman speaker told a New York suffrage meeting that "we women haven't concentration. Our minds just go flirting around and don't get anywhere." Considering which, is it not superfluous for mere men to muss about in women's affairs when they know themselves so well?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH YOUR BABY?

The young mother—and many an old one, too—is often puzzled to know the cause of her child's ill nature. The loudness of its crying does not necessarily indicate the seriousness of its trouble. It may have nothing more the matter with it than a headache or a feeling of general dullness. It cannot, of course, describe its feelings, but as a preliminary measure you are safe in trying a mild laxative.

Nine times out of ten, you will find it is all the child needs, for its restlessness and peevishness are perhaps due to obstruction of the bowels, and once that has been remedied the headache, the sluggishness and the many other evidences of constipation and indigestion will quickly disappear.

Don't give the little one salts, cathartic pills or nasty waters, for these will act as purgatives, and they are too strong for a child. In the families of Mrs. J. E. Harmon, 506 Star Ave., Burlington, Iowa, and Mrs. E. Morse, Council Bluffs, Iowa, the only laxative given is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It has been found to answer most perfectly all the purposes of a laxative, and its very mildness and freedom from griping recommend it especially for the use of children, women, and old folks generally—people who need a gentle bowel stimulant. Thousands of American families have been enthusiastic about it for more than a quarter of a century.

Anyone wishing to make a trial of this remedy before buying it in the regular way of a druggist at fifty cents or one dollar a large bottle (family size) can have a sample bottle sent to the home free of charge by simply addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Your name and address on a postal card will do.

One of the directors visited our schools last week and reports everything in good order except that the records showed that a few children had been very irregular in attendance. This ought not to be, for in this prosperous district of ours it is not necessary to keep a child from school for the little work it can do. Truly, parents, you cannot afford to let your children miss a day. Parents can help the schools a great deal by sending their children regularly every day.

CANADA'S CENSUS

A THIRTY-TWO PER CENT INCREASE IN THE PAST TEN YEARS.

That Canada has come rapidly to the front in the past ten years is amply shown in the results of the census recently made public. The population of the Dominion is now placed at 7,081,869, which with outlying points to be heard from, may bring it up to 7¼ millions as compared with 5,371,315 in 1901. Though these figures are large, they do not present a total as large as was expected but they do show a greater increase of percentage in population for the decade than any similar increase in the United States. The highest percentage ever reached by the Republic was 24%; the percentage of increase in Canada for the decade is 32%. Thus it will be seen that the provinces west of the lakes, with the great broad fertile acres ready for the sowing and immediate reaping of grain and the Valleys of British Columbia capable of producing fruit with which to supply its neighboring provinces east of the mountains, have attracted numbers, which has exceeded the most optimistic of the expectations of ten years ago.

Upon the prairies of the ten years ago there was but a spare scattering of people; but today, no matter in which way you go, take any direction, and you find homes and farms and good ones too, occupied by the very best class of people in good sized settlements with plenty of room for five or six times as many more. The population of Alberta is set down at 372,919, as compared with 73,022 in 1901; Saskatchewan 453,508 as compared with 91,270 in 1901; Manitoba's 454,691 compares well with its 255,211 in 1901; and so does that of British Columbia—362,768 as against 178,657 in 1901; but in a territory as large as this a population of 1,643,000 is little more than discernible in point of numbers. The work through it has been great. Look at the towns that have been built up; its cities, Winnipeg with 135,000; Vancouver with upwards of 100,000; Calgary with 43,000; Edmonton, Regina, Saskatoon; Lethbridge; Medicine Hat, Moosejaw, splendid cities—none better anywhere; well maintained and equipped. These have come with existence and been built as they have been built by reason of the splendid agricultural country by which they are surrounded. The population is scarcely discernible. A population ten or twelve times that shown by the recent census could be easily maintained in even greater wealth than that which maintains the present numbers. There is certainly a wonderful future for Western Canada and that which goes to the development of the west will enrich the last. This is the growing time in Canada and what has been done in the past ten years is but a beginning. The next decade will show a far greater advancement. In the meantime Canada is bidding welcome the progressive and industrious citizen. The invitation is a standing one. At the forthcoming land exposition in Chicago, Canada will have one of the best exhibits of farm products that has ever been made and it will be well worth while inspecting it and getting information from those who may be in charge.

SHOT WIFE AND SELF

J. P. Christofferson Said to Have Admitted His Guilt

WAS TAKEN TO JAIL YESTERDAY

Mrs. Christofferson Is Still Alive But There Is Slight Possibility Of Her Recovery Because Of Her Advanced Age.

Atlantic, Nov. 6.—J. P. Christofferson, accused of attempted suicide and murder, will be taken before the insane commission of Cass county today. Information charging him with insanity will be filed by Nels Hoegh.

Mr. Christofferson was confined in the county jail yesterday. He is under the constant guard of deputy sheriffs. No information has been filed against him and none will be until after the hearing before the insanity commission this morning.

Christofferson is considered to be sane upon all but one or two subjects. He has been a man of large business affairs in the county and also a man of good business judgment. It is understood that his sanity will be questioned only on one or two points, but that an effort will be made to show that he was wholly controlled by mania at the time of the shooting.

In his cell this morning, Mr. Christofferson is said to have confessed to the attempted murder of his wife and the later attempt upon his own life. He declared that he was tired and that he wanted to end it all. He is not in a serious condition.

Mrs. Christofferson is still alive. There is slight possibility of her recovery because of her advanced age and the long time elapsing between the time of the shooting and the discovery of the affair by neighbors. Her condition is slightly better today than it was late Saturday afternoon.

KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Knoxville Man Is Hit By Falling Telephone Pole Snapped In Two By Automobile.

Des Moines, Nov. 6.—Robert Morrow, 60 years old, of Knoxville, died in the Methodist hospital at 12:45 o'clock yesterday morning from the effects of injuries received on Saturday afternoon, when a telephone pole, broken by an unmanageable automobile in which he was riding, toppled over on the occupants of the car. The car was driven by O. P. Wright, also of Knoxville. Four people occupied the car, which was driven by Mr. Wright. Forest Dickerson and Robert Hicks, 14 years old the other two members of the party escaped injury. Mr. Wright is president of the Marion County bank at Knoxville.

ITALIAN IS FATALLY SHOT

The Police Are Unable To Discover the Cause of the Tragedy In Shooting Affray.

Des Moines, Nov. 6.—Nome Carsi, a foreigner, was fatally wounded yesterday afternoon during a christening celebration at 327 Southwest Fifth street. It is alleged by the other members of the party that one Rappacli Jabrile shot Carsi in a quarrel, following the christening. Carsi was reported to be dying early this morning at Mercy hospital where he was taken late yesterday afternoon.

Iowans Are Prize Winners.

Des Moines, Nov. 6.—At the National Dairy Show in Chicago, Iowa breeders have taken numerous prizes. Notable among them are Wilcox & Stubbs of Des Moines and W. W. Marsh of Waterloo. The Iowa state college at Ames also took numerous prizes for Guernseys. C. A. Nelson of Waverly won a first prize for Holstein and Freisian heifers.

Suicide Full Of Mystery.

Oskaloosa, Nov. 6.—William Davis, a shoemaker in the shop of the Monroe Mercantile company at Buxton, killed himself by hanging. His body was found swinging from a tree back of his boarding place. He was 45 years old and was thought to be possessed of considerable property or money.

Joint Drain Is Arranged.

Boone, Nov. 6.—The boards of supervisors of Boone and Story counties have arranged the establishment of a joint drain. The drain will start in Colfax township, Boone county, and end in Washington township, Story county. It will cost about $12,000.

WOMAN CURED BOY OF ECZEMA

Eczema Caused Abscesses Nothing Entirely Cured by Resinol.

Who can tell the terrible suffering this poor boy until his mother discovered Resinol? Taken from school because of his sad plight, was in misery greater, probably words can describe. Read what mother says:

"My boy had Eczema in such a way that it caused abscesses on his head. I was compelled to take him out of school. After using your soap and ointment for three weeks he was entirely cured. I will always keep them in my home.

"MRS. FLORENCE GRIFFITH,
"828 Winton street, Philadelphia, Pa."

If Resinol can do this in one case it can do it in all cases of similar disease. We have thousands of testimonials telling of wonderful cures by Resinol Ointment is prescribed by physicians for every skin trouble, including cuts, sores, scalds, chafings, burns, and is a remedy for boils, carbuncles, felons, piles, eczema, tetter, shingles, poison eruptions of poison ivy and other skin troubles. Gives immediate relief. Every home should be on hand ready for immediate use. It is put up in screw-top containers selling at fifty cents and a dollar.

Resinol Soap, made of the same ingredients, represents the highest skill in soap-making. It is refreshing, soothing and should be used by every one for the toilet and bath. It is especially adapted to the skin of babies. Prevents many of the skin troubles, and there is nothing quite so good for shampooing and the cleaning of the scalp. The ointment and soap for sale by all druggists. Sample free if you will mention Dept. No. 61, Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

Silly Game.

A city cousin had been staying on the farm for two weeks, resting from the winter's round of pleasure. One evening after supper she suggested to her country cousins that they play bridge party some evening.

"My sakes, Arabella," was the horrified reply. "They ain't no neighbors nearer than four miles, and the roads awful rickety. This time of year you'd all have pneumonia. For new-fangled idees, give me old folks."

ERUPTION COVERED

"Three years ago this winter I had a breaking out that covered my whole body. It itched so it seemed as if I should go crazy. It first came in little pimples on my back and spread till it covered my whole body, limbs down to my knees, also from down to my elbows. When I scratched it made sores, and the terrible itching and burning kept me from sleeping. I tried several remedies all to no purpose. Then I concluded to try the Cuticura Remedies. I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, also the Resolvent, about four months, and they completely cured me of eczema. I have had no return of the disease and never had a good night's rest. The skin eruption first broke out after I commenced using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I had only used a few days before I could see that it was beginning to heal, and the terrible itching was gone.

"Those that lived in the house at the time know how I suffered and how the Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me. I never take a bath without using the Cuticura Soap, and I do not believe there are better remedies for any skin disease than the Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Miss Sarah Calkins, Waukon, Iowa, Mar. 16, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 5 K, Boston.

ea at his feet was a laver!

was the wedding morn of Pris-illa, the Puritan maiden.
ds were assembled together; the lder and Magistrate also d the scene with their presence, nd stood like the Law and the Gospel,
with the sanction of earth and e with the blessing of heaven.
ie and brief was the wedding, as hat of Ruth and of Boaz.
y the youth and the maiden repeated the words of betrothal, g each other for husband and wife in the Magistrate's presence, the Puritan way, and the laudable custom of Holland.

fection,
ting of life and of death, and imploring divine benedictions.

when the service was ended, a form appeared on the threshold, in armor of steel, a somber and sorrowful figure!
does the bridegroom start and stare at the strange apparition?
does the bride turn pale, and hide her face on his shoulder?

spectral illusion?
a ghost from the grave, that has come to forbid the betrothal?

reupon answered the bridegroom:
"Let all be forgotten between us,—
All save the dear, old friendship, and that shall grow older and dearer!"
Then the Captain advanced, and, bowing, saluted Priscilla,
Gravely, and after the manner of old-fashioned gentry in England,
Something of camp and of court, of town and of country, commingled,
Wishing her joy of her wedding, and loudly lauding her husband.
Then he said with a smile: "I should have remembered the adage,—
If you would be well served, you must serve yourself; and moreover,
No man can gather cherries in Kent at the season of Christmas!"

Great was the people's amazement, and greater yet their rejoicing.
Thus to behold once more the sunburnt face of their Captain,
Whom they had mourned as dead; and they gathered and crowded about him,
Eager to see him and hear him, forgetful of bride and of bridegroom, Questioning, answering, laughing, and each interrupting the other,
Till the good Captain declared, being quite overpowered and bewildered,
He had rather by far break into an Indian encampment,
Than come again to a wedding to which he had not been invited.

Meanwhile the bridegroom went forth and stood with the bride at the doorway,
Breathing the perfumed air of that warm and beautiful morning.
Touched with autumnal tints, but lonely and sad in the sunshine,
Lay extended before them the land of toil and privation;
There were the graves of the dead, and the barren waste of the seashore,
There the familiar fields, the groves of pine, and the meadows;
But to their eyes transfigured, it seemed as the Garden of Eden,
Filled with the presence of God, whose voice was the sound of the ocean.

Soon was their vision disturbed by the noise and stir of departure, Friends coming forth from the house, and impatient of longer delaying,
Each with his plan for the day, and the work that was left uncompleted.
Then from a stall near at hand, amid exclamations of wonder,
Alden the thoughtful, the careful, so happy, so proud of Priscilla, Brought out his snow-white steer, obeying the hand of its master,
Led by a cord that was tied to an iron ring in its nostrils,
Covered with crimson cloth, and a cushion placed for a saddle.
She should not walk, he said, through the dust and heat of the noonday;
Nay, she should ride like a queen, not plod along like a peasant.
Somewhat alarmed at first, but reassured by the others,
Placing her hand on the cushion, her foot in the hand of her husband, Gaily, with joyous laugh, Priscilla, mounted her palfrey.
"Nothing is wanting now," he said with a smile, "but the distaff;
Then you would be in truth my queen my beautiful Bertha!"

Onward the bridal procession now moved to their new habitation,
Happy husband and wife, and friends conversing together.
Pleasantly murmured the brook, as they crossed the ford in the forest,
Pleased with the image that passed, like a dream of love through its bosom, Tremulous, floating in air, o'er the depths of the azure abysses.
Down through the golden leaves the sun was pouring his splendors,
Gleaming on purple grapes, that, from branches above them suspended,
Mingled their odorous breath with the balm of the pine and the fir-tree,
Wild and sweet as the clusters that grew in the valley of Eshcol.
Like a picture it seemed of the primitive, pastoral ages,
Fresh with the youth of the world, and recalling Rebecca and Isaac, Old and yet ever new, and simple and beautiful always,
Love immortal and young in the endless succession of lovers.
So through the Plymouth woods passed onward the bridal procession.

LIGHTHOUSE HAS NO KEEPER

Volcano on San Salvador Whose Flashes of Light Come Regularly Every Seven Minutes.

"What do you think of a perpetual lighthouse, needing no keeper, and yet as regular in its flashes of light as one maintained by the government?" asked Albert D. Van Wyck, a globe trotter, at the Raleigh.

"This natural light never fails, and that means much for navigation. It is a volcano on the island of San Salvador. This volcanic lighthouse is about eight miles inland from the port of Acajutla. It is a veritable pillar of cloud by day, and the flash of its light by night has been valuable to mariners for years. It can be seen far out at sea, and a burst of flame has gone upward every seven minutes, without the variation of a second, for many years.

"The few visitors who stop at San Salvador amuse themselves the first few days by holding their watches and timing the outburst of flame.

"A lighthouse fee is collected of all vessels that put in at the harbor nearest the volcano, and no skipper objects. He knows that the volcano is more reliable than the lighthouses kept by human beings on other coasts, and the novelty of the light is worth the price charged by the government. There is the usual detonation caused by the eruption every seven minutes, and the ground is shaken, but, after a short sojourn on the island you fail to notice it, and would be the more shocked if it did not occur."—Washington Post.

Anne Boleyn's Coach.

"Headless coaches" are fairly numerous. The most famous is the one that drives once a year, on the anniversary of Anne Boleyn's execution, up the avenue at Blicking, her Norfolk home, says the London Chronicle. The coachman and the four horses have not a head between them, and Anne's own is not upon her shoulders, but she holds it in her lap as she sits in the coach all in white. At the hall door the whole apparition vanishes. Anne's father, Sir Thomas, also rides in a coach drawn by headless horses once a year, and his ride is much more exciting than his daughter's. He has to cross forty county bridges during the night and a company of yelling demons pursues the coach to keep the horses going.

Sterilizing Liquids.

Perfect sterilization of liquids by means of filtration only seems to be made possible on a large scale through a process originated by two French scientists and reported to the Academy of Scientists at a recent meeting. It is known that membranes of collodion have the property of retaining all the microbes in a liquid filtered through them. But they are very fragile and therefore impractical outside of the laboratory. By re-enforcing the collodion membrane with a fine wire screen imbedded in it, just as a pane of glass is thus re-enforced, the two scientists constructed a filter not only strong enough for practical purposes but so effective as to exclude even molecules of salts dissolved in the liquid.

Passing of Bridal White.

Bridal white will soon be a misnomer. The old style of dead-white wedding gown and a bouquet of pure white flowers seems to have gone forever.—Tatler.

FOR PERMANENT TAX BOARD

State Tax Commission Have Under Consideration Law Which Is To Be Recommended to Gov.

Des Moines.—The state tax commission has under consideration the first of the new laws to be recommended by it to the governor as part of the revised and amplified tax system to be installed in Iowa. The bill was drawn by A. C. Ripley and C. N. Voss, members of the temporary commission, and relates almost entirely to the creation of a permanent tax commission.

The bill defines the duties of the permanent commission and outlines the powers which shall be delegated to the commission by the legislature. The most important delegated power is that now exercised by the executive council, which is by the terms of the bill, transferred to the permanent commission. The commission is given power to summon witnesses and to compel all persons, firms and corporations to supply information regarding the capital stock, funded or other debts, value of property and other matter which will enable the commission to justly fix on that property.

A new proposition outside of the bill which is being considered is to make the county assessor an employe of the county auditor's office. In this connection the commission is considering the advisability of making the deputy county auditor the county assessor.

Liability Board In Quandary.

The temporary state liability commission finds itself confronted with the proposition of being unable to enforce its requests for information or to secure answers to its blanks sent out to manufacturers. As a result of the failure or refusal of manufacturers and others to supply the information which the commission desires in framing its report to the governor, the work of the commission is greatly embarrassed.

The commission has absolutely no power to enforce its calls for information. Members of the commission have attended conferences of state and federal commissioners and find that states which have commissions of this character are as much in the dark as is Iowa.

One thing which they believe will happen in the conflict between state commissions and the federal commission is that the precedent set in the original package liquor cases of the United States supreme court, will be followed to make the line of demarcation between the authority of the state commission and that of the federal commission in the states.

Bleakly Faces Another Suit.

The American Patriots' Insurance company of Springfield, Ill., will bring suit against State Auditor Bleakly, in his official capacity, to compel hm to give the company the right to sell insurance in Iowa.

The company at one time did business in this state, but was dropped from the list of eligible companies last April. The concern has a large number of policyholders in Iowa.

The suit will be brought notwithstanding the fact that Judge De Graff has ruled that the state auditor could not be compelled, by mandamus suit, to permit the writing of certain kinds of automobile insurance in Iowa in contravention of the state laws. The question raised by the suit of the American Patriots company is very similar to that in the auto case, except that in this case no law is involved, it is simply a question of whether the courts will dictate the discretion to be used by a state official in the performance of his duties.

Thirty Prisoners Released.

Thirty prisoners, all suffering punishment for minor crimes, have been voted paroles by the state board of parole since it began its sessions at the state house. Even with the paroling of prisoners at this rate the prison population of the state in increasing at an alarming rate, according to statements made by members of the board.

"Although we have paroled thirty on the first day of our meeting and have many more to whom paroles will be voted, the prison population at Anamosa and Fort Madison is steadily increasing," said Senator Berry of the board. "One of the causes, I presume, is found in the fact that the courts have begun their winter grind following the vacation period, and naturally many cases which were pending during the summer are being determined and sentence passed upon the prisoners."

Special Examinations.

Special civil service examinations will be held at the postoffice building on the following dates: Apprentice map engraver, Nov. 22; Monotype Keyboard operator, Nov. 22; teacher Indian service, Nov. 22; general mechanic, Nov. 22. Application blanks may be secured from the board secretary.

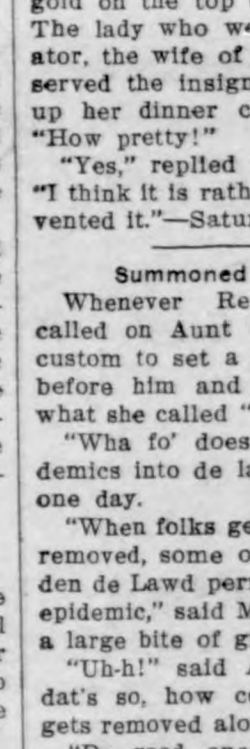
44 Bu. to the Acre is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.



The Silver Cup

at the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta Government for its exhibit of grains, grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1910 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining pre-emptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre) are to be had in the choicest districts.

Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured, mixed farming a success.

Arms Made to Order.

A United States senator, worth millions which he made rapidly, has a coat-of-arms recntly acquired. He gave a large dinner party one night. His coat of arms was emblazoned in gold on the top of the dinner cards. The lady who went in with the senator, the wife of another senator, observed the insignia when she picked up her dinner card and exclaimed: "How pretty!"

"Yes," replied the senator proudly, "I think it is rather neat. My wife invented it."—Saturday Evening Post.

Summoned as Witnesses.

Whenever Rev. Solon Jefferson called on Aunt Candace it was her custom to set a plate of gingerbread before him and then ply him with what she called "'ligious 'spoundin's."

"Wha fo' does de Lawd send epidemics into de land?" she asked him one day.

"When folks get so bad dey must be removed, some of 'em, Sist' Candace, den de Lawd permits de coming ob an epidemic," said Mr. Jefferson and took a large bite of gingerbread.

"Uh-h!" said Aunt Candace. "Ef dat's so, how come de good people gets removed along wid de bad ones?"

"De good ones are summoned fo' witnesses," said Rev. Solon, fortified in spirit and clarified in mind by the gingerbread, although slightly embarrassed in his utterance. "De Lawd gibs every man a fair trial."—Youth's Companion.

RED.

It's the Red Blood Corpuscles That Proper Food Makes.

An Ohio woman says Grape-Nuts food gave her good red blood and restored the roses of youth to a complexion that had been muddy and blotchy. She says:

"For 10 years I had stomach trouble which produced a breaking out on my face. The doctors gave it a long Latin name, but their medicines failed to cure it. Along with this I had frequent headaches, nervousness and usually pain in my stomach after meals.

"I got disgusted with the drugs, stopped them and coffee off short, and quit eating everything but fruit and Grape-Nuts, with Postum for my table beverage.

"The headaches, stomach trouble, and nervous weakness disappeared almost like magic, which showed that when the cause was removed and good food and drink used nature was ready to help.

"My blood was purified and my complexion became like a young girl's, while my weight was increased from 90 to 120 pounds in a few months—good, solid firm flesh, where it used to be soft and flabby.

"I recommended Grape-Nuts and Postum to one of my friends, who was afflicted as I had been. She followed my advice and in a short time was restored to complete health and in about 8 months her weight increased from 100 to 148 pounds.

"Our doctor, observing the effect of Grape-Nuts and Postum in our cases, declared, the other day, that he would hereafter prescribe these food products for gastritis." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The Girl From His Town

By

Marie Van Vorst

IN this altogether charming and delightful story about to appear i serial form in this paper, Miss Van Vorst has taken a young ma out of a Montana mining town and dropped him down uncer moniously in the midst of London's smart set. There he sees an hears and meets Letty Lane, the reigning comic opera success. It is she who The Girl From His Town, for once upon a time she sang in a churc choir on Sundays and on week-days served ice cream soda water at the corn drug store.

It is a clever and dashing story that will leave you happy and satisfie for it is told with an animation that makes you see vividly through the author eyes and her picturesque descriptions.

Otto and His Auto

Old man Otto bought an auto, which he ought not to have done, till he'd studied fully how an auto ought to run, but Otto didn't do it, so he had himself to thank, that when Otto cranked the auto, why, old Otto was the crank. For old Otto left the auto with the lever pushed to go, when he ought to have reversed it, with the power off: you know. So when Otto cranked the auto, the auto gave a jump and landed Otto sprawling with an automatic thump. But Otto grabbed the auto as the auto autoed by, then Otto and the auto down the road did fly, and at a speed that auto luckless Otto whirled, like an automatic autocrat who thinks he owns the world. While the auto hating public stood and watched the auto rush, till it ran against a lamp post with a most terrific crush! Then they sadly laid poor Otto, who had lost his auto zest, where the autoes cease from troubling and the autoers are at rest.—Ex.

Home and the Hen House

Up in a Northwest Iowa community the people are forming anti-chicken and hog thief societies. The middlemen formed an association the other day. Organization is the watchword of the time. Those with interests to defend are inclined to work together in their defense. Except the parents. There is no organization of parents seeking to defend against a greater danger than horse thieves. Short observation any evening will convince of that. The number of young girls on the street utterly unattended makes it plain that nobody has active fears of what may happen to them.

Why is it that a man will lock his barn and his hen house and take chances on his children? Why does a woman hide her watch and jewelery away from thieves and let her 14-year-old girl run loose of nights? Isn't the home as sacred as the hen house?—Times-Republican.

The publishers of the Youth's Companion will, as always at this season, present to every subscriber whose subscription ($1 75) is paid for 1912, a beautiful Calendar for the new year. The cover picture reproduces a water-color painting of a bit of New England coast, giving a glimpse of breeze-swept ocean, of smiling sky, of warm, sunny rocks, which will come like a breath of salt air to those who have once lived near the sea and to those whose whole life has been passed inland. The picture being in eight colors, the tones of the original are faithfully reproduced.

The election in New York was decidedly a Republican victory. In the state the Republicans recovered control of the assembly from the Democrats, more than reversing the positions of the parties in that body, and in New York city they greatly reduced the Tammany pluralities.

Work Progresses Rapidly on The Muscatine-Davenport Line

INTERURBAN CARS ORDERED

Bridge and Trestle Work Nearly Done and Roadbed Will Surely Be Finished In Ample Time To Save the Franchise.

Blue Grass.—The grading almost completed and several miles of rail placed, the Muscatine-Davenport interurban line will be completed long before the time given for the completion of the new electric railway.

When the new interurban has been completed and put in operation the company will have made good and the franchise extension at Davenport will be valid. The entire line will be constructed new and no old track will be used between the city limits of Davenport and the city limits of Muscatine. Entrance to the heart of the city of Davenport will be gained over the Third street line of the Tri-City Railway company and in Muscatine, the terminals may be either on the Rock Island tracks or on the city street car tracks. But the line into Muscatine down to a point near the river will be entirely new line.

Potatoes Unusually Fine.

Rock Rapids.—The farmers of this county cut up a large per cent of their corn and many silos were built and filled this season. Many farmers report a fair yield of corn, but it is seldom the potato crop of the late variety, both in quality and quantity, has been as good as this year. Many carloads have been shipped out at about 45 cents per bushel.

Murder Suspect Located.

Council Bluffs.—Alexander Hunter, suspected of the murder of John Wagner, near Pacific Junction, three weeks ago, and accused of the crime in a story told the police of Council Bluffs, was lodged in jail at Glenwood after a long search. Hunter was arrested on a farm near Craig, Mo. It is said he was wearing a ring like one owned by the dead man.

Light Plant for Bouton.

Perry.—An electric company of this city has secured the contract for the building of an electric light plant and power station at Bouton, just east of Perry. Bouton has made great strides and although still only about 200 in population, it has all the conveniences of most towns. A new opera house and new business houses have been erected in the last few months.

Loses Life In Fire.

Duncombe.—Nels Trossett, one of the prominent men of this city, was burned to death in a fire which completely destroyed the Trossett home here. Mrs. Trossett was away visiting at the time and the cause of the fire is not known. When the fire department was called the firemen chopped away a door and found Trossett's charred body.

Vegetables Are Large.

North McGregor.—A. A. Sawville brought in some apples of the Rock River variety, thirty-five of which make a bushel. Mayor Gilmore has exhibited a squash weighing 112 pounds, raised on the James Shannon farm, a beet weighing twenty-six pounds, and a radish, turnip, rutabaga and potatoes of enormous size.

Prepare for Corn Show.

Boone.—Preparations for the corn and poultry show to be held in the Lincoln armory here Dec. 13 to 16 are going on. The city federation of women's clubs have been asked to assist and expect to hold domestic science demonstration in connection with the show.

Closed On Account of Diphtheria.

Charles City.—The east side central school has been closed on account of the discovery of diphtheria among the pupils. None of the children are seriously ill, but the school board thought it best to prevent any possibility of an epidemic.

Bond Issue Is Voted.

Dubuque.—At the school election in which the largest vote ever polled at such a time was rolled up, the proposition to bond the independent school district for $115,000 for the erection of a new Prescott school building was carried by 1,047 majority.

Carter Goes To Perry.

Boone.—E. D. Carter, vice president of the Boone National bank of this city, has accepted the presidency of the Iowa National bank at Perry.

Paving Work Is Finished.

Shenandoah. — The contractors have finished their work of paving here, nineteen blocks or 25,000 square yards of asphalt-cement.

COME TO MICHIGAN

Many former farm-renters from the Corn Belt are moving here and establishing themselves on farms of their own.

Come and get first choice from some fine tracts recently added. Prices $10 to $35 per acre and much of the land $16 per acre. Terms as low as $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 monthly on 40 acres. Payments annually if preferred. Neighborhood of farms, schools, good roads, new towns, resort lakes and trout streams; big markets nearby and fine transportation; 10 and 20-acre tracts near towns; business and residence lots in new towns; resort lots on Crystal Lake.

Send for 38-page illustrated booklet, large map and improved farm list, all free; should you die the farm will be deeded to your family free. George K. Swigart, Owner, First National Bank Building, Chicago.

EVEN IN THE DEEP.

Mr. Sunfish—I hear that Mr. Black Bass couldn't get on the police force.

Mr. Eel—No, they drew the color line on him.

Tree Destroyers.

Porcupines are good climbers, and when unable to get enough apples wind-blown to the ground, swarm a tree and cut down the finest bearing limbs as quickly and neatly as a beaver can sever the trunk of a young hemlock. Besides that, when other food is scarce they nibble the bark off young apple trees, and can destroy a newly planted orchard in a short time. They also are a great enemy to the young spruce, but why they cut them is a mystery, as it is not found that they even eat the tenderest shoots.

Silent Innuendo.

"That woman always speaks kindly of others."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne; "but she always does it in such a way as to imply that she is making some terrible mental reservations."

he young duchess was slender as llow, very brunette, with a beauti- discontented face.

'm going to show Dan Blair off," Galorey responded, "going to the debutantes a chance."

acidly nodding, the duchess lit a rette and began quoting from Dan 's conversation: "I fancy he 't let them 'worry him;' he's too y!'"

You mean that you're going to him occupied?"

he duchess didn't notice this. s he such a catch?"

ither of the women had walked with the guns. The duchess had d foot, and Lady Galorey never anywhere she could help with husband. She now drew her chair the table in the morning room, hich they had both gone after the ture of the guns, and regarded satisfaction a quantity of sta- y and the red leather desk ap- ments.

t down and smoke if you like, I'm going to fill out some lists." o, thanks, I'm going up to my and get Parkins to 'massey' this y foot of mine. I must have fall- it. But tell me first, is Mr. a catch?"

dy Galorey had opened an ad- book and looked up from it to :

"Something like ten million pounds."

"Heavens! Disgusting!"

"The richest young man 'west of some river or other.' At any rate he told me last night that it was 'clean money.' I dare say the river is responsible for its cleanliness, but that fact seemed to give him satisfaction."

The duchess was leaning on the table at Lady Galorey's side.

"Dan's father took Gordon all over the west that time he went to the states for a big hunt in the Rockies. He got to know Mr. Blair awfully well and liked him. The old gentleman bought a little property about that time that turned out to be a gold mine."

With persistency the duchess said: "How d'you know it is 'clean money,' Edith? Not that it makes a rap of difference," she laughed prettily, "but how do you know that he is rich to this horrible extent?"

Lady Galorey put down her address book impatiently; "Does he look like an impostor?"

The other returned: "Even the archangel fell, my dear Edith!"

"Well," returned her friend, "this one is too young to have fallen far," and she shut up her list in desperation.

The duchess sat down on the edge of the lounge and raised her expressive eyes to Lady Galorey, who once more looked at her sarcastically, and went on:

"Gordon liked the old gentleman; he was extraordinarily generous—quite a type. They called the town after him —Blairtown; that is where the son 'hails from.' He was a little lad when Gordon was out and Mr. Blair promised that Dan should come over here and see us one day, and this," she tapped the table with her pen, "seems to be the day, for he came down upon us in this breezey way without even sending a wire, 'just turned up' last night. Gordon's mad about him. His father has been dead a year, and he is just twenty-two."

"Good heavens!" murmured the duchess. Lady Galorey opened her address book again.

"Gordon's got him terribly on his mind, my dear; he has forbidden any gambling or any bridge as long as the boy is with us. . . ."

Her companion rose and thrust her hands into the pocket of her tweed coat. She laughed softly, then went over to the long window where without, across the pane, the early winter mists were flying, chased by a furtive sun.

"Gordon said that the boy's father treated him like a king, and that while the boy is here he is going to look out for him."

Over her shoulder the other threw out coldly:

"You speak as though he were in a den of thieves. I didn't know Gordon's honor was so fine. As for me, I don't gamble, you know."

Lady Galorey had decided that Lily's insistent remaining gave her a chance to fill her fountain pen. She was, therefore, carefully squirting in the ink, and she flushed at her friend's last words.

Lady Galorey herself was the best bridge player in London, and cards were her passion. She did not remind the lady in the window that there were other games besides bridge, but kept both her tongue and her temper.

After a little silence in which the women followed each her own thoughts, the duchess murmured:

"I'll toddle upstairs, Edie—let you write. Where did you say we were going to meet the guns for food?"

"At the gate by the White Pastures. There'll be a cart and a motor going, whichever you like, around two."

"Right," her grace nodded; "I'll be on time, dearest."

And Lady Galorey with a relieved sigh heard the door close behind the duchess. Wiping her fountain pen delicately with a bit of chamois, she murmured: "Well, Dan Blair is out of Eden, poor dear, if he met her by the gate."

A fortune of a round ten million pounds was a small part of what this young man had come into by direct inheritance from the Copper King of Blairtown, Montana. For once the money figure had not been exaggerated, but Lady Galorey did not know about the rest of Dan's inheritance.

The young man whistling in his rooms in the bachelor quarters of Osdene Park House, dressed for dinner without the aid of a valet. When Lord Galorey had asked him "where his man servant was," Dan had grinned. "Gosh, I wouldn't have one of those Johnnies hanging around me—never did have! I can put on my stockings all right! There was a chap on the boat I came over in who let his man put on his stockings. Can you beat that?" Blair had laughed again. "I think if anybody tickled my feet that way I would be likely to kick him in the eye."

Dressing in his room he whistled under his breath a song from a newly-popular comic opera; and he intoned with a clear young voice a line of the words:

"Should-you-go-to-Mandalay."

Out through his high window, if he had looked, he would have seen the misty sweep of the park under the faint moonrise and fine shadows that the leaves made in the veiled light, but he did not look out. He was dressing for dinner without a valet and giving a great deal of care to his toilet; for the first time he was to dine in the house of a nobleman and in the presence of a duchess; not that it meant a great deal to him—he thought it was "funny."

In Dan Blair's twenty-two years of utterly happy days his one grief had been the death of his father. As soon as the old man had died Dan had gone off into the Rockies with his guides and not "shown up" for months. When he came back to Blairtown, as he expressed it, "he packed his grip and beat it while his shoes were good," for the one place he could remember his father had suggested for him to go.

Blairtown was very much impressed when the heir came in from the Rockies with "a big kill," and the orphan's ease did not seem especially disturbed. But no one in the town knew how the boy's heart ached for the old man. When Dan was six years old his father had literally picked him up by the nape of the neck and thrown him into the water like a pup and watched him swim. At eight he sent the boy off with a gun to rough camp. Then he took Dan down in the mines with the men. His education had been won in Blairtown, at a school called public, but which in reality was nothing more than a pioneer district school.

On Sundays Dan dressed up and went with his father to church twice a day and in the week days his father took him to the prayer meetings, and at sixteen Dan went to college in California. He had just completed his course when old Blair died. Then he inherited fifty million dollars.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Feeding the Rabbits, on His Knees Like a Little Boy.

Music by Electricity.

The "telharmonium," invented by Dr. Thaddeus Cahill, furnishes what is called "electric music," not merely as a transmitter and imitator, but as direct producer of musical tones by means of alternating electric currents. By combining these currents in different ways the operator at the keyboard produces different qualities of tone. Dr. Cahill has recently made improvements which render the instrument capable of producing all sorts of entirely new tones of its own, while its imitation of trumpets, horns, viols and violins may be so perfect as to deceive even the practiced ear of a musical hearer. A single receiver, it is said, responds satisfactorily to any sound from deepest bass to highest treble, and to a single note of pure tone to a full chord of composite tones.

Scotch Dog's Business Instinct.

Left one night on Wagonfire mountain with 3,086 sheep by the death of John Sagoday, her master, one female shepherd dog two weeks later delivered to Manuel Saunders, owner of the sheep, 3,085 of the animals, having lost only one during two weeks of privation. The dog's achievement was carried out despite the fact that she was the mother of puppies only a few days old when her master died.—From Our Dumb Animals.

Love Is All.

When Socrates was asked why he had built for himself so small a house, he replied, "Small as it is, I wish I could fill it with friends." These, indeed, are all that a wise man would desire to assemble; for a crowd is not company, and faces are but a gallery of pictures, and talk but a tingling cymbal, where there is no love.

Have Grave Garments Ready

In an account of the death, at the age of one hundred and four, of Lucy Hickey at Gloucester there appeared the interesting item that she was buried in a shroud which she had made for herself many years ago. "This may look strange to most people," said a resident of the East side, "but not to the old-fashioned Jews. I am sure that if you go through any of the tenement houses in this part of the city you will find in the majority of homes the shrouds of all men and women who are married. It is an old custom to have the grave garments ready, and with some of the people it is considered a shame not to be properly provided in case of death. The garments are usually of fine texture and invariably 'hand sewed.'"

Vanilla Bean in England.

Society women are interested in the horticultural activities of Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, who is cultivating in her garden several vanilla bean vines. The vine is delicate and fragrant and has a commercial value. It is a terrestrial parasite and grows on almost any kind of tree, lighting up the rudest and most attractive bark with its dainty festoons of leaves and tendrils. The beans form early, and even the least experienced amateur can raise the useful vanilla plant.—London Mail.

The Farmer's Son's Great Opportunity

Why wait for the old farm to become your inheritance? Begin now to prepare for your future prosperity and independence. A great opportunity awaits you in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, where you can secure a Free Homestead or buy land at reasonable prices.

Now's the Time

—not a year from now, when land will be higher. The profits secured from the abundant crops of Wheat, Oats and Barley, as well as cattle raising, are causing a steady advance in price. Government returns show that the number of settlers in Western Canada from the U. S. was 60 per cent larger in 1910 than the previous year.

Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop.

Free Homesteads of 160 acres and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Fine climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates; wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

For pamphlet "Last Best West," particulars as to suitable location and low settlers' rate, apply to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to Canadian Gov't Agent.

The Kentucky Blackbirds appeared at the Klemme opera house Monday evening and gave a very satisfactory vaudeville performance. The singing and dancing acts were good—Mack Webster the manager, being king of them all when it comes to buck and wing dancing. The show all the way through was free from the vulgarity and coarse jokes which are so common in the vaudeville acts featured by many companies.

CURED SIX YEARS.

No Fear of Further Kidney Trouble

Mrs. Josiah Clinker, State St., Tama, Iowa, says: "My first symptom of kidney trouble was intense pain in my back. This grew worse until I ached in every part of my body. I rested poorly and was so stiff in the morning I found it hard to dress. I became tired easily, lost flesh and was in a bad way. I was well pleased with the quick relief Doan's Kidney Pills gave me. They drove the pains away and restored my kidneys to a normal condition. I have been free from kidney trouble for six years."

"I have always used Cuticura Soap and no other for my baby and he has never had a sore of any kind. He does not even chafe as most babies do. I feel sure that it is all owing to Cuticura Soap, for he is fine and healthy, and when five months old, won a prize in a baby contest. It makes my heart ache to go into so many homes and see a sweet-faced baby with the whole top of its head a solid mass of scurf, caused by poor soap. I always recommend Cuticura, and nine times out of ten the next time I see the mother she says: 'Oh! I am so glad you told me of Cuticura.'" (Signed) Mrs. G. A. Governor Carroll Issues Proclamation For Thanksgiving Day

RECALLS BLESSINGS OF YEAR

Says Commonwealth Of Iowa Has Abundant Cause for Thanksgiving—We Should Acknowledge Gratefulness.

Des Moines, Nov. 13.—Governor Carroll has issued a proclamation naming Thursday, November 30th, as Thanksgiving day. The proclamation is as follows:

By the governor:

A PROCLAMATION.

When our forefathers met nearly two centuries ago in a day of Thanksgiving to God for the abundant blessings of the year they inaugurated a custom which is typically American.

To us the blessings and benefits which had been bestowed upon them and for which they poured out the devotion of their hearts seem very meager, but apparently those sturdy colonists looked down the ages with prophetic vision and established for us a day commemorative not of past glories nor of the grandeur of former conquests, but for the recounting of the glorious achievements and benefactions of the present.

The commonwealth of Iowa has abundant cause for thanksgiving. Free from any great calamity of devastation our progress during the past year has been marked with peace, plenty and prosperity. It is indeed fitting that we should acknowledge our gratefulness to a Divine Providence.

Therefore, I, B. F. Carroll, governor of Iowa, in conformity with traditional custom and in pursuance of a proclamation issued by the president of the United States, do hereby proclaim Thursday, November 30, 1911, as Thanksgiving day, and urge that we turn aside from our ordinary vocations and gather together in our churches and homes to give thanks to the Omnipotent Giver of all Good.

B. F. CARROLL,
Governor.

Secretary of State.

COFFIN DIVORCE CASE ENDS

Mrs. Coffin Is Defeated In Suit Against the Aged Philanthropist —Court Scores Woman.

Fort Dodge, Nov. 13.—Mrs. L. S. Coffin was defeated in her suit against the aged philanthropist for separate maintenance, according to a decision by Judge Albrook, made public yesterday afternoon. In addition, the judge granted Mr. Coffin a divorce from his wife, and ordered the plaintiff to pay the greater share of the costs.

Scoring Mrs. Coffin as an adventuress who married Mr. Coffin for his money, Judge Albrook declared "Here then, we have a woman full of life, vivacious, keen of intellect, bright and prepossessing, of unusual experience with many men, marrying a man 85 years old, with but one personal recommendation, and that recommendation that in all probability he would not live long. The old gentleman was worth $150,000."

Bad Money Cause Of Death.

Spencer, Nov. 13.—Blood poison supposed to have been contracted while handling money caused the death of Mrs. Fanny Hagerty, for twenty years deputy clerk of Clay county. The blood poison settled back of the eyes and went to the brain. It is believed Mrs. Hagerty got the germs off the money on her hands and then rubbed them into her eyes.

Rapid Increase In Value.

Marshalltown, Nov. 13.—Increase in farm land within the three years is shown in the sale yesterday of 160 acres of land a few miles north of this city. Three years ago C. T. Keen bought the old Joshua Lloyd farm for $97 per acre. Yesterday he sold it to P. L. Collins and sons for $160 per acre.

Wolves Stealing Sheep.

Talbot, Nov. 13.—Wolves have been committing serious ravages to the flocks of sheep near Talbot for some weeks, some farmers losing as high as a dozen sheep in a few nights. Ed. Russell, living three miles northeast of Talbot, recently caught an old coyote in a steel trap.

JUST BEFORE THE TROUBLE

How Could the Listener Know What His Friend Was Trying to Say?

If any man ever admired his wife, that man was Howler. And when the Fitzboodles asked Mrs. Howler to get up and sing "There Is a Garden in My Face" the husband glowed with pride.

No matter that she had a face like a hippopotamus and a voice like an elephant, he sat beaming as she sang, and could not refrain from bending over to his neighbor and whispering: "Don't you think my wife's got a fine voice?"

"What?" said his neighbor, who was a little deaf.

"Don't you think my wife has got a fine voice?" fepeated Howler.

"What?"

"Don't you think my wife's got a fine voice?" roared Howler.

"Sorry!" returned the neighbor, shaking his head. "Can't hear a word you say. That awful woman over there is making such a frightful row singing."

We Get a Sla

The big coffee trust, made up of Brazilian growers and American importers, has been trying various tactics to boost the price of coffee and get more money from the people.

Always the man who is trying to dig extra money out of the public pocket, on a combination, hates the man who blocks the game.

Now comes a plaintive bleat from the "exasperated" ones.

The Journal of Commerce lately said: "A stirring circular has just been issued to the coffee trade." The article further says:

"The coffee world is discussing what is to be the future of coffee as a result of the campaign of miseducation carried on by the cereal coffee people. We have before us a letter from one of the largest roasters in the South asking what can be done to counteract the work of the enemies of coffee.

"The matter should have been taken up by the Brazilian Gov't when they were completing their beautiful valorization scheme."

Then the article proceeds to denounce Postum and works into a fine frenzy, because we have published facts regarding the effect of coffee on some people.

The harrowing tale goes on.

"Where a few years ago everybody drank coffee, several cups a day, now we find in every walk in life people who imagine they cannot drink it. (The underscoring is ours.) Burly blacksmiths, carpenters, laborers and athletes have discontinued or cut down the use of coffee; as there is not a person who reads this and will not be able to find the same conditions existing among his own circle of acquaintances, is it not well for the Brazilians to sit up and take notice?"

Isn't it curious these "burly" strong men should pick out coffee to "imagine" about? Why not "imagine" that regular doses of whiskey are harmful, or daily slugs of morphine?

If "imagination" makes the caffeine in coffee clog the liver, depress the heart, and steadily tear down the nervous system, bringing on one or more of the dozens of types of diseases which follow broken-down nervous systems, many people don't know it.

But it remained for the man who has coffee, morphine or whiskey to sell, to have the supreme nerve to say: "You only imagine your disorders. Keep on buying from me."

Let us continue to quote from his article.

"Notwithstanding the enormous increase in population during the past three years, coffee shows an appalling decrease in consumption."

* * * * *

Then follows a tiresome lot of statistics which wind up by showing a decrease of consumption in two years of, in round figures, two hundred million pounds.

Here we see the cause for the attacks on us and the Brazilian sneers at Americans who prefer to use a healthful, home-made breakfast drink and incidentally keep the money in America, rather than send the millions to Brazil and pay for an article that chemists class among the drugs and not among the foods.

Will the reader please remember, we never announce that coffee "hurts all people."

Some persons seem to have excess vitality enough to use coffee, tobacco and whiskey for years and apparently be none the worse, but the number is small, and when a sensible man or woman finds an article acts harmfully they exercise some degree of intelligence by dropping it.

We quote again from the article:

"These figures are paralyzing but correct, being taken from Leech's statistics, recognized as the most reliable."

* * * * *

This is one of the highes pliments ever paid to the leve ed, common sense of Ame who cut off about two hundre lion pounds of coffee when found by actual experiment (majority of cases) that the drug caffeine, in coffee, work comfort and varying forms ease.

Some people haven't the c ter to stop a habit when they it is killing them, but it is to shift from coffee to Postu when made according to dire it comes to table a cup of bev seal brown color, which tu rich golden brown when cre added, and the taste is ver the milder grades of Old Gov't

WANT LAW CHANGED

13 County Superintendents of Iowa Criticise Inconsistencies

DEEM TUITION LAW DEFECTIVE

Many Teachers Are Not Qualified In the Subjects On Which Pupils Are Required To Pass In the Examination.

Des Moines.—The new school tuition law which became operative this year is defective, say the ninety-nine county superintendents of Iowa. The law which was adopted in the last legislature and then heralded by the educators of the state as a progressive move in rural school education in Iowa, was riddled to pieces by the supervisors of rural education whose duty it is to enforce that law, at their annual session.

According to the intent of the law pupils in rural schools who have gained sufficient credits in eighth grade studies may enter the nearest city high school. The tuition is borne by the school districts from which these rural pupils come. But the law goes still further and prescribes the studies in which the rural grade graduates must attain sufficient credits for city high school entrance. Aside from the regular course of studies the law adds that the pupil must receive credits in the subject of civics. Back farther in statutory school law no teacher is permitted to teach a subject in which he has not qualified for teaching in county teachers' examination. Rural teachers are not always holders of first grade certificates. Had they been able to secure first grade certificates for teaching they would have successfully written an examination in civics, but failing in that subject were granted secondary certificates. With a high school entrance requirement of civics for rural pupils and a law forbidding a teacher to teach a subject in which she has not qualified for teaching, the county superintendents find themselves confronted with a unique problem.

There Is Another Problem.

Under the requirements of the new law a rural school pupil who wishes to attend a neighboring city high school must first secure a certificate of attainment from the superintendent of the county. The pupil fails in his examinations and the county superintendent refuses the certificate. The delinquent pupil appeal to the principal of the high school which he desires to attend. In each instance aver the county superintendents, the high school principal ignores the county superintendent and the pupil is admitted. The tuition fee is the lure, and there is nothing in the law to prevent the principals from admitting the delinquent pupils since the law does not define the duties of the high school principals in the admission of these rural pupils.

Bankers Get the Money.

"Grocers and public service corporations are often attacked by the general public," said B. C. Way, of Mason City, "but the fact is the clothing, drygoods and shoe dealers generally get rich quicker than the grocers do, while the bankers make more money on their capital invested than almost any other branch of business enterprise in the nation. A street car company will have millions of capital invested and make 5 or 6 or even 7 per cent. But a bank with almost no investment and renting the room where it does business will declare dividends of 20 or 30 per cent. Then the people will say that it is a fine bank and that its management is made up of fine business men. That money has been made from the money that other people have given them to keep. They have prospered without any risk of their own. But on the other hand the public service corporation named above would be called a robber and a thief if it should make as high as 10 per cent a year. There seems to be a popular prejudice against the public service corporation. But the banker who really does get away with the big profits is held up as the model man of his community."

Owners Register Rapidly.

Automobile owners are registering their machines with Secretary Hayward at the rate of 150 per day on the average. This is the 1912 registration and the owners who register now are getting their numbers for the new year. The new number entitles the owner to run his machine from January 1, 1912 to December 31, 1912.

Lad Held For Larceny.

Ottumwa.—Lloyd Smith, 15, of Pleasantville, is being held to the juvenile court on a charge of larceny by embezzlement of $39 from the Ottumwa steam laundry.

Longevity Personified.

Senator Benjamin F. Tillman relates an amusing anecdote about a colored man named Jeff, who has been with a neighboring South Carolina family since before the war.

"One day," said Mr. Tillman, "his mistress was rather surprised when old Jeff asked to have a few days off to go, as he put it, "up to de old state of Bosting," to see his aunt.

"'Why, Jeff,' said the lady, 'your aunt must be pretty old, isn't she?'

"'Ye'm,' he replied, 'yes'm; mah aunt must be pretty ole now—she's 'bout ah hundred an' five years ole now.'

"'One hundred and five years!' exclaimed his mistress, 'what on earth is she doing up there in Boston?'

"'Dead, I's dunno what's she's doin', ma'am,' rejoined old Jeff, in all seriousness, 'she's up dere livin' wid her gran'mother.'"

People who take the will for the deed never break into the millionaire class.

Could Hardly Hear

Senses of Taste and Smell Were Also Greatly Impaired.

"I was afflicted with catarrh," writes Eugene Forbes, Lebanon, Kansas. "I took several different medicines, giving each a fair trial, but grew worse until I could hardly hear, taste or smell. I was about to give up in despair, but concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After taking three bottles of this medicine I was cured, and have not had any return of the disease."

Hood's Sarsaparilla effects radical and permanent cures of catarrh.

Caring for Consumptives.

There are now four special methods by which consumptive workmen in the United States are being cared for. In such cities as Albany, Elmira and Binghamton, N. Y., the unions support a separate pavilion or hospital. In cities like Hartford, New Britain and South Manchester, Conn., the workmen contribute towards the maintenance of a fund for the care of consumptives. The employers also contribute to these funds. There are also two national sanatoria for the treatment of tuberculosis owned and operated by labor unions; one by the International Typographical union, and the other by the Printing Pressmen and Assistants' union. In Massachusetts, Illinois and elsewhere large corporations and manufacturers have agreed voluntarily to care for all their consumptive employes for a limited length of time.

Faint?

Have you weak heart, dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals? Or do you experience pain over the heart, shortness of breath on going up-stairs and the many distressing symptoms which indicate poor circulation and bad blood? A heart tonic, blood and body-builder that has stood the test of over 40 years of cures is

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

The heart becomes regular as clock-work. The red blood corpuscles are increased in number—and the nerves in turn are well fed. The arteries are filled with good rich blood. That is why nervous debility, irritability, fainting spells, disappear and are overcome by this alterative extract of medicinal roots put up by Dr. Pierce without the use of alcohol. Ask your neighbor. Many have been cured of scrofulous conditions, ulcers, "fever-sores," white swellings, etc., by taking Dr. Pierce's Discovery. Just the refreshing and vitalizing tonic needed for excessive tissue waste, in convalescence from fevers or for run-down, anæmic, thin-blooded people. Stick to this safe and sane remedy and refuse all "just as good" kinds offered by the dealer who is looking for a larger profit. Nothing will do you half as much good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

DO You Want to Read a New Kind of a Love Story? Here it is in

The Girl From His Town

By

Marie Van Vorst

IN this altogether charming and delightful story about to appear in serial form in this paper, Miss Van Vorst has taken a young man out of a Montana mining town and dropped him down unceremoniously in the midst of London's smart set. There he sees and hears and meets Letty Lane, the reigning comic opera success. It is she who The Girl From His Town, for once upon a time she sang in a church choir on Sundays and on week-days served ice cream soda water at the corner drug store.

It is a clever and dashing story that will leave you happy and satisfied for it is told with an animation that makes you see vividly through the author's eyes and her picturesque descriptions.

WISE WORDS

Many business advantages are gained through a bank account. The merchant who is in want of money in order to take advantage of low prices finds his bank a help. The farmer who needs money but wishes to hold his crops for better prices is taken care of. The laboring man strengthens his position in the community. They all have the confidence of the banker which is very often a great assistance.

Think it over.

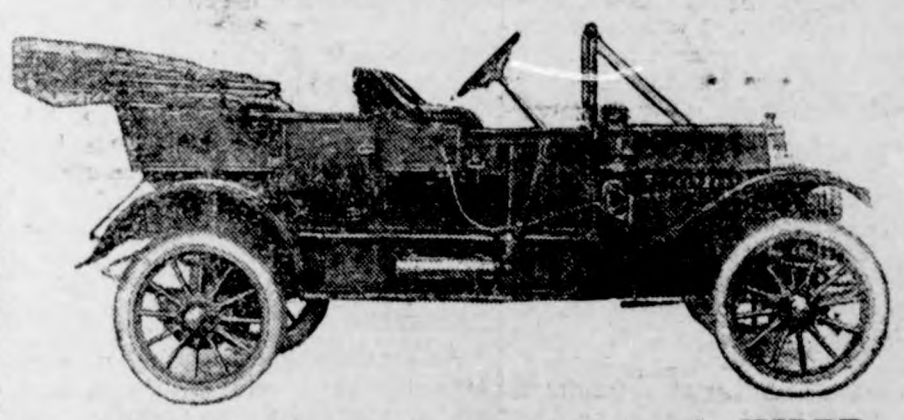
THE IMPERIAL

"THE GET THERE KIND"



It is with pleasure that we advertise the IMPERIAL. When so doing it is hard to say too much in favor of this line of IMPERIAL Automobiles. They have the record up-to-date for running and covering more miles of hard road-going, with the least expense, least adjustments.

The Burd Auto Co., Waterloo, Iowa, says: "The Imperial Automobile has not been equaled yet regardless of price." They run out 37 last season. Up to date there hasn't been one adjustment made. Their contract calls for 100 Imperials for 1911.

The Imperial is built in ten models, from a 35 H. P. two-passenger gentleman's Roadster, to a 60 H. P. seven passenger touring car. Buy the car that bears the name IMPERIAL, and get a dollar's worth of automobile for every dollar you invest.

The state department at Washington has virtually decided to send a regiment of troops from Manila to Chinwingao, a seaport in China, about 250 miles from Peking. The purpose is to perform an international duty under the Boxer treaty in keeping open the line of communication between Peking and the sea.

• • •

"Felons stripes" as a punishment for "trust criminals" in the United States to end "commercial piracy under benevolent 'rules of reason'" are proposed in a bill amending the Sherman anti-trust law drafted by Representative Henry of Texas, to be introduced in the house, upon the opening of congress next month.

• • •

President Taft has indicated that he would not favor any amendment to the Sherman anti-trust law unless given assurance that congress will not pass a federal incorporation act. He let it be known that for the benefit of business men he wants to have the situation clarified as much and as soon as possible.

The sale of chewing gum in ship's stores has been prohibited. This order is regarded as a step toward the banishing of gum from the army and navy.

• • •

Miss Stella Braymer, daughter of Daniel Braymer, one of the richest men in Caldwell county, Missouri, was arreigned in the United States court, charged with using canceled postage stamps in her private correspondence.

• • •

The validity of many Illinois marriages will be affected by the decisiin of the appellate court of southern Illinois, placed on record at Mt. Vernon, Ill. The court held that the Illinois law forbidding the remarriage of divorced people within one year could not be evaded by persons going outside of the state to be married and then returning to this state to live.

• • •

Severe criticism of the trust dismemberment policy of the present administration is made by Theodore Roosevelt in an editorial in the current number of the Outlook. The former president advocates complete governmental supervision of industrial corporations as a remedy for the evils of business combines.

• • •

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey declared a dividend of seven dollars a share for the last quarter of the year. This is the last dividend to be declared before the company dissolves under the mandate of the Supreme Court. Since the Standard Oil was given corporate form in 1882 it has distributed about $751,000,000 in dividends.

Fred Warren, the Socialist editor of Girard, Kan., who was pardoned by President Taft upon conviction for using the mails improperly, has been indicted again for the same offense.

Canada at the Chicago Land Show

WILL MAKE A MAGNIFICENT EXHIBIT OF GRAINS AND GRASSES, VEGETABLES AND FRUIT.

A carload of grain in straw, grasses and other of the products of Western Canada arrived at Chicago the other day, and is now installed in the Coliseum, where the United States land and irrigation exposition is under way. Those who are interested in the "Back to the land movement" will find in the Canadian exhibit one of the best displays of the agricultural products of Western Canada that has ever been made. There are representative men there, who will be pleased to give the fullest information regarding the country.

The exhibit shows what can be done on the free grant lands of that country and most of the grain was produced on the farms of former residents of the United States who have taken advantage of the homestead lands of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The vegetable exhibit will attract a great deal of attention, and some marvelous potatoes, carrots, turnips, cabbage and cauliflower are shown.

It is true that the homestead area is being rapidly taken up and the bulk of that now to be had lies north of the Saskatchewan river in a portion of the country known as the park country. Here there is a large quantity of open prairie interspersed by beautiful groves of poplar and willow. Water is in abundance, hay is plentiful and consequently fodder for animals is right at hand. Those who have taken advantage of farming in these districts and watched the efforts of those in the prairie proper feel that they have the advantage of their brother, who is not able to secure fuel and the other conveniences of the park district on his own farm.

The crop conditions throughout Western Canada the past year have been generally good, and some wonderful crop yields of wheat, oats and barley are recorded. The Canadian Government, under whose auspices the exhibit spoken of is being made, is preparing reports on crops in the different Western Canada districts, and while these will not be ready for distribution at the land show commencing on the 18th of November and closing on Dec. 8th, application made to the Canadian Government agent nearest you will bring them to you as soon as they are published.

JUST MAKING OUT A CASE

Uncle Jeth Had Deep Reason for Occupation That Was Seemingly Unprofitable.

John Collier, the secretary of New York's board of moving picture censors, said the other day:

"It's no good getting up objectionable picture plays. We never pass them. In fact, we turn them down so invariably that it seems to me the composers of such plays are animated by a spirit of perversity. They remind me of old Uncle Jethro Husk.

"Uncle Jethro sat fishing on the bank of a tiny rivulet when a stranger stopped beside him and said:

"'Is it possible that there are any fish in such a small stream as that?'

"'No, there ain't none,' Uncle Jeth grunted.

"'But you're fishing!'

"'Yep,' said Uncle Jeth.

"'What, then, is your object?'

"'My object,' said Uncle Jeth, 'is to show my wife I ain't got no time to sift the ashes.'"

SOUNDED LIKE IT.

KELLY TRIAL TODAY

Council Bluffs Physician to Plead Insanity to Murder Charge

THE TRAGEDY IS RECALLED

Kelly Shot And Killed Deputy Sheriff Clarence Woolman Of Council Bluffs And Then Ed Sterzing Of Des Moines.

Des Moines, Nov. 20.—Temporary insanity will be the defense of Harry D. Kelly, the young Council Bluffs physician, whose trial for the murder of Deputy Sheriff Clarence Woolman of Pottawattamie county and Edmund Sterzing, a Des Moines bartender, begins in the criminal court today. Judge Charles S. Bradshaw will preside at the trial.

Kelly has been incarcerated in the Polk county jail ever since the crime was committed, March 25, last. Apparently, the prisoner is perfectly rational, although at the time the tragedy occurred every indication pointed to his being mentally unbalanced.

The great delay in the trial of the case was due to the illness of Kelly's counsel, J. T. Mulvaney. Considerable criticism has been heaped upon the county officers for not taking up the case more quickly. Judge Bradshaw, however, is anxious to give the young physician a fair trial, and, inasmuch as the attorney in charge of his case has been unable to appear in court, it was decided to allow the trial to go over until such a time as it would be possible for him to be present.

Kelly shot and killed Woolman in a room at the Kirkwood hotel in Des Moines before daylight on the morning of March 25. Afterward he walked to Chiesa's saloon, Third and Court avenue, where he murdered Sterzing.

At the time of the alleged shooting, Kelly was in the custody of Deputy Sheriff Woolman, on his way to the institution for inebriates at Knoxville. It is reported that the pair took several drinks together before retiring on the night of their arrival.

START NEW PACKING PLANT

Des Moines Business Men Secure Control of Agar Plant And Have Ambitious Plans.

Des Moines, Nov. 20.—The Des Moines Packing company, a corporation formed by local capitalists, has secured the property of the Agar Packing company and will commence to operate the plant about Dec. 1. Articles of incorporation for the new company have been prepared by Oscar Strauss, attorney for the concern, and will be filed today. The company is incorporated at $250,000. Simon Casady probably will be made president of the company. Joe Muelhaupt will be vice-president. Other incorporators of the company are: John T. Agar, W. G. Agar, F. P. Mattes, W. S. Hazard, Jr., and J. S. Talbot. J. A. Black and T. A. Dye also are directors of the company.

SENSATIONAL TRIAL BEGINS

Beautiful Woman Charged With Murder Faces Trial Today—Chicago Millionaire Involved.

Denver, Colo., Nov. 20.—A beautiful woman, her wealthy admirer who bestowed gifts, and the young athlete whom she married for love and later shot, are the dramatis personae in the story that culminates today when Mrs. Gertrude Gibson Patterson will be placed on trial for her life. She is charged with murdering her husband, Charles A. Patterson, son of a well-known Chicago family. Emil W. Strouss, millionaire Chicago clothier and clubman, who, Mrs. Patterson says, "bought me for $1,500" from the husband, may or may not come here to testify.

Ogden Mine To Be Opened.

Boone, Nov. 20.—The Ogden Consolidated Coal company's mine No. 2 located two miles south of Ogden, closed for some time owing to labor trouble, is to be opened. New boilers are being installed and other improvements being made preparatory to working the mine to its full capacity.

Potato Crop Money Maker.

Manchester, Nov. 20.—Supervisor F. A. Mead of near this city planted four acres to potatoes this spring and from the four acres he received a yield of more than 900 bushels. Mr. Mead sold a large amount of the crop at sixty cents per bushel. The returns from the four acres averaged more than $100 an acre.

SYNOPSIS.

n Blair, the 22-year-old son of the -million-dollar copper king of Blair-, Mont., is a guest at the English of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had courteous to Lord Galorey during visit to the United States and the tesy is now being returned to the g man.

the day of the shoot at Osdene, dropped sixty birds. He tried hard not to be too pleased. h," he thought to himself, "those fell as though they were trained right, and the other sports were I could see it." He then fell to tling softly the air he had heard Galorey play the night before the new success at the Gaiety, finished it as his toilet completed . He took up a gardenia from his ing table and fastened it in his , stopping on the stairs on the down to look over into the hall re the men in their black clothes the women in their shining ses waited before going into the ng-room. The lights fell on white s and necks, on jewels and on fine d heads. Dan Blair had been in Francisco and in New York, on t journeys, however, which his er, the year before, had directed to take, but he had never seen a w" like this.

e came slowly down the broad rway of the Osdene Park House, last guest. In the corner, where, nd her, a piece of fourteenth cen- tapestry cut a green and pink re against the rich black oak pan- , the Duchess of Breakwater sat ing. She wore a dress of golden e which was simply a sheath to slender body, and from her neck a long rope of diamonds caught e end by a small black fan; there a wreath of diamonds like shining r drops linked together in her . She was the grandest lady at ene, and renowned in more than sense of the word. As Dan saw smile at him and rise, he thought: She is none too sorry that I made record, but I hope to heaven she 't say anything to me about it."

nd the duchess did not speak of it. ing him that he was to take her o dinner, she laid first her fan on arm and then her hand. And Dan, of those fortunate creatures who born men of the world when they into it, gave her his arm with h grace, and as he leaned down ard her he thought to himself:

Well, it's lucky for me I have my d on tight; a few more of those goo eyes of hers and it would be well for me to light out for the ods."

Dan liked best at Osdene Park his n-chins with Gordon Galorey. The ng man was unflatteringly frank in choice of companions. When the chess looked about for him to ride h her, walk with her, to find the luded corners, to talk, to play with , she was likely to discover Dan- gone off with Lord Galorey, and come upon them later, sitting en- oped in smoke, a stand of drinks their side.

To Galorey, who had no heir or d, the boy's presence proved the ppiest thing that had come to him a long time. He talked a great l to Dan about the old man. Ga- ey was poor, and the fact of a for- e of ten million pounds possessed this one boy was continually before mind like an obsession. It was like king down into a gold mine. Ga- ey tried often to broach the sub- t of money, but Dan kept off. At gth Galorey asked boldly:

"What are you going to do with it?"

this occasion they were walking r from the lower park back to the use, a couple of terriers at their els.

"Do with what?" Blair asked inno- ntly. He was looking at the trees. was comparing their grayish green nks and their foliage with the Cali- nia redwoods. A little taken aback, rd Galorey laughed.

"Why, that colossal fortune of urs."

And Blair answered unhesitatingly: t, spend it on some girl sooner or er."

Galorey fairly staggered. Then he k it humorously.

"My dear chap, I never saw a sweet- bigger man than your father. If he d been my father, I dare say I might e pulled off a different yard of hemp, but I must confess that I think he has left you too much money."

"Well, there are a lot of fellows who are ready to look after it for me," Blair answered coolly. Before his companion could redden, he continued: "You see, dad took care of me for twenty-one years all right, and whenever I am up a stump, why all I have to do is to remember the things he did."

For the first time since his arrival at Osdene Dan's tone was serious. Interested as he was in the older man, Dan's inclination was to evade the discussion of serious subjects. With Blair's slang, his conversation was almost incomprehensible.

"Dad didn't gas much," the boy said, "but I could draw a map of some of the things he did say. He used to say he made his money out of the earth."

The two were walking side by side across the rich velvet of the immemorial English turf. The extreme softness of the autumn day, its shifting lights, its mellow envelope, the beauty of the park—the age, the stability, the harmony, served to touch the young fellow's spirits. At any rate there was a ring in him, an equilibrium that surprised Galorey.

"'Most things,' dad said to me, 'go back to the earth.'" He struck the English turf with his stick. "Dad said a fellow had better buy those things that stay above the ground." Dan smiled frankly at his companion. "Curious thing to say, wasn't it?" he reflected. "I remembered it, and I got to wondering after I saw him buried, 'what are the things that stay above the ground?' The old man never gave me another talk like that."

After a few seconds Galorey put in:

"But, my dear chap, you did give me a shock up there just now when you said you were going to spend 'all your money on some girl.'"

The millionaire took a chestnut from his pocket. He held it high above his head and the little dog that had been yelping at his heels fixed his eyes on it. Blair poised it, then threw it as far as he could. It sped through the air and the terrier ran like mad across the park.

"I like girls awfully, Gordon, and when I find the right one, why, then I'm going to feel what a bully thing it is to be rich."

Lord Galorey groaned aloud.

"My dear chap!" he exclaimed.

The spell of the day, the fragrant beauty of the time and place and hour were clearly upon Dan Blair. Lord Galorey was sympathetic to him. The terrier came tearing back with the chestnut held between his thick jaws. Dan bent down to take the nut from the dog and wrestled with him gently.

"Swell little grip he's got. Nice old pup! Let it go now!" And he threw the nut far again, and as the terrier ran once more Blair thrust his hands down in his pockets and began softly to whistle the tune of Mandalay.

He said slowly, going back to his subject: "It must be great to feel that a fellow can give her jewels like the Duchess of Breakwater's, ropes of 'em"—he nodded toward the house—"and a fine old place like this now, and motors and yachts and all kinds of stuff."

His eyes rested on the suave lines of the Elizabethan house, with its softened gables and its banked terraces. Possibly his vivid imagination pictured "some nice girl" there waiting, as they should come up, to meet him.

"I have always thought it would be bully to find a poor girl—pretty as a peach, of course—one who had never had much, and just cover her with things. Hey, there!" he cried to the terrier, who had come running back, "bring it to me."

They had come up to the terrace by this, and Dan's confidence, fresh as a gush of water from a rock, had ceased. His face was placid. He didn't realize what he had said.

From out of one of the long windows, dressed in a sable coat, her small head tied up in a motor scarf, the Duchess of Breakwater appeared. She greeted them severely, and Lord Galorey heard her say under her breath to Dan:

"You promised to be back to drive with me before dinner, Dan. Did you forget?"

The Duchess of Breakwater Appeared.

And as Galorey left the boy to make his peace, the first smile of amusement broke over his face. He felt that the duchess had between her and her capture of Dan Blair's heart the elusive picture of some "nice girl"—not much perhaps, but it might be very hard to tear away the picture of the ideal that was ever before the blue eyes of this man who had a fortune to spend on her!

CHAPTER II.

The Duchess Approves.

His attentions to the Duchess of Breakwater had not been so conspicuous or so absorbing as to prevent the eager mothers—who, true to her word, Lady Galorey had invited down—from laying siege to Dan Blair. Lady Galorey asked him:

"Don't you want to marry any one of these beauties, Dan?" And Blair, with his beautiful smile and what Lily called his inspired candor, answered:

"Not on your life, Lady Galorey!"

And she agreed: "I think myself you are too young."

"No," Dan refuted, "you are wrong there. I shall marry as fast as I can."

His hostess was surprised.

"Why, I thought you wanted your fling first."

And Dan, from his chair, in which, with a book, he had been sitting when Lady Galorey found him, answered cheerfully:

"Oh, I don't like being alone. I want to go about with some one. I should like a fling all right, but I want to fling with somebody as I go."

The lady of the house was not a philosopher nor an analyst. She had certain affairs of her own and was engrossed in them and lived in them. As far as Lady Galorey was concerned the rest of the world might go and hang itself as long as it didn't do it at her gate-post. But Blair couldn't leave any one indifferent to him very long, not unless one could be indifferent to a blaze of sunlight; one must either draw the blinds down or bask in its brightness.

She laughed. "You're perfectly delicious! You mean to say you want to be married at once and let your wife fling around with you?"

"Just that."

"How sweet of you, Dan! And you won't marry one of these girls here?"

"Don't fill the bill, Lady Galorey."

"Oh, you have a sweetheart at home, then?"

"All off!" he assured her blithely, and rose, tall and straight and slender.

The Duchess of Breakwater had come in, indeed she never failed to when there was any question of finding Blair.

Dan stood straightly before the two women of an old race, and the American didn't suggest any line of noble ancestors whatsoever. His features were rather conglomerate; his muscles were possibly not the perfect elastic specimens that were those muscles whose strain and sinew had been made from the same stock for generations. He was, nevertheless, very good to look on. Any woman would have thought so, and he bent his blond head as he looked at the Duchess of Breakwater with something like benevolence, something of his father's kindness in his clear blue eyes. Neither of the noble ladies vaguely understood him. His hostess thought him "a good sort," not half bad, a splendid catch, and the other woman, only a few years his senior, was in love with him. The duchess had married at eighteen, tired of her bargain at twenty, and found herself a widow at twenty-five. She held a telegram in her hand.

"We've got the box for Mandalay tonight at the Gaiety, and let's motor in."

Characters Out of Scraps

Thackeray's Personages Were Patchworks, Seldom to Be Recognized as Portraits of Actual Persons.

Thackeray rarely drew an out and out portrait, though he sometimes ventured on a recognizable caricature of people he detested. In a "Roundabout Paper" called "De Finibus" he asserts that he creates his personages out of "scraps, heel-taps, odds and ends of characters." Lady Anne Thackeray Ritchie corroborates this. "My father," she writes in answer to a private request for information, "scarcely ever put real characters into his books, though he, of course, found suggestions among the people with whom he was thrown. I have always thought there was something of himself as Warrington. Perhaps the serious part of his nature was vaguely drawn in that character. There was also a little likeness to his friend, Edward Fitzgerald, who always lived a very solitary life."

Warrington, indeed, may be taken as a typical instance of how Thackeray made up his own personages out of "odds and ends of characters." In the circumstances of his life Fitzgerald was the closest of all prototypes that have been suggested. Like Warrington, he had married beneath him though not so far beneath as Warrington; he had found his wife utterly uncongenial and had left her in comfortable circumstances to make his own way in London in poverty and obscurity. To add the final touch of pathos, Thackeray painted Warrington's abandoned wife as a bad woman, which Mrs. Fitzgerald was not, but only a very foolish and snobbish one.

Besides the originals already suggested, James T. Field hints at a fourth in Barry Cornwall, and Gen. James Grant Wilson says Thackeray told a Philadelphian that Warrington was an English professor of Latin.—William S. Walsh, in Columbian.

Books and Happiness.

Of the things that make for happiness, the love of books stands first. A book, unlike a friend, will wait not only upon the hour, but upon the mood.—Myrtle Reed.

Prejudice Is a Serious Menace

Prejudice is a hard thing to overcome, but where health is at stake and the opinion of thousands of reliable people differs from yours, prejudice then becomes your menace and you ought to lay it aside. This is said in the interest of people suffering from chronic constipation, and it is worthy of their attention.

In the opinion of legions of reliable American people the most stubborn constipation imaginable can be cured by a brief use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You may not have heard of it before, but do not doubt its merits on that account, or because it has not been blatantly advertised. It has sold very successfully on word of mouth recommendation. Parents are giving it to their children today who were given it by their parents, and it has been truthfully said that more druggists use it personally in their families than any other laxative.

Letters recently received from Mr. Harry Hackenburg, Elliott, Iowa, and Mrs. E. Goding, Dix, Nebr., are but a few of thousands showing the esteem in which Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is held. It is mild, gentle, non-griping — not violent, like salts or cathartics. It cures gradually and pleasantly so that in time nature again does its own work without outside aid. Constipated people owe it to themselves to use this grand bowel specific.

Anyone wishing to make a trial of this remedy before buying it in the regular way of a druggist at fifty cents or one dollar a large bottle (family size) can have a sample bottle sent to the home free of charge by simply addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Your name and address on a postal card will do.

Poor Conversationalist.

"Is your husband a good after-dinner talker?"

"No, indeed. As soon as he's had dinner he lies down on the couch and falls asleep, and I never get a word out of him."

A well-known expert in cooking encountered trouble in a suburban community the other afternoon when she prepared to lecture to the Mothers' club. Her subject was "How to Cook." She began by telling how much a man appreciates good cooking, and then she proposed to give various recipes.

Among the first was one for cold slaw. "To have this best," began the lecturer, "take a good-hearted cabbage and—"

At this point a young matron interrupted. She was eager to get all the information possible. "Tell me, please," she spoke up, "how is one to know the disposition of a cabbage?"—Philadelphia Times.

Business Instinct Strong.

A photographer tells as a joke on himself that a woman, accompanied by a little boy, came into his studio the other day. "I want my pickcher took," she said. "I see that you take pickchers for four dollars a dozen this week, so I come fer mine. And I want this little boy took in the same pickcher with me." "Yes, madam—but, of course, we made an extra charge outside this special rate when two pictures are taken at once." "Oh," says the lady, "but I'll keep the boy in my lap. That's the way I do in the street cars, and no body ever says anything."

Mrs. Jim Elder died last Friday at her home in Garner. Funeral services were held on Monday afternoon, and several from Klemme attended. Mrs. Elder was an old settler and had been an invalid for years.

To Our Advertisers—On account of the fact that Thanksgiving Day comes on next Thursday, we will try to print one day earlier next week. Copy for display ads in next week's Times must be in on Monday to insure publication.

We have made arrangements whereby we can furnish the Daily Chicago Record-Herald and the Klemme Times both one year for $4.00, the price of the Record-Herald alone. Take advantage of this liberal offer while you can.

The town of Renwick had a bad fire last week Wednesday. Eight business houses were destroyed, among them being the First National Bank building and the building occupied by the Renwick Times. It will be remembered that F. J. Wenck, formerly of Klemme, is cashier of the above named bank. His many Klemme friends will be sorry to hear of his misfortune.

Wm. Straatman, who we mentioned last week as going to have a sale and move to town, has made an enviable record as a farm renter. He has lived continuously on the same farm for eighteen years, which is some record for a renter. He must be an excellent farmer and the owner of the farm, August Katter, surely must be a model landlord. We think this record would be hard to beat, or even equal.

Mrs. A. C. Flint is on the sick list.

Henry Medaus and wife entertained relatives from Woden this week.

Dave Watterston has sold his jewelry stock at Garner to M. Zieger and will move to Charles City.

If our subscribers come across in good style, perhaps the editor and family can have Thanksgiving turkey too.

At Klemme opera house, November 30th, Meyers, lecturer. Second number of high school lecture course.

M. Elder and wife and Ralph Elder and wife attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Jim Elder at Garner, Monday.

Mrs. Frank Wellemeyer left Tuesday for her home in Charles City, after a visit here with her son, Arthur. Mrs. Wellemeyer was at Dows, Sunday, where she delivered a missionary address.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Ridder celebrated their twelfth wedding anniversary yesterday. The invited guests were royally entertained and Mr. and Mrs. Ridder were the recipients of many nice gifts.

According to news dispatches in the daily papers from Ackley, Iowa, Black Hand letter writers have been getting in their work there. John Bleeker, father of I. B. Bleeker formerly of Klemme, is the recipient of the letter which demanded him to deposit $5000 at an isolated spot in the edge of town. The penalty for not obeying was supposed to be death. It is to be hoped the rascals will be apprehended and given their just deserts.

Kidney Troubles Lower the Vitality of the Whole Body.

Don't wait for serious kidney illness; begin using Doan's Kidney Pills when you first feel backache or notice urinary disorders. David P. Corey, 236 W. Washington St., Ionia, Mich., says: "I had kidney trouble so badly, that for six months I could only get around with a cane or crutches. The backache grew gradually worse until I was compelled to take to my bed. While still in bed, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and gradually improved until well."

MERE SUGGESTION.

Miss Antique—I have so much on my mind; I wish I knew what to do for relief.

Miss Caustique—Why not remove your switch?

His Honor Unimpaired.

"No," said the old shoemaker, sternly, "I will not do it. Never have I sold anything by false representations, and I will not begin now."

For a moment he was silent, and the shopman who stood before him could see that the better nature of his employer was fighting strongly for the right.

"No," said the old man again, "I will not do it. It is an inferior grade of shoe, and I will never pass it off as anything better. So just mark it 'A shoe fit for a queen,' and put it in the window. A queen, you know, does not have to do much walking."

Incurable.

"You say you are your wife's third husband?" said one man to another during a talk.

"No, I am her fourth husband," was the reply.

"Heavens, man!" said the first speaker. "You are not a husband—you're a habit."

Proved.

Orator—I thought your paper was friendly to me?

Editor—So it is. What's the matter?

Orator—I made a speech at the dinner last night, and you didn't print a line of it.

Editor—Well, what further proof do you want?—London Opinion.

A BRAIN WORKER.

Must Have the Kind of Food That Nourishes Brain.

"I am a literary man whose nervous energy is a great part of my stock in trade, and ordinarily I have little patience with breakfast foods and the extravagant claims made of them. But I cannot withhold my acknowledgment of the debt that I owe to Grape-Nuts food.

"I discovered long ago that the very bulkiness of the ordinary diet was not calculated to give one a clear head, the power of sustained, accurate thinking. I always felt heavy and sluggish in mind as well as body after eating the ordinary meal, which diverted the blood from the brain to the digestive apparatus.

"I tried foods easy of digestion, but found them usually deficient in nutriment. I experimented with many breakfast foods and they, too, proved unsatisfactory, till I reached Grape-Nuts. And then the problem was solved.

"Grape-Nuts agreed with me perfectly from the beginning, satisfying my hunger and supplying the nutriment that so many other prepared foods lack.

"I had not been using it very long before I found that I was turning out an unusual quantity and quality of work. Continued use has demonstrated to my entire satisfaction that Grape-Nuts food contains the elements needed by the brain and nervous system of the hard working public writer." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

IOWA APPLE SHOW

20

Will Be Held In Des Moines Second Week Of December

MANY INTERESTING FEATURES

The Hawkeye State Has Them All Outclassed On Apples and the Producers of Iowa Intend To Demonstrate the Fact.

Des Moines.—Iowa can grow as fine apples as Washington, Oregon, and other much-advertised states, if the people were only "wise" to that fact. That they may know that it is fact, an exceptionally fine apple show will be held at the state house the second week in December. The annual meeting of the state horticultural society will be on at that time and while there has always been an apple show in connection with the meeting of the society, the show this year will be something exceptional.

The exceptional and interesting feature of this year's show will be exhibits of boxed fancy apples. It is the plan of Secretary Wesley Greene and others in charge of the show to have numerous boxes of choice Iowa apples, which have been packed by an expert, on exhibition. An expert will be present at the show to demonstrate how to pack apples in the most approved fashion.

One of the glories of the Oregon and Washington apples has been the manner of their packing. When it comes down to solid facts their apples are not better than Iowa apples. But they look better in the boxes and so people get the idea that they are better. It is only the power of suggestion. Iowa apple enthusiasts have decided that they will use a little of this power of suggestion to demonstrate what Iowa can do in the apple growing industry.

One of the big features of the state horticultural meeting will be the discussion of Wesley Greene's proposition for a state fruit exchange similar to those operated in California and Florida. It is believed that much good will result for the Iowa fruit industry if an exchange is established in this state.

Board of Health Has Full Power.

A city board of health may decide to disinfect every residence if it thinks such a proceeding would benefit the public health, and the county would have to stand the expense. In a decision filed by the supreme court reversing the lower court in the case of S. H. Sawyer, health officer for the town of Eldon against Wapello county. Sawyer sued the county for services in disinfecting numerous buildings in which persons had been sick with contagious diseases, but not quarantined. The county argued that it did not have to pay for disinfecting except those that had been quarantined. "In our judgment that is too narrow a construction of the statutes," the court says. "Its entire purpose is to protect the public from the evil effects of infectious or contagious diseases, and it is made the duty of the board of health to make such provisions as shall, in its judgment, best afford such protection, and to this end the board is given absolute control over the diseased persons and over the premises they occupy at the time. It is just as incumbent upon the board to protect the public by the exercise of authority over the building as it is the exercise of authority over the person. "The statute leaves it with the board of health to determine what infectious or contagious diseases are a menace to the public health, and provides that the board shall also determine what steps shall be taken to best protect the inhabitants therefrom."

Claims Sale of Bad Hay.

The farmer who sells baled hay that proves to be rotten and unfit for feeding is liable to prosecution under the pure food laws of Iowa. The state dairy and food department is prosecuting its first case of such a nature at Malvern. Inspectors "Mike" Flynn and John Milnes are representing the department in the case. W. S. Dickerson of Pacific Junction is accused of selling a carload of baled alfalfa hay, a portion of which was rotten. The hay was sold under the assumption that it was "pure" hay, the state contends, and the fact that it was rotten brings it within the law, so it is stated.

Owners Register Rapidly.

Automobile owners are registering their machines with Secretary Hayward at the rate of 150 per day on the average. This is the 1912 registration and the owners who register now are getting their numbers for the new year. The new number entitles the owner to run his machine from January 1, 1912 to December 31, 1912.

NEW IOWA TAX COMMISSION

Provides For Three Members To Be Named By Governor—Terms To Expire Alternate Two Years.

Des Moines.—The bill to be presented to the Thirty-fifth general assembly creating a permanent state tax commission has been completed by the members of the temporary tax commission. As finally drafted the bill provides for three commissioners, whose terms shall begin June 30, 1913, one of whom shall serve until June 30, 1915, one until June 30, 1917, and one until June 30, 1919. Thereafter the commissioners shall be appointed for six years, the appointments being made by the governor, with the advice and consent of the senate.

The bill takes from the executive council all of its assessment duties and transfers them to the tax commission. The members are to receive $3,600 per year, devote their entire time to the work, and shall not engage in any other business or work. They have power to appoint a secretary, who must be a statistician, at a salary of $2,400 per year. The commission must be non-partisan, and each member must give a bond of $10,000 for faithful performance of his duties.

The New Tax System.

"The new taxation system which the tax commission is trying to work out for Iowa follows the thought of the Des Moines plan of municipal government in centralizing responsibility in as few people as possible," said B. E. Stonebraker, a member of the temporary commission. "The idea is to make the state tax commission absolute and final in all tax matters. Our plan calls for a county assessor who shall be responsible for the actions of all local assessors and who shall sit as a board of review on the assessments fixed by the local men. But the proposed state tax commission is to be given power to compel the county board of review to reconvene at any time and lower or raise the assessments of a particular county or class of property according to the dictates and judgment of the state commission. The proposed commission will also have power to inquire into the system of accounting of public funds of cities, towns and counties in this state."

Mutual Insurance Association.

After placing the affairs of the Iowa Mutual Insurance association in charge of President P. J. Shaw of Plover, Iowa, and Secretary Frank Paul of Mason City, the newly-elected officers, the convention which held a two days' session in Des Moines, adjourned to meet in Des Moines in November, 1912. The measure projected by the association to secure a law establishing uniform insurance rates in Iowa, will be strenuously supported by the individual mutual associations and the state movement is placed in charge of Messrs. Homrighaus, Denison and Evans, who will do the missionary work as the legislative committee. Automobile insurance was not indorsed, nor was the measure to reduce the rate on rodded buildings. A new law giving the fire marshal more power, is urged by the association. There were 170 mutual associations represented in the convention.

Best Sailors Come From Inland.

Uncle Sam's best sailors are not recruited from salt water towns, but come from states like Iowa, according to Lieut. W. P. Gaddis, who is in command of the recruiting offices of the state, the headquarters of which recently has been moved from Cedar Rapids to Des Moines. "It is from the middle west that the navy gets its best recruits," said Lieutenant Gaddis, who is a graduate of Annapolis. "The United States navy has been the most efficient organization in the world because of the caliber of the men from this section of the country. Since the Spanish-American war the efficiency of the navy has been more than doubled. Our showing against Spain was good only because Spain's navy was so weak. The gunners then made only about 4 per cent of hits. Now the gunners make hits in 40 per cent of the shots fired. The war taught this country a good lesson and it is profiting by it."

Milk Licenses Must Be Secured.

Commissioner Barney has begun his crusade against all milk dealers in the state who have not taken out the state milk license provided by the new law which became effective July 4th. His first action was to get after some Des Moines dealers who have refused to take out the licenses. He withholds the names until the prosecutions are actually filed in the justice courts. He proposes to get after every dealer who has refused to take out the new state license. The law is a broad one and covers everybody who makes a business of selling milk for profit from a herd of more than two cows.

NOT SO SURPRISING.

"They tell me Daring Ike's dead. Is that right?"

"Well, I ain't surprised, then; his heart always was weak."

Four Lines Will Be Involved In The Big Deal

WHOLE STATE IS BENEFITED

Iowa Executive Council Sanctions the Move To Get Money To Pay For Iowa Central and Make Albia Extension.

Des Moines.—The executive council has granted the request of General Counsel Seevers of the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad company for permission to issue additional capital stock to the amount of $10,000,000. This means that the company has the authority of the state to take over the property of the Iowa Central railroad company, build its line from Albia south to St. Louis and make the other improvements which the officials of the road contemplated for Iowa.

The officials are planning to connect the Iowa points with the south Atlantic seaboard by making a traffic arrangement with the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad company through Peoria, Ill. The resolutions show that the purchase price of the Iowa Central will be $7,500,000.

Meeting of the stockholders of the Minneapolis & St. Louis line will be held December 18 and 19 at the company headquarters in Minneapolis. Simultaneously, stockholders of the Iowa Central will meet at Chicago. Both companies have agreed to the deal.

Released From Poison Charge.

Northwood.—Mrs. Etta Larson was acquitted of the charge of having attempted to poison her father, Douglas Rhodenbaugh, a wealthy stockman and farmer here. The jury reported its verdict of not guilty after having been out for twenty hours. Judge Clyde immediately dismissed the cases against Christian Larson, the woman's husband, and Ella Mowers, a friend, who were implicated in the poisoning charge.

Ottumwa Gas Plant Sold.

Ottumwa.—The Ottumwa Gas Light, Heat and Power company, which has been owned by local parties, has been sold to the Western Utilities company, controlled by Grand Rapids, Mich., and Chicago capitalists. The company will be reorganized and an issue of $750,000 of bonds floated for extensions.

Do You Blame Him?

Marshalltown.—Rev. E. Howard Brown, with a wife and six children has resigned as pastor of the Friends church, because the congregation by a majority of one voted to reduce his salary from $1,000 to $800 a year. The church also asked him to credit the church with all fees for funerals, weddings, etc.

Trying To Beat Record.

Sidney.—Bert Van Houten, who lives near Sidney, made an attempt to break the world's record for corn husking. He husked 210 bushels and fifty pounds in ten hours. The record made by Ora Hopkins seven years ago, 217 bushels and twenty pounds in ten hours, never has been equaled.

Convict Watson Is Dead.

Fort Madison.—Thomas Watson, life convict, whose serious illness recently gave rise to a demand for the present investigation of Iowa prison conditions died of dropsy in the penitentiary hospital here. Watson, who was 55 years old, was convicted of first-degree murder in Mills county in 1884.

May Be Given New Trial.

Keokuk.—Because County Attorney T. A. Craig read passages from the Bible in swaying the jury for the purpose of convicting John Roland of the murder of Mrs. Lily Jones, the defendant's attorney has asked for a new trial.

Keane Given Fine Residence.

Dubuque.—A handsome residence, furnished at great expense, was presented to Archbishop Keane by the 200 priests here attending the archdiocesan synod. The presentation was made by Dean Heer of Dubuque.

Aged Man Poisoned.

Burlington.—"I have been poisoned" shouted Andrew Olson, aged 67, as he rushed into the police station. A shot time afterward he died in convulsions and the coroner is making an investigation.

Dies In South America.

Waterloo.—Dr. William Thompson, 45, government expert on tuberculosis in cattle is reported dead in South America, where he went for the government. He died of tuberculosis.

Iowa Naval Station.

Des Moines.—Lieutenant W. P. Gaddis, U. S. N., will be in charge of the naval recruiting headquarters of the state of Iowa, which has been removed from Cedar Rapids to Des Moines. With Lieutenant Gaddis are associated Dr. R. L. Longahaugh, A. J. Marshall, chief clerk; W. Chester, clerk to Dr. Longahaugh; H. Yeagers, coxwain, and Charles J. Furey, seaman.

Hindoo Seer Gets New Trial.

Des Moines.—Because of the insufficiency of the evidence, and because of technical errors in the trial, the supreme court reversed the finding of the district court in the case of "Count" C. A. Nathoo of Des Moines, who was sentenced to serve a penitentiary term of twenty years by Judge Lawrence De Graff upon his being convicted of assault on an insensible girl.

Garton To Leave Pulpit.

Waterloo.—It will be interesting news to the many acquaintances in Iowa of the Rev. Richard Garton, D. D., for many years pastor of the First Baptist church in this city, to learn that he has retired from the ministry and gone with his wife to live in California. Mrs. Garton recently fell heir to a fortune of $250,000.

Horses Wearing Muzzles.

Weldon.—Farmers of this community are buying wire muzzles to prevent their horses from eating cornstalks while in the fields during the husking season. The appearance of a poisonous mold on the stalks is causing considerable worry in the community, as several horses have died from eating it.

Man Found Unconscious.

Waterloo.—A man, 55 years old, believed to be A. L. Atwood, a trapper, was found unconscious in the garden of the J. S. Goodwin home early in the morning and injuries about his head may prove fatal. A bloody hammer was found nearby. A trail of blood showed Atwood had been dragged.

Contests Sister's Will.

Des Moines.—Trial of the Crawford will case has begun in the district court. Arthur C. Davis is contesting the will of his sister, Alice Crawford, who died several months ago, leaving the bulk of her estate of $30,000 to a niece, Miss Bessie Miller. Davis was bequeathed only $25.

Deserted Boy Is Found.

Mason City.—Supposedly deserted by both his parents, Donald Carver Pierce, 7 years old, was picked up by the police. The little fellow was only half clad and had only parts of shoes on his feet. The police are making an active search for the parents of the child.

Says Banker Refused to Marry.

Indianola.—Mary A. Nolan is trying to convince a jury in Judge Hayes' court that William A. Nolan, a banker of Cumming should pay her $15,000 for heart balm. She says he promised to marry her, won her young love and then failed to get the license.

Loss Reaches Big Figure.

Mason City.—The loss to the Lehigh Cement company, due to the fire which destroyed a part of the roof of the storeroom, sacking department and burned several thousand sacks, will be between $50,000 and $75,000, according to estimates.

Keokuk Owls Start Something.

Keokuk.—The local nest of Owls has made sensational charges against the supreme nest of South Bend, Ind., in an answer to a suit started in the district court. It is claimed that negro lodges have been organized in violation of the constitution.

Church Property Valuable.

Iowa City.—The valuation of all the Catholic church property here, with the exception of the hospital, is about $700,000. This was announced after the listing of the property preparatory to placing it under an incorporation.

Date For Dedication Set.

Keokuk.—The handsome new St. Mary's Catholic church, which is rapidly nearing completion, will be dedicated on Jan. 28, according to an announcement made by Rev. George C. Giglinger, pastor.

Will Construct New Terminal.

Des Moines.—The Hawley interests will extend the Iowa Central railway from Albia to St. Louis by the construction of 200 miles of new road according to the announcement by G. W. Seevers, general counsel of the Minneapolis & St. Louis railway and Iowa Central lines.

Drinks Carbolic Acid.

Storm Lake.—Telling his mother he had lived long enough, Arthur Preston, 25 years old, drank carbolic acid and died before a physician could reach him.

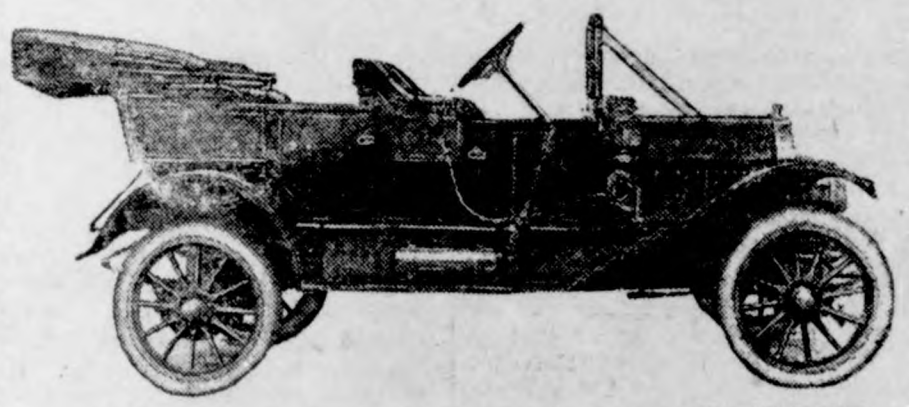
THE IMPERIAL

"THE GET THERE KIND"



It is with pleasure that we advertise the IMPERIAL. When so doing it is hard to say too much in favor of this line of IMPERIAL Automobiles. They have the record up-to-date for running and covering more miles of hard road-going, with the least expense, least adjustments.

The Burd Auto Co., Waterloo, Iowa, says: "The Imperial Automobile has not been equaled yet regardless of price." They run out 37 last season. Up to date there hasn't been one adjustment made. Their contract calls for 100 Imperials for 1911.

The Imperial is built in ten models, from a 35 H. P. two-passenger gentleman's Roadster, to a 60 H. P. seven passenger touring car. Buy the car that bears the name IMPERIAL, and get a dollar's worth of automobile for every dollar you invest.

DRAGGING FUND LAW

Attorney General Gives Opinion On Road Working Question

LIMIT FIFTY CENTS PER MILE

Says Superintendent of Dragging Has No Right to Drag the Roads Within the Corporate Limits Of Cities and Towns.

Des Moines.—The attorney general's office has made several important rulings on the new state road drag law, one of the most important of which is that the fund created by the one mill tax levy for the payment of drags used on the roads. The opinion of the department was asked by Frank Nimocks, of Ottumwa, on several phases of the new law which have not been interpreted. The opinion says in part:

"In view of these provisions of the law it is very clear that road drags are to be paid out of the township road fund and no part of the dragging fund created by the one-mill levy may be used for this purpose. While the statute does not specify the number of drags that a township must purchase or that the trustees are to provide, it is plain that a sufficient number must be furnished to answer the needs of the particular township.

"This department has held that the amount that can be paid for dragging the roads is not to exceed 50 cents per mile for every mile necessarily and actually traveled with the drag upon the highway while in the act of dragging the same, in accordance with the contract therefor. But this would not include travel in going to and from the place where the work is done upon the highway. You will note that the law says that the township trustees are to fix the compensation and the maximum amount at which they are allowed to fix the same is 50 cents.

"The maximum amount that can be allowed as a per diem to the superintendent of dragging by the trustees for all services except the serving of notice upon contractors, is $2.50 per day.

"The superintendent of dragging has nothing to do with the dragging of roads within the corporate limits of cities and towns. Section 4 of the act makes it the duty of the city or town council of cities and towns to cause the main traveled roads within the corporation limits leading into the city or town to be dragged."

Liability Limiting Invalid.

Any clause in a bill of lading issued by any railroad in Iowa limiting the liability of the company for damages to any class of live stock or freight is invalid.

This is the ruling of the supreme court handed down this week. The opinion was given in the suit of Jelske Cramer against the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad company. Some of the plaintiff's hogs were killed in transit. It seems the road had a bill of lading through which the shipper could get a lower rate on his hogs if he would sign the liability clause to the effect that he was not to recover more than $10 per head for injury done his animals. He took the lower rate. In the district court he was awarded damages in the sum of $828, which was considerably more than the $10 per head clause.

Liability Case Appealed.

Notice of the appeal to the supreme court of the automobile liability insurance case by the American Fidelity company has been filed. The supreme court will hear the case during the January term. Judge Lawrence De Graff of the Polk county district court handed down a decision in the suit two weeks ago, upholding the action of the state auditor, in refusing permission to the company to write business in Iowa. The company wants to write a policy for automobile owners which provides against accidents that may result from the operation of the automobile.

Live Stock Hearing Resumed.

The rehearing of the minimum live stock weight case was resumed before the state railroad commission following a six days' suspension of the case. The case is one of the most important for the shippers of Iowa as a reversal of the commission's former ruling in the case would cost the live stock shippers of Iowa from $50,000 to $100,000 per year.

In New Orleans.

F. E. Roberts, chief bank examiner in the office of the state auditor, is representing the state at the annual convention of the National Bankers' association, which is in session at New Orleans, La. More than a score of Iowa bankers are in attendance at the convention.

DEATHS IN IOWA DECREASE

Health Conditions Are Improving So the Reports of State Board of Health Indicate.

Des Moines.—Health conditions in Iowa continue to improve if one may judge from the monthly death report for the state. The September report shows over a hundred less deaths than during the month of August. One of the first important decreases is in the amount of typhoid fever. There were 37 deaths in August and 26 in September. A material decrease is noted in cholera infantum. August shows 153 deaths while September shows 111 deaths from this disease.

September shows a slight increase in the number of deaths from tuberculosis, 119, as compared with 104 in August. There was one more death from infantile paralysis in September than in August. Organic heart trouble is again on the increase in the state. The deaths in September numbered 130, as compared with 127 in the preceding month.

There was less suicide in September than in August. The record shows 15 for the month of September and 22 for August. It wasn't so hot in September.

The deaths at the state institutions are almost the same for the two months. September shows 36, while August showed 37. But there was a very great increase in the death at the Soldiers' home. In August there were only 8 deaths at the Iowa Soldiers' home, while in September there were 18.

Important Question Up.

"One of the greatest questions involving the right of the freedom of the press is soon to be argued in the supreme court of this state," said Hon. R. P. Roedell, of Dubuque. "The question will affect all history writing in the future as well as the newspaper business. The question is, 'Can a newspaper, after a public man has retired to private life, go into his acts as a public man to show that he was disreputable during some past political campaign?' Should the supreme court hold that for a newspaper to do this, after a man has retired to private life would be libelous, just see what a black eye it would be to the historian. No historian would dare write an impartial history because he would, under such a decision, take chances of being sued for libel. I believe that the court should never make such a decision because once a man has been in public life he has left some kind of an impress on his community or state or nation, and it would be folly to prohibit the press from telling the truth about that period of history even though it involved criticism of a private man's morals when he was a public character."

Why Youngsters Work.

"After two and a half years of continuous work in inspecting the factories and workshops of our state and after noting the conditions existing both in the homes of the children and the factory where they work, I believe that the three real causes for the working of children in Iowa today are poverty, greed and the ambitions of the child," said W. J. Riddle, state factory inspector. "Poverty in extreme cases seems the hardest of all to overcome and the children affected from this usually make up the larger number. It is the most perplexing problem for the officers to solve. In almost every instance where investigation has been made by this department we find that the child labor is necessary to help a widowed mother with children, or a crippled father who finds himself unable to provide the necessaries of life for his family. Thus the child at an early age feels called upon to shoulder the responsibilities of supporting the family and will proudly bring home every penny of its wages."

Athearn Is Chosen President.

Religious educators of Iowa have elected officers for their newly-formed organization. Prof. W. S. Athearn of Drake university was named president, and President E. R. Edwards, of Penn college as recording secretary. President J. H. T. Main of Grinnell college and Professor Starbuck of the State university were elected to the executive board. This association was formed at a conference of Iowa college presidents in session at Des Moines this week. These were the guests of the ministerial students of Drake university at a banquet.

Charge Over Iowa Roads.

The difference in rates of 10 cents a ton on freight shipment of coal and cement under the Iowa distance tariff was exploited before the state board of railroad commissioners in the hearing to fix switching charges between Burch and Des Moines, a haul of three miles. Witnesses for the Great Western which runs through Burch, testified that it cost 20 cents per ton to ship cement over the same distance that lump coal is taxed 30 cents.

FOR PERSONS FOND OF RICE

Delicious Ways of Serving This Most Healthful and Wholesome of All Vegetables.

Boiled Rice Dumplings, Custard Sauce—Boil half a pound of rice, drain and mash it moderately fine; add to it two ounces of butter, three ounces of sugar, one-half saltspoon of mixed ground spice, salt and the yolks of two eggs; moisten a trifle with a tablespoon or two of cream. With floured hands shape the mixture into balls and tie them into floured pudding cloths, steam or boil 40 minutes and send to table with a custard sauce made as follows:

Mix together four ounces of sugar and two ounces of butter slightly warmed; beat together the yolks of two eggs and a gill of cream, mix and pour the sauce in a double saucepan; set this in a pan of hot water and whisk thoroughly three minutes; set the saucepan in cold water and whisk until the sauce is cooled.

Rice Pudding—Wash a teacup of rice and boil it in two teacups of water, then add while the rice is hot three tablespoons of butter, five tablespoons of sugar, five eggs well beaten, one tablespoon of powdered nutmeg, a little salt, one glass of wine, one-quarter pound of raisins stoned and cut in halves, one-quarter pound of currants, one-quarter pound of citron cut into slips and one quart of cream. Mix well, pour into a buttered dish and bake an hour in a moderate oven.

Rice Meringue—One cup of carefully sorted rice boiled in water until it is soft; when done drain thoroughly, cool it and add one quart of new milk, the well beaten yolks of three eggs, three tablespoons of white sugar and a little nutmeg, or flavor with lemon or vanilla. Pour into a baking dish and bake about half an hour. Let it get cold; beat the whites of the eggs, add two tablespoons of sugar, flavor with lemon or vanilla; drop or spread it over the pudding and slightly brown it in the oven.

TWO RECIPES WORTH TRYING

Potato Egg Is Something New and Is Tempting—New Recipe for Gingerbread.

Potato Eggs—Roast four or six large potatoes in the oven with their skins on; remove the insides, but keep the shape of the potato. Put the inside of the potato in a basin and add one and a half ounces of butter (according to the number and size of the potatoes) and salt and pepper to taste. Mix together until light and add either one or two well-beaten whites of eggs and beat up all together. Fill the potato skins with the paste, first rolling each piece in beaten yolk of egg; then cook in the oven and serve as soon as the tops are well colored—ten to fifteen minutes.

Gingerbread—Put into a basin six ounces of fresh butter and half a pound of treacle. Warm thoroughly in the oven. In another basin put two breakfast cupfuls of flour, a tablespoonful of sugar, a teaspoonful of ground ginger, the same of mixed spice, and a teaspoonful of carbonate of soda. Mix, add the warmed treacle and butter, and enough warm milk to make a stiff batter. Bake in a moderate oven in a shallow, well-greased tin.

Flying Angels.

Heat 24 small oysters in their own liquid, just enough to make the meat solid, then strain off the broth. Cut very thin 24 strips of bacon, three inches long by one inch wide; cover them with English mustard mixed with Worcestershire sauce. Then put an oyster on each slice and wrap the oyster in this devilled bacon. Put six of these oysters on a metal skewer, sprinkle with bread crumbs and broil until cooked brown. Serve on long, narrow pieces of toast with lemon and pour melted parsley butter over them.

Eggs on Toast.

For those who are fond of eggs, butter six small cups and dust them with breadcrumbs, put into each one a raw egg and a sprinkle of salt; set the cups in a pan of hot water on the stove, cook until the whites are firm. Have ready six pieces of buttered toast laid on a hot dish, put on each piece one egg. So many think they need an oven for eggs cooked in this manner and will therefore find the above convenient in the morning when the oven is cool and time is limited.

Graham Leaf Cake.

Two and one-half cups buttermilk (or sour milk), three and one-half cups graham flour, one cup brown sugar, one pound dates, cut; two level teaspoons soda, pinch of salt. Makes two small loaves. Bake in slow oven thirty-five or forty-five minutes.

Foolish.

The man who goes into court merely to obtain satisfaction is about as foolish as the one who exhausts himself in trying to go through the world on a bluff

DOES YOUR BACK ACHE?

Backache is usually kidney ache. There is only one way to remove the pain. You must reach the cause—the kidneys. No better kidney remedy exists than Doan's Kidney Pills. Mrs. John A. Link, 122 E. Terry St., Bucyrus, O., says: "I was so terribly afflicted with kidney complaint, I could not leave my bed. I was attended by several doctors but they all failed to help me. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me relief after I had given up all hope and soon cured me. I have had no kidney trouble in three years."

SUMMER COMPLIMENTS.

The Elephant—What an elegant throat you have for a cool drink!

The Giraffe—Yes, it is grand. But, say, I wish I had a skin with a nice breezy fit like yours.

BABY'S ECZEMA AND BOILS

"My son was about three weeks old when I noticed a breaking-out on his cheeks, from which a watery substance oozed. A short time after, his arms, shoulders and breast broke out also, and in a few days became a solid scab. I became alarmed, and called our family physician who at once pronounced the disease eczema. The little fellow was under treatment for about three months. By the end of that time, he seemed no better. I became discouraged. I dropped the doctor's treatment, and commenced the use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and in a few days noticed a marked change. The eruption on his cheeks was almost healed, and his shoulders, arms and breast were decidedly better. When he was about seven months old, all trace of the eczema was gone.

"During his teething period, his head and face were broken out in boils which I cured with Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Surely he must have been a great sufferer. During the time of teething and from the time I dropped the doctor's treatment, I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, nothing else, and when two years old he was the picture of health. His complexion was soft and beautiful, and his head a mass of silky curls. I had been afraid that he would never be well, and I feel that I owe a great deal to the Cuticura Remedies." (Signed) Mrs. Mary W. Ramsey, 224 E. Jackson St., Colorado Springs, Col., Sept. 24, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 5 L, Boston.

Knowledge That Wasn't Printed.

Representative McDermott of Chicago, who represents in congress a stock yards district, was discussing how he had been treated by the Democratic organization which appointed men to the various standing committees of the house.

"First," he said, "they wanted to put me on the committee on agriculture and I haven't an acre of cleared ground in my district. Then they tried to shove me into the committee on education, and I never went to school a day in my life."—Popular.

ONESTY MAKES NATIONAL GAME HUGE SUCCESS

A TYPICAL CLOSE PLAY INVOLVING SEVERAL OPPORTUNITIES TO "THROW" THE GAME.

The fielder might purposely hurl the ball a little wide, thus forcing the baseman off the bag in order to catch it. The runner, sliding, might purposely fall to touch the base by the fraction of an inch. The baseman might purposely fumble the ball or fail to touch the runner by a hair's breadth. The umpire might decide that the runner beat the ball, or the ball beat the runner, by the tenth of a second, and the cloud of dust would cover the "error" of judgment or skill, which is the worst a "fan" would call it, in each case; so confident is the public of the honor of our big league players.

the desperate pennant race in the American league in 1908 a single decision by Sheridan on a play at the plate killed the hopes of St. Louis and a day later a decision in the first inning, a ball which the White Sox insisted was a strike, ended Chicago's hopes. In that same season Fred Clarke was called out at third base on the last day of the National league season at Chicago, and Pittsburg lost the pennant by that decision. But there was not a whisper of criticism respecting the umpire, whose decisions blasted the fondest hopes, perhaps, that baseball players can know.

If the honesty of the game were not so universally and cheerfully recognized, the numerous situations always manifesting themselves where the old-fashioned crooked work could do the trick so easily would lead to doubts in the minds of the fans and the game would die. Except for the spirit that pervades the promoters and players of the game, that they must be constant as the northern star, the opportunities for a weak man to be tempted would be so many and might be made financially so advantageous that it would not be a cause for surprise if a cog slipped now and then.

As baseball is played today it is practically impossible for questionable operations to creep into the maneuvers of the diamond. Since the great leagues eliminated gambling the banker and office boy know that at the ball park they will find a relaxation as nearly flawless from a moral point of view as it is possible to obtain in an imperfect world. The lemonade may be largely imagination, but the virility and honor of the gladiators in the arena below they know are above criticism. An umpire may not walk to suit them, but the fans, notwithstanding their insulting verbal assaults during the heat of battle upon his honesty of purpose, never feel any deep doubt concerning his unpurchasable allegiance to the square deal. If umpires were less spotless objects the fact that they are czars from 3:30 until the game is called on account of darkness would, of course, make their irregularities worth a great deal of money. A naughty umpire might make thousands of dollars for rendering a wrong decision. He would have to render a string of them over a very brief period to profit much by trickery, because as soon as his acts became identified he would have to spend his earnings in another climate.

For instance, it is within the power even of one umpire to make or unmake an entire season, to change the results of scores of games by a word. Hank O'Day called Merkle out on the Polo grounds at the close of the season of 1908 when he failed to touch second base. When Bridwell made the hit that should have won the pennant for New York thousands of frantic "fans" leaped upon the field to congratulate the Giants. O'Day saw Merkle run to the clubhouse and, throwing down his protector, he ran into the diamond, saw Evers hold the ball on second base and, above the tumult, called Merkle out. Five thousand men were swarming madly around O'Day and the Chicago players, only partly understanding the cause of the excitement. Men struck at O'Day, struck Chance and struck Pfiester; but the umpire shouldered his way along, brushed angry men aside to get his protector and walked through the crowd to his dressing room.

Suppose O'Day had been lacking in scruples! His easiest course by far was to call Merkle safe.

The most responsible player on the team, of course, is the pitcher. He comes pretty nearly knowing the weak spots in the batters who face him. He knows that certain batters like to connect with a slow ball, others despise a spit ball, etc. If the unsusceptibility of these men to the buzzing of would-be bribe givers was less pronounced how easily the pitcher might throw a deciding game! Yet no one believes a pitcher capable of other than loyal, hard working effort to advance the fortunes of his team. The result is that baseball is one of the most prosperous industries as well as our national sport. It is estimated that at least forty million persons saw the games of about fifty baseball leagues this season. Baseball has been systematized and combined; been reduced a science and business.

The National and American leagues have each a president, a secretary and a board of directors, as thoroughly equipped as those of the sugar trust, and with, apparently, a better appreciation of how to acquire popularity with the public. Merely from a business standpoint baseball is entitled to a leading place in national affairs. A commercial institution with an income of $10,000,000 is regarded as of noteworthy importance in American life. We have such an institution in baseball. It does a strictly cash business, and that does not minimize its popularity among the trade. Take just one item—that of balls. The two major leagues pay $2,500 cash each week for balls. Some enthusiasts of the sport declare that before many years, instead of forty million persons, two and three hundred million paid admissions will be taken at the box offices in this country alone each season. In that case expenses will go up—the managers will have to buy more balls.

Apparently nothing can stop the growth of the industry, or sport, whichever you care to call it, except the creeping into it of something dishonest to kill the public's enthusiasm. The game has all the elements of strength; the American people rejoice in clean athletic contests, and baseball somehow has the power in an unusual degree to shake the kinks out of a man's mind, make him at heart a boy again and send home in an optimistic mood the person who left the office, study or laboratory pitifully pessimistic two short hours before.

Theatrical folks love to tell of a western manager, now prominent in the business, who made fame and fortune as proprietor of a small variety house in San Francisco.

The thrifty German had accumulated considerable money, and was about to open a new theater. Several hours before the first performance the entrance was packed, and the manager in trying to reach the front door became hopelessly imprisoned in the crush.

"Here, here," he yelled, "peeples, peeples, it's me—it's Mr. Warner!"

As no one appeared to take any notice of him he again yelled at the top of his voice:

"Vait a minutes, peeples. Vat's de use of pooshing lige dis? Take your time—de first two acts is rotten."

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM...it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, In Plain English; or, Medicine Simplified, 1008 pages, over 700 illustrations, newly revised up-to-date Edition, paper-bound, sent for 21 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of mailing only. Cloth-bound, 31 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

WISE WORDS

Many business advantages are gained through a bank account. The merchant who is in want of money in order to take advantage of low prices finds his bank a help. The farmer who needs money but wishes to hold his crops for better prices is taken care of. The laboring man strengthens his position in the community. They all have the confidence of the banker which is very often a great assistance.

Post Up On What Other States Are Doing for Good Roads

MANY MILLIONS ARE EXPENDED

Delegates To the Good Roads Convention At Richmond, Va., Are Amazed At the Progress Made By the Southern States.

Des Moines.—The residents of Iowa should read the reports coming from the meeting now being held at Richmond, for the improvement of our nation's highways. Evidences of the progress of good roads building in the south have surprised the convention. It is said that in 1911 more than $30,000,000 was available for road building in nine southern Atlantic states, which represented 32 per cent of all the money spent in the United States for this purpose in that year. North Carolina led with the greatest expenditure, Virginia was a close second and Tennessee, Alabama, Kentucky and Georgia followed in the order named. It is estimated that the total expenditure in the United States in the current year will amount to more than $140,000,000.

There is a movement in the convention to ask the postoffice department to spend some of its appropriation for rural free delivery on the improvement of post roads, but officials of the department think this impossible. Senator Cullom's bill calling for the construction of seven national highways between Washington, D. C., Buffalo, Seattle, San Francisco, San Diego, Austin and Miami, will receive unanimous endorsement.

Struck By Train.

West Union.—William P. Duggan, of near Randalia was killed when the carriage in which he and Carl Owen were riding was struck by a southbound Milwaukee freight train. The buggy and its occupants were carried half a mile on the pilot of the engine. Duggan died shortly after being taken to a doctor's office. Owen was injured seriously.

Big Farm Changes Hands.

West Union.—The sale of 242 acres of his 330-acre farm by Jacob Yearous to M. D. Thompson for $125 an acre, a total of $30,250, makes a new record. The price paid is the largest cash consideration ever known in Fayette county on a farm deal.

Secure Control of Agar Plant.

Des Moines.—The Des Moines Packing company, a corporation formed by local capitalists, has secured the property of the Agar Packing company and will commence to operate the plant about Dec. 1. The company is incorporated at $250,000.

Is Elected President.

Iowa City.—The thirteenth annual conference of the society of the Charities and Corrections came to a close here after Cedar Rapids had captured the next annual meeting, and Dr. A. G. Kepford, of Des Moines, had delivered an address on consumption and its cure.

Horse Dealers at Oskaloosa.

Oskaloosa.—Several hundred horse dealers from Iowa, Illinois, Kansas and Missouri attended the sale of blooded horses held here by J. Hill Barnes and J. C. Redman. Thirty-two registered Percherons brought almost $10,500. The top price was $900.

Baptist Convention Here.

Des Moines.—The Northern Baptists church convention will be held in Des Moines, May 15, to May 22, 1912. It is expected that 2,800 church people from home and foreign lands will attend this convention which will continue for eight days.

Conference At Eldora.

Eldora.—In this city Dec. 4 and 5 the twenty-ninth session of the Marshalltown district conference of the Methodist Episcopal church will be held. A number of prominent ministers of the state will be in attendance.

Robbers Get Away With Loot.

Sioux City.—Robbers looted Martin McCormick's wholesale millinery house and got away with $4,000 worth of plumes. A night watchman fired six shots at them, but they escaped.

Two Jailed For Assault.

Mount Pleasant.—W. D. Saulter and Amos Meadows are in jail charged with assault on Orlanda Belleggia, an Italian, who is in the hospital in a dangerous condition.

Oldest Woman, Aged 105.

Iowa City.—The funeral of Miss Katherine Howe, the oldest woman in Johnson county, if not in Iowa, was held here this week. She died at the age of 105.

Horticulturists Want New Law.

Cedar Rapids.—A law which would compel fruit growers, farmers and all owners of trees and shrubs to keep them free from destructive insects and scale is being advocated by the members of the Southeastern Iowa Horticultural society. It is claimed that more trees are destroyed by insects and scale than from all other sources combined, and that immediate action must be taken to save the orchards and shade trees of Iowa.

Mrs. Bayless and Daughter on Trial.

Des Moines.—Mrs. Julia Bayless and her daughter, Ruth Bayless, were placed on trial before Judge McPherson of the federal court on charges of sending obscene and lascivious post cards through the mail. It is charged by the government that following a neighborhood row in which a half dozen women were engaged, the post cards had been sent to a neighbor.

Robbers Loot Bank.

Derby.—Four thousand dollars in gold and paper money were stolen from the Derby State bank on Friday morning by yeggmen who destroyed the vault and set fire to the bank building. Silver amounting in all to $500 was not taken. The safe was blown to pieces and the interior of the building was gutted. All the records of the bank with the exception of the case containing the notes are burned.

Retired Farmer Hangs Self.

Avoca.—William Zolldaum, 75 years old, a wealthy retired farmer of this city, committed suicide. Zolldaum left home, saying he was going to visit the home farm. Not returning, a searching party was organized and the entire night spent in looking for the old man. He was found hanging to a rafter in the barn. Zolldaum owned several Pottawattamie county farms.

Burlington Road Runs Dairy Train.

Creston.—A dairy special similar to the one run last year by the Burlington railroad company was run over the Creston division by the same company last week, starting from Osceola and running to Council Bluffs. The train was accompanied by instructors from the State college, who gave instruction and demonstrations to the farmers along the route.

Editor Indicted For Libel.

Clinton.—The Clinton grand jury has returned an indictment against Editor Fred W. Mitchell of the DeWitt Observer, charging him with criminal libel of Editor Fay of the Clinton Daily Advertiser in connection with Fay's probe of contracts let by the supervisors for bridge work in Clinton county.

State Veterinary Association.

Cedar Rapids.—E. E. Sayers, of Algona, was elected president of the Iowa State Veterinary association in session here. C. H. Stange, of Ames, was re-elected secretary-treasurer. The next meeting will be held at Ames.

Breaks Corn Husking Record.

Hamburg.—Oscar Van Houten broke the world's record for corn husking near here when he sent to the crib 235 bushels in ten hours. The feat was done on a wager. Van Houten was furnished with drivers and teams.

After Solon Blackhanders.

Iowa City.—Deputy United States Marshal Healy, of Cedar Rapids, was here last week probing the Solon blackhand case, which has so far resulted in the burning of the Adams barn and the arrest of two men.

Girl Breaks Her Neck.

Newton.—Miss Lavona Jontz, 18, daughter of I. J. Jontz, living near Colfax, was instantly killed in a runaway while driving to a party with her small brother and a hired man.

Miner Dies From Dynamite.

Chariton.—Ole Olson is dead as the result of injuries received by the premature explosion of a charge of dynamite at the Frazier mines fourteen miles from here.

Brick and Tile Men Meet.

Ft. Dodge.—Iowa brick and tile manufacturers are to come to Fort Dodge for their state convention in January for three days, the 23d to 25th, inclusive.

SYNOPSIS.

Blair, the 22-year-old son of the million-dollar copper king of Blairmont., is a guest at the English of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had courteous to Lord Galorey during visit to the United States and the is now being returned to the man. The youth has an ideal girl mind. He meets Lily, Duchess of Breakwater, a beautiful widow, who is ed by his immense fortune.

CHAPTER II.—Continued.

Lady Galorey hesitated, disapoo bad—I had specially arranged Lady Grandcourt to drive over Eileen. I thought it would be a chance for her to see Dan."

Why, you talk, all of you, as if I only to ask any girl of them, and would jump down my throat."

did not reply for a second, but looked at her more seriously, con- of her grace and her good She was certainly better to at than the simple girls with big hands, small wits, long faces as the boy expressed it, "utter of get-up." The duchess shone to advantage.

Why don't you talk to me?" she softly. "You know you would talk to me than the others."

Yes," he said frankly; "they make nervous."

And I don't?"

No," he said. "I learn a lot every we are together."

Learn?" she repeated, not particu- flattered by this. "What sort of ?"

Oh, about the whole business," he ned vaguely. "You know what I ."

Then," she said with a slight laugh, mean to say you talk to me for ational purposes? What a beast- ore!"

an did not contradict her. She by no means Eve to him, nor was the raw recruit his simplicity might one to think. He had had his ptations and his way out of them easy one; for he was very to stir, and back of all was his . The reality and power of this Dan knew best at moments like e. But the Duchess of Breakwater the most lovely woman—the dangerous woman that had come way. He liked her—Dan was well the way to love.

The two were alone in the big dark m. At their side the small table, which they had taken their tea ether, stood with its empty cups its silver. Without, the day was and windy, and the sunset threw the panes a red reflection. The fell on the Duchess of Breakwa- something like a veil—a crimson slipped over her face and breast. leaned toward Dan, and between there was no more barrier than western light. He felt his pulses and a tide rising within him. She a delicious emanation, fragrant near, and as he might have gath- a cluster of flowers, so in the second he would have taken her his arms, but from the other room then Lady Galorey, at the piano, ed a snatch from Mandalay, strik- at once into the tune. The sound e suddenly, told them quickly e one was near, and the Duchess Breakwater involuntarily moved k, and so knocked the small tray, ed it, and it fell clattering to the r.

CHAPTER III.

The Blairtown Soloist.

Blairtown had a population of some ht thousand. There was a Presby- ian church to which Dan and his her went regularly, sitting in the pew when the winter's storms and rattled on the panes, or in summer sunshine, when the smell the pews and the panama fans and hymn books came strong to them ough the heat.

One day there was a missionary ser- n, and for the first time in its his- tory, a girl sang a solo in the First Presbyterian church. Dan Blair heard it, looked up, and it made a mark in his life. A girl in a white dress trimmed with blue gentians, white cotton gloves, and golden hair, was the soloist. He knew her, that is, he had a nodding acquaintance with her. It was the girl at the drug store who sold soda water, and he had asked her some hundreds of times for a "vanilla or a chocolate," but it wasn't this vulgar memory that made the little boy listen. It was the girl's voice. Standing back of the yellow-painted rail, above the minister's pulpit, above the flies, the red pews and the panama fans, she sang, and she sang into Dan Blair's soul. To speak more truly, she made him a soul in that moment. She awakened the boy; his collar felt tight, his cheeks grew hot. He felt his new boots, too, hard and heavy.

He Liked Her—Dan Was Well on the Way to Love.

She made him want to cry. These were the physical sensations—the material part of the awakening. The rest went on deeply inside of Dan. She broke his heart; then she healed it. She made him want to cry like a girl; then she wiped his tears.

The little boy settled back and grew more comfortable and listened, and what she sang was,

"From Greenland's icy mountains,
From India's coral stra—ands."

Before the hymn reached its end he was a calm boy again, and the hymn took up its pictures and became like an illustrated book of travels, and he wanted to see those pea-green peaks of Greenland, to float upon the icebergs to them, and see the dawn break on the polar seas as the explorers do. . . . He should find the north pole some day! Then he wanted to go to an African jungle, where the tiger, "tiger shining bright," should flash his stripes before his eyes! Dan would gather wreaths of coral from the stra—ands and give them to the girl with the yellow hair. When he and his father came out together from the church, Dan chose the street that passed the soda fountain drug store and peeped in. It was dark and cool, and behind the counter the drug clerk mixed the summer drinks; and the drug clerk mixed them from that time ever afterward—for the girl with the yellow hair never showed up in Blairtown again. She went away!

CHAPTER IV.

In the Coral Room.

"Mandalay" had run at the Gaiety the season before and again opened the autumn season. Light and charming, thoroughly musical, it had toured successfully through Europe, but London was its home, and its popularity was chiefly owing to the girl who had starred in it—Letty Lane. Her face was on every postal card, hand bill, cosmetic box and even popular drinks were named for her.

The night of the Osdene box party was the reopening of "Mandalay," and the curtain went up after the overture to an outburst of applause. Dan Blair had never "crossed the pond" before this memorable visit, when he had gone straight out to Osdene Park. London theaters and London itself, indeed, were unexplored by him. He had seen what there was to be seen of the opera bouffe in his own country, but the brilliant, perfect performance of a company at the London Gaiety he had yet to enjoy.

The opening scene of "Mandalay" is oriental; the burst of music and the tinkling of the silvery temple bells and the effect of an extremely blue sea, made Dan "sit up," as he put it. The theatrical picture was so perfect that he lifted his head, pushed his chair back to enjoy. He was thus close to the duchess. With invigorating young enthusiasm the boy drew in his breath and waited to be amused and to hear. The tunes he already knew before the orchestra began to charm his ear.

On landing at Plymouth Dan had been keen to feel that he was really stepping into the world, and at Osdene Park he had been daily, hourly "seeing life." The youngest of the household, his youth nevertheless was not taken into consideration by any of them. No one had treated him like a junior. He had gone neck to neck with their pace as far as he liked, furnished them fresh amusement, and been their diversion. In all his rare unspoiled youth, Blair had been suddenly dropped down in an effete set that had whirled about him, and one by one out of the inner circle had called him to join them; and one by one with all of them Dan had whirled.

Lord Galorey had talked to him frankly, as plainly as if Dan had been his own father, and found much of the old man's common sense in his fine blond head. Lady Galorey had come to him in a moment of great anxiety, and no one but her young guest knew how badly she needed help. He had further made it known to the lady that he was not in the marriage market; that she could not have him for any of her girls. And as for the Duchess of Breakwater, well—he had whirled with her until his head swam. He had grown years older at the Park in the few weeks of his visit, but now for the first time, as the music of "Mandalay" struck upon his ears, like a ripple of distant seas, he felt like the boy who had left Blairtown to come abroad. He had spent the most part of the day in London with a man who had come over to see him from America. Dan attended to his business affairs, and the people who knew said that he had a keen head. Mr. Joshua Ruggles, his father's best friend, whom Dan this afternoon had left to go to his room at the Carlton, had put his arm with affection through the boy's.

"Don't look as though it were any too healthy down to the place you're visiting at, Dan. Plumbing all right?"

And the boy, flushing slightly, had said: "Don't you fret, Josh, I'll look after my health, all right."

"There's nothing like mountain air," returned the westerner. "These old fogs stick in my nostrils; feel as though I could smell London clean down to my feet!"

From the corner of the box Dan looked hard at the stage, at the fresh brilliant costumes and the lovely chorus girls.

"Gosh," he thought to himself, "they are the prettiest ever! Dove-gray, eyes of Irish blue, mouths like roses!"

Leaning forward a little toward the duchess he whispered: "There isn't one who isn't a winner. I never struck such a box of dry goods!"

The duchess smiled on Dan with good humor. His naive pleasure was delightful. It was like taking a child to a pantomime. She was wearing his flowers and displaying a jewel that he had found and bought for her, and which she had not hesitated to accept. She watched his eager face and his pleasure unaffected and keen. She could not believe that this young man was master of ten million pounds.

When Letty Lane appeared Blair heard a light rustle like rain through the auditorium, a murmur, and the house rose. There was a well-bred calling from the stalls, a call from the pit, and generous applause—"Letty Lane—Letty Lane!" and as though she were royalty, there was a fluttering of handkerchiefs like flags. The young fellow with the others stood in the back of the box, his hands in his pockets, looking at the stage. There wasn't a girl in the chorus as pretty as this prima donna! Letty Lane came on in "Mandalay" in the first act in the dress of a fashionable princess. She was modish and worldly. For the only time in the play she was modern and conventional, and whatever breeding she might have been able to claim, from whatever class she was born, as she stood there in her beautiful gown she was grace itself, and charm. She was distinctly a star, and showed her appreciation of her audience's admiration.

Teaches Illiterate Soldiers.

Mme. Lazardelle, who has been appointed by the French government to teach illiterate soldiers how to read and write, is a daughter of a Russian general and for years taught her father's troops in that country. The French are resenting her appointment, as it seems that there should be French teachers capable of doing the work, but no doubt her experience counts for something.

Fine Pre-Norman Church

Remarkably Well Preserved Edifice at Worth Was Built Long Before the Conquest.

Many churches in Britain owe their origin to the piety of the Norman invader, but these which antedate this great period of church building are not so numerous. One such pre-Norman edifice is the fine old parish church of Worth, near Three Bridges. A little book, written by Rev Arthur Bridge, the rector of Worth, tells the history of what is aptly described as one of the most remarkable relics of a bygone age. It seems probable that the church passed with the Manor of Worth under the will of Alfred the Great to his third son, Ethelward. Archaeologists will be lavish of thanks to Mr. Bridge for the interesting and useful little record of his unique church. He tells us that Worth exhibits the earliest example of the purely English cruciform building, and its semi-circular eastern end is of very ancient date. But the whole church, as might be gathered, possess many features which make it of peculiar fascination to the student of the antique. The windows, for instance, have not suffered "restoration," and are well known to all students of architecture here and on the continent.—Dundee Advocate.

Landor Poems Found.

The Walter Savage Landor exhibition at the London library is of great interest, comprising portraits, manuscripts and first editions from the important Landor collection of S. Wheeler, says the London Times.

The most interesting of the literary relics is a volume of manuscript poems and corrections by Landor which he himself described on a slip of paper (here preserved) as "sweepings from under the study table." The papers in this volume were taken from Landor's writing desk more than thirty years after his death.

Some of the poems are unpublished, and in other cases there are to be found the original drafts of lines which appeared in print in an altered form. Other documents include a will written by himself in which he bequeathed pictures to Robert Browning and Mrs. Lynn Linton.

OFFICIAL INVITATION TO AMERICANS

HOW ROBERT ROGERS, MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR, IN WINNIPEG ADDRESS, ISSUES WELCOME OF AMERICANS TO WESTERN CANADA.

During the course of a reply to an address presented to Hon. Robert Rogers, the newly appointed Minister of the Interior of Canada at a banquet given at Winnipeg in his honor that gentleman spoke on immigration. The tone of his remarks was that he intended to pursue an aggressive and forward policy in the matter of immigration. In part, he said:

"The most important branch perhaps of that department (Interior) is that of immigration.

"If there is anything more than another we want here it is a greater population, and it shall be my duty to present to the people in all parts of the world where desirable emigrants are to be found the advantages and the great possibilities of this country. We have received in the past a reasonably large immigration from south of the international boundary, and in this connection let me say just a word for our American cousins who have found happy homes amongst us, and those whom we hope to welcome in greater numbers in the years to come. There are hundreds of thousands of them in our prairie provinces, happy in the enjoyment of a freedom as great as they ever knew, and all contributing in a material way towards the development of Canada. We are not blind to their value as settlers. They come better equipped with scientific farming knowledge than most of our emigrants, and constitute without doubt the wealthiest class of emigrants any new country has ever known. As head of the immigration department it will be my privilege to offer them a welcome hearty and sincere, and to so contribute to their welfare that under the protecting folds of the Union Jack they will enjoy as great a degree of liberty and happiness as under the Stars and Stripes. The Borden government cherishes nothing but the kindliest feelings for the people of the great republic to the south, and will do all in its power to increase the bonds of kinship and neighborly good feeling that has so long existed. (Hear, hear.)

"While we adopt a vigorous emigration policy in that country, we will also adopt the same vigorous policy in other parts of the world. We will go to England, Ireland and Scotland, and every other country irrespective of race, creed or nationality, where we can find suitable and desirable emigrants for this great country. I think much good work can be done in those countries, and especially perhaps at the present time in England, Ireland and Scotland. Now, then, it will be my duty to stir up that policy in the most vigorous manner possible."

Age of an Egg.

In a glass of water the fresh egg will assume a horizontal position. The egg of three to five days makes with the horizon an angle of 30 degrees. The angle increases to 45 degrees for an egg eight days old, to 75 for one of three weeks, and at 30 days the egg rests on its point.

PA AS PIANO MOVER

GODS ON HIGH OLYMPUS THEN TAKE VACATION.

Heads Army That Looks Like Advance Guard of South American Revolutionary Movement—Then Look at the Piano.

When papa attempts to move the piano the gods of high Olympus take a vacation; and Jove says: "Come on here, Juno—you don't want to see that. Get your things on quick. Hang it, woman, does it take you all day to pin your hat on?"

For when papa moves the piano it is always either upstairs or downstairs—never on a plane.

He goes forth into the highways and the hedges and collects a few highwaymen and hedge scarecrows to help him and, followed by his army that looks like the advance guard of a South American revolutionary movement, attacks the piano.

O, why do they make pianos so heavy? Why can they not nail handles on the ends so that one may get a hold? The top is too high to afford a hold, and the bottom is too low.

Observe papa. He has measured the piano and the stairs. The piano is 33.234,235 inches wide at the widest part and the stairway is 34.765,760 inches wide with two turns and a small landing half way up. Ha! plenty of room.

Papa and the hirelings wheel the piano to the foot of the stairs and boost up the end on the lowest step. This makes it necessary for papa and one of the hirelings to climb over the railings to get at the front end of it. Then as they spread their feet and lift, the other hirelings push awkwardly.

"WAIT A MINUTE!" yells papa, "you are mashing us!" Then as they pause one of the pushers howls madly:

"Hurry up! Hurry up!" he shouts. "We can t'hold this bling-blamed thing up all day!" Another heave, and the piano is up three steps, and papa has sat down forcibly on the steps no less than three times.

Then the piano rocks and weaves and scratches the varnish off itself and off the stair railing. Mamma yells a warning—a tearful yell. Papa says something he should not.

"Go on! Go on!" he shieks at the helpers. "All together now—UP!" The piano is heaved upward, taking off a long crinkled strip of wall paper as it goes, and at last rests on the upper floor.

It is scarred and marred. So are papa's knuckles. So are mamma's feelings. So is the wall paper and so is the railing.

But the piano is upstairs and papa thrusts his aching hands into his trousers pockets and distributes money.

"I wouldn't pay a cent!" wails mamma. "Look at my piano!"

But papa is looking at one of the movers, and the mover is looking at papa and mentally likening papa to a shrimp, and papa in this case is a mind reader, and pays gladly, even hurriedly.—Dallas News.

Raised the Price,

Judge Hiram C. Flack of West Liberty said the other day to the Pittsburg Gazette-Times, speaking of the notorious disfranchised vote sellers of his native Ohio:

"Some of these men, I understand, even claimed that they didn't know it was wrong to sell one's vote. They were worse, then, than the voters of Cashel.

"All the voters of Cashel used to sell their votes, and a reform candidate once got the preachers of the town to preach against the sin of such scandalous conduct.

"The day after these sermons the reform candidate said to a party leader:

"'Well, how will the election go?'

"'It will be close and difficult and expensive, sir,' was the reply.

"'What do you mean?' said the candidate.

"'Well,' said the party leader, 'the boys didn't understand that vote selling was a sin before, and they always let their votes go for $2 apiece; but, now they know eternal damnation is awaiting them, I understand that every man jack of them has put up his price to $4.'"

"Where will you reside?" asked the reporter of the young bridal couple.

"At the Old Manse," replied the erstwhile Miss Millions.

And this is the way the item appeared—

"Mr. Hardup and his bride, who was the former Miss Millions, have returned from their honeymoon. They will live at the old man's."

We wish to call your attention to the fact that most infectious diseases such as whooping cough, diphtheria and scarlet fever are contracted when the child has a cold. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will quickly cure a cold and greatly lessen the danger of contracting these diseases. This remedy is famous for its cures of colds. It contains no opium or other narcotic and may be given to a child with implicit confidence. Sold by G. A. Pabst.

WISE WORDS

Many business advantages are gained through a bank account. The merchant who is in want of money in order to take advantage of low prices finds his bank a help. The farmer who needs money but wishes to hold his crops for better prices is taken care of. The laboring man strengthens his position in the community. They all have the confidence of the banker which is very often a great assistance.

Think it over.

NEW ROAD PLANNED

Will Connect Des Moines and Omaha By Shorter Route

LESLIE M. SHAW IS PROMOTER

It Is Intended To Build the Line From Treynor to the Capital Through Territory South of Rock Island Road.

Des Moines.—The Iowa & Omaha short line, a road now connecting Council Bluffs and Treynor, is to be extended to Des Moines, according to F. M. Hubbell, who conferred with Leslie M. Shaw, ex-governor of Iowa, regarding plans for the proposed new short line to connect Des Moines and Omaha. Mr. Hubbell stated that he had consented to be a member of the board of directors for the company which will construct this new line. Col. George W. Adams of Council Bluffs recently acquired the Atlantic, North & South railroad in behalf of the company which is to build the line to Des Moines. He is backed by Mr. Shaw, who will use English capital to build the new line. The Atlantic road will be used as a feeder to the new line. It is proposed to build the line from Treynor to Des Moines through a territory lying to the south of the Rock Island main line and not now enjoying direct connections with Des Moines and Omaha.

Library at Emmetsburg.

Emmetsburg.—This city has received the promise of $10,000 from Andrew Carnegie and plans have been adopted and the trustees are engaged in preparing to award the contract for the erection of the new public library building. The cost will be more than $10,000, and the building from the plans selected promises to become a fine ornament.

Woman Is Given Damages.

Denison.—After being out four hours, the jury in the case of Louisa Miller vs. John Weiss returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $2,000. This was an action for breach of promise in which Miss Miller sued Weiss for $4,500. At times the testimony was of a spicy nature and seemed to please a large audience.

Dog Bite Proves Fatal.

Iowa City.—Elijah Berry, of Sharon City is dead from the effects of a mad dog bite inflicted last August. At that time he was brought here and given the Pasteur treatment and was discharged, under the belief that he had recovered. Last Friday, however, he again began to show signs of rabies.

Will Have New Theater.

Cedar Rapids.—Cedar Rapids is to have a new theater. It will be built by M. Ford, a local contractor, who has just secured a valuable site on Second avenue, opposite the postoffice. The building will be of steel construction, will seat 1,600 and will be thoroughly modern throughout.

Ogden Mine To Be Opened.

Boone.—The Ogden Consolidated Coal company's mine, No. 2, located two miles south of Ogden, closed for some time owing to labor trouble, is to be opened. New boilers are being installed and other improvements being made preparatory to working the mine to its full capacity.

Is Given Handsome Altar.

Rockwell.—An altar, said to be the finest in any Catholic church of the state, excepting possibly one at Waterloo, has been presented to the Sacred Heart Catholic church here. The altar cost $10,000, the person donating it refuses to allow his name to be made public.

Chicken Show At Centerville.

Centerville.—The fourth annual show of the Appanoose County Poultry association is to be held December 20th to 23d. The premium list will soon be out, showing cash premiums for every class and many special premiums in trophies and merchandise Week's Meetings Are Held.

Mapleton.—The first week of the revival meetings in the Methodist church has ended with more than fifty professed conversions. The meeting will continue two weeks longer.

Artesian Well Is Sunk.

Lake City.—An artesian well has been made at the Spurgeon farm south of town that throws a stream of water four feet above the ground. The well is 105 feet deep.

Drowns While Skating.

Oelwein.—Thomas Flynn, 14, was drowned while skating on the creek near here. He went through the thin ice, the first skating accident reported in the state this season.

Capture Thirty-five Deer.

Avoca.—Thirty-five wild deer which have been destroying crops and otherwise annoying the farmers in this vicinity were captured in a drive Thanksgiving day and will be sold by the state game warden to cities of the state as park attractions. A few years ago a herd of 125 deer were released from the park of the late W. B. Cuppy and since then they have multiplied until there are about 400 in Pottawattamie county, and they are becoming a nuisance to the farmers, as the law protects them from slaughter.

Church to Be Enlarged.

Cedar Falls.—Twenty thousand dollars is to be raised for improving and enlarging the Methodist church in this city. The building as it stands is one of the most beautiful in Iowa, being built in an artistic manner of natural stone, but the unusually large attendance has compelled the building of an addition.

Ten Minutes to Sell Farm.

Waterloo.—It required only ten minutes to sell the William Mason farm of 160 acres, eight miles south of Waterloo. The price paid was $160 and the purchaseer was Peter Trainer. The farm brought a total of $25,000. The sale of the farm followed the disposal at auction of $7,000 worth of personal property.

Health Springs Dry Up.

Sioux City.—The famous Cheney spring has "dried up." For years the water was considered a sure cure for many diseases. When the water company repaired a leak near the spring the water ceased to flow. The water company says it has been swindled out of thousands of dollars.

Marmon For Postmaster.

Des Moines.—C. W. Marmon has been recommended for postmaster at Mitchellville by Congressman Prouty to fill the vacancy caused by the death of M. H. Davis in September. The probable appointee is the son of Editor Marmon of the Mitchellville Index, the well-known Iowa publisher.

Farmer Killed In Quarrel.

Waterloo.—Henry Phillips, 65, a wealthy farmer was shot and killed in his home after a quarrel with J. T. McCaskill, a sewing machine agent. McCaskill drove away in his buggy after the shooting, but was arrested. Phillips leaves a widow and eleven children.

Patient Sues Doctor.

Tipton.—The $12,000 damage suit of Sidney C. Cozine, a wealthy farmer against Dr. W. N. Moore, of West Branch, has been on trial here for several days. Cozine had his jaw broken by a fall from a buggy, the doctor set it and it failed to heal.

Ottumwa Citizens Rejoice.

Ottumwa. — The Ottumwa water works has a new filtration plant in operation and citizens now think the water will be pure and free from germs floating dow from the Des Moines department of streets and public improvements.

Many Others Wish It.

Mason City.—Socialists at a meeting here adopted resolutions asking the Iowa delegation in congress to work for the repeal of tax on oleomargarine. They say it has forced butter to 35 cents a pound.

Fire Destroys Town.

Sioux City.—A fire at Decatur, Neb. forty miles south of here, wiped out the business portion of the town, causing a loss of $75,000. Only two business houses escaped destruction.

Rock Rapids Suicide.

Rock Rapids.—George M. Smith, a veteran of the Civil war who served in the Sixth Kansas infantry, was found by his wife hanging at the end of a rope in the barn, dead.

Fogle Found Guilty.

Glenwood.—Thomas Fogle, charged with enticing Miss Maud Rodman away from home, was found guilty by a jury. Clifford Hooker, his companion, will now be tried.

Will Continue Revivals.

Denison. — The revival services which are being conducted by the local churches have proved so successful that they are to be continued for two weeks longer.

Three Prisoners Escape.

Carroll.—Three prisoners made their get-away from the Carroll county jail. The bars to one of the windows were sawed through by some one on the outside.

Arrested On Serious Charge.

Leon.—A. Thornton, 32, is under arrest charged with entering the sleeping apartments of Miss Ada Thomas, 65, through a window and attacking her.

Will Open Monastery.

Dubuque. — Franciscan fathers from St. Louis have arrived here to open a monastery, upon invitation from Archbishop Keane.

SYNOPSIS.

Blair, the 22-year-old son of the million-dollar copper king of Blairtown, Mont., is a guest at the English home of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had been courteous to Lord Galorey during his visit to the United States and the hospitality is now being returned to the youth by him. The youth has an ideal girl whom he has left behind. He meets Lily, Duchess of Breakwater, a beautiful widow, who is impressed by his immense fortune and begins making to her. When Dan was a boy Lily sang a solo at a church, and Dan has never forgotten her. The Galoreys and Dan attend a London music hall where one Letty Lane is the star.

At the end of the tenor solo Lady Oltary runs into the pavilion and changes her dress and appears once more to dance before the king and to prove herself the dancer she is known and loved in a cafe in London. Letty Lane's dress in his dance is a classic ballet dancer's, white petal leaves of a lily. She seemed to be to float; actually to be breathed exhaled from out her film gown; the only ray of color in her costume her own golden hair, surmounted by a small coral-colored cap, studded in pearls. The actress looked to the right and left, ran to the center and to left; glanced toward the box of Breakwater's box; acknowledged the burst of applause; began her dance and finished her pas seul. Then with folded hands sang her song. The beautiful voice came out clear as natural water from a crystal rock. The words were cradled like little boats on the boundless . . .

"India's coral strand. . . ."

There was no hymn tune to this song of Letty Lane's in "Mandalay!" The boy in the box, however, the lights, the tune, the droning of the fan, the window pane, the strong scent of the hymn books and panama fans came back, and the clear sunlight of Montana seemed to steal into the theater as Letty Lane sang.

The Duchess of Breakwater clapped with frank enthusiasm, and said: "She is a perfect wonder, isn't she? And she is too bewitching!"

She turned for sympathy to her escort who stood behind her, his face flushed. He was amazed; his blue eyes ablaze, his head bent forward, and staring, staring at the Gaiety girl. The curtain had gone down on the first act.

The duchess laughed softly, and the duchess heard him say:

"Indeed! Well, I should say she is! She's a girl from our town!"

But the duchess tried to share her enthusiasm with Dan he had disappeared. He left the box and with no apology made his way as far as the passage.

"Can you get me an entrance?" he asked a man he had met once at Oxford and who was evidently an habitue.

"Sure say. Rippin' show, isn't it?" and put his hands on ducal shoulders and followed the nobleman into the labyrinth of flies.

"Which of 'em do you want to see, Blair?"

Blair without replying, went forward to a small cluster of lights in one of the wings. He went forward intuitively and his companion caught his arm: "I say, for God's sake, don't go on there!"

But without response Dan continued in direction. A call page stood before a door, and Dan, on a card over the entrance read "Miss Lane." The glare of calcium and paint and perfume and the auxiliary hung heavy on the air. The other man saw Dan would knock again and then go in.

Unannounced Dan Blair opened the door of the dressing room of the star. Miss Lane's dressing-rooms were worth displaying to her intimate friends. They were done with great taste in coral tint. She might have been said to be in a coral cave under the sea, as far as young Blair was concerned. As he came in he felt his head deaden, and the smoke of cigarettes grew so thick that he looked through a veil. The dancer was standing in the center of the room, one hand on her hip, and in the other a cigarette. Her short skirt stood out around her like a bell, and from the bell fell a rain of pinkish coral strands. She wore a thin slip, from which her neck and arms came bare out, and her woman knelt at her feet strapping on a little coral

Blair shut the door behind him, and began to realize how rude, how impertinent his entrance would be considered. But he came boldly forward and would have introduced himself as "Dan Blair from Blairtown," but Miss Lane, who stood at the entrance through the smoke, burst into a laugh so bright, so delightful, that he was carried high up on the coral strands to the very beach. She crossed her white arms over her breast and leaned forward as a saleswoman might lean forward over a counter, and with her beautifully trained voice, all sweetly she asked him:

"Hello, little boy, what will you take?"

Blair giggled, quick to catch her meaning, and answered: "Oh, chocolate, I guess!"

And Letty Lane laughed, put out her white hand, the one without the cigarette, and said: "Haven't got that brand on board—so sorry! Will a cocktail do? All sorts in bottles. Higgins, fix Mr. Blair a Martini."

As the dresser rose from her stooping position, the rest of Letty Lane's dressing-room unfolded out of the mist and smoke. On a sofa covered with lace pillows Blair saw a man sitting, smoking as well. He was tall, and had a dark mustache. It was Prince Poniotowsky, whom Dan had already met at the Galorey shoot.

"Prince Poniotowsky," Miss Lane presented him, "Mr. Blair of Blairtown, Mont. Say, Frederick, give me my cap, will you? It is over by your side. I've got to hustle."

The man, without moving, picked up a small red cap with a single plume,

"She's a Girl From Our Town."

from the sofa at his side. In another second Letty Lane had placed it on her head of yellow hair, real yellow hair and not a doubt of it, like sunshine—not the color one gets from inside bottles. Her arms, her hands flashed with rings, priceless flashes, and the little spears pricked Dan like sharp needles.

"It's the nicest ever!" she was saying. "How on earth did you get in here, though? Have you bought the Gaiety theater? I'm the most exclusive girl on the stage. Who let you in?"

Her accent was English, and even that put her from him. As he looked at her he couldn't understand how he had ever recognized her. If he had waited for another act he wouldn't have believed the likeness real. The girl he remembered had both softened and hardened; the rounded features were gone, but all the angles were gone as well. Her eyes were as gray as the seas; she was painted and her lids were darkened. Seen close, she was not so divine as on the stage, but there was still a more thrilling charm about the fact that she was real.

"To think of any one from Montana being here tonight! Staying very long, Mr. Blair?" Between each sentence she directed Higgins, who was getting her into her bodice. "And how do you like 'Mandalay?' Isn't it great?"

She addressed herself to Dan, but she smiled on both the men with extreme brilliance.

"You bet your life," he responded "I should think it was great."

Poniotowsky rose indolently. He had not looked toward the newcomer, but had, on the other hand, followed every detail of Miss Lane's dressing.

"Better take your scarf, Letty. Hand it to Miss Lane," he directed Higgins. "It is so damned drafty in these beastly wings."

He drew his watch out, gathered up his long coat, flung it over his arm and picked up his opera hat which lay folded on Letty Lane's dressing table.

The call page for the third time summoned "Miss La—ne, Miss La—ne," and she took the scarf Higgins handed her and ran it through her hands, still beaming on Dan.

"Come in to see me at the Savoy on any day, at two-thirty except on matinee days."

"Put on your scarf." Poniotowsky, taking it from her hands, laid it across her white shoulders, and she passed out between the two men, light as a bird, smiling, nodding, followed by the prince and the boy from Montana. The crowds began to fill the lately empty wings—dancers, chorus girls with their rustling gowns. Letty Lane said to Dan:

"Guess you'll like my solo in this act all right—it's the best thing in 'Mandalay.' Now go along, and clap me hard."

It gave him a new pleasure, for she had spoken to him in real American fashion with the swift mimicry that showed her talent. Dan went slowly back to his party. As he took his seat by the duchess she said to him:

"You went in to see Letty Lane. Do you know her?"

"Know her!" And as Dan answered, the sound of his own voice was queer to him, and his face flushed hotly. "Lord, yes. She used to be in the drug store in Blairtown. Sold soda-water to me when we were both kids. Whoever would have thought that she had that in her?" He nodded toward the stage, for Letty Lane had come on. She sang in our church, too, but not for long."

"Who was with her in her dressing-room?" the duchess asked. Blair didn't answer. He was looking at Letty Lane. She had come to dance for the rajah, and in her arms she held four white doves; each dove had a coral thread around its throat. It was a number that made her famous. "The Dove Song." Set free, the birds flew about her, circling her blond head, surmounted by the small coral-colored cap. The doves settled on her shoulders, pecked at her lips.

"Was it Poniotowsky?" the duchess repeated.

And Dan told her a meaningless lie. "I didn't meet any one there." And with satisfaction the duchess said:

"Then she has thrown him over, too. He was the latest and the richest. She is horribly extravagant. No man is rich enough for her, they say. Poniotowsky isn't a gold mine."

Dan Stood Motionless, His Eyes Fastened on Her.

The doves had flown away to the wings and been gathered up by the Indian servants. The actress on the stage began her Indian cradle song. She came, distinctly turning toward the box party. She had never sung like this in London before. There was a freshness in her voice, a quality in her gesture, a pathos and a sweetness that delighted her audience. They fairly clamored for her, waved and called and recalled. Dan stood motionless, his eyes fastened on her, his heart rocked by the song. He didn't want anyone to speak to him. He wished that none of them would breathe, and nearly as absorbed as was he, no one did speak.

MAY TRESPASS IN ENGLAND

If You Do No Damage It Is Easy to Wander Through Private Property.

At this season it is pleasant to leave the dusty highway and take to the fields. But many timid pedestrians are frightened away by the notice "Trespassers Will Be Prosecuted."

As the law stands, any trespasser who does the smallest damage—injures a fence, breaks a small branch, etc.—can be summoned before a magistrate and fined. But if he does no damage, the landlord must bring an action at law and get an injunction. This costs a lot of money, and unless the trespasser is a man of means the landlord won't bring his action at law. All he can do otherwise is to ask you to get out. If you go peaceably you can return an hour later, and repeat the visit as often as you wish. Nothing can be done beyond asking you to leave again But if you resist, then sufficient force can be used; and if you show fight you may be legally knocked down, your legs tied, and yourself bundled on to th road.

The landlord may, however, play some tricks on you. He can saw a bridge crossing a stream, so that you will get a ducking, he can dig a pit for you to fall into, and he can so fix the stile you are likely to cross that you will break it, and then he can have you up before the magistrate. If you don't commit any damage, however, you can trespass to your heart's content.—Answers.

ARIZONA IS HIS FAVORITE

In Forty-Seven Years George Carey of Columbia Did Not Leave the Territory.

Forty-seven years' continuous residence in Arizona, without once setting foot outside her borders, is believed to be the record. It was established by George Carey of Columbia, Yacapai county, who has just returned from a two months' trip to Los Angeles and other coast points after living in this territory since 1864.

When Carey first came to Arizona he was a freighter. From mining camp to mining camp he drifted, until the want of lucrative business forced him into mining. That was more than 25 years ago, but it was not until last spring that prosperity came. He received the first payment on some mining claims that he had developed with his own hands, and bought a round trip ticket to California. For two months this trail blazer gazed upon towering buildings and other modern wonders of which he had read, but which he had never seen. When he passed through Prescott on his way to Columbia he said that he had enjoyed every minute of it, but that he had stayed "just long enough."

TAKES UP TRUST PROBLEM

Only Matter Touched On In President's Message to Congress

Additional Legislation to Strengthen Present Statutes Is Recommended---Defends Standard Oil and Tobacco Decisions

Washington.—President Taft's annual mesage, which was read in both houses of congress Tuesday, deals exclusively with the anti-trust statute. The message in part is as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives: This mesage is the first of several which I shall send to congress during the interval between the opening of its regular session and its adjournment for the Christmas holidays. The amount of information to be communicated as to the operations of the government, the number of important subjects calling for comment by the executive, and the transmission to congress of exhaustive reports by special commissions, make it impossible to include in one message of a reasonable length a discussion of the topics that ought to be brought to the attention of the national legislature at its first regular session.

The Anti-Trust Law—The Supreme Court Decisions.

In May last the Supreme court handed down decisions in the suits in equity brought by the United States to enjoin the further maintenance of the Standard Oil trust and of the American Tobacco trust, and to secure their dissolution. The decisions are epoch-making and serve to advise the business world authoritatively of the scope and operation of the anti-trust law of 1890. The decisions do not depart in any substantial way from the previous decisions of the court in construing and applying this important statute, but they clarify those important decisions by further defining the already admitted exceptions to the literal construction of the act. By the decrees, they furnish a useful precedent as to the proper method of dealing with the capital and property of illegal trusts. These decisions suggest the need and wisdom of additional or supplemental legislation to make it easier for the entire business community to square with the rule of action and legality thus finally established and to preserve the benefit, freedom and spur of reasonable competition without loss of real efficiency or progress.

No Change in the Rule of Decision—Merely in Form of Expression.

The statute in its first section declares to be illegal "every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations," and in the second, declares guilty of a misdemeanor every person who shall monopolize or attempt to monopolize or combine or conspire with any other person to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce of the several states or with foreign nations."

In two early cases, where the statute was invoked to enjoin a transportation agreement between interstate railroad companies, it was held that it was no defense to show that the agreement as to rates complained of was reasonal at common law, because it was said that the statute was directed against all contracts and combinations in restraint of trade whether reasonal at common law or not. It was plain from the record, however, that the contracts complained of in those cases would not have been deemed reasonable at common law.

It has been said that the court, by introducing into the construction of the statute common law distinctions, has emasculated it. This is obviously untrue. By its judgment every contract and combination in restraint of interstate trade made with the purpose, or necessary effect of controlling prices by stifling competition, or of establishing in whole or in part a monopoly of such trade, is condemned by the statute. The most extreme critiics cannot instance a case that ought to be condemned under the statute which is not brought within its terms as thus construed.

The sugestion is also made that the Supreme court by its decisions in the last two cases has committed to the court the undefined and unlimited discretion to determine whether a case of restraint of trade is within the terms of the statute. This is wholly untrue. A reasonable restraint of trade at common law is well understood and is clearly defined. It does not rest in the discretion of the court. It must be limited to acomplish the purpose of a lawful main contract to which, in order that it shall be enforceable at all, it must be incidental. If it exceeds the needs of that contract it is void.

The Remedy in Equity by Dissolution.

In the Standard Oil case the Supreme and circuit courts found the combination to be a monopoly of the interstate business of refining, transporting, and marketing petroleum and its products, effected and maintained through thirty-seven different corporations, the stock of which was held by a New Jersey company. It in effect commanded the dissolution of this combination, directed the transfer and pro-rata distribution by the New Jersey company of the stock held by it in the thirty-seven corporations to and among its stockholders, and the corporations and individual defendants were enjoined from conspiring or combining to restore such monopoly and all agreements betwen the subsidiary corporations tending to produce or bring about further violations of the act were enjoined.

In the Tobacco case, the court found that the individual defendants, twenty-nine in number, had been engaged in a successful effort to acquire complete dominion over the manufacture, sale, and distribution of tobacco in this country and abroad, and that this had been done by combinations made with a purpose and effect to stifle competition, control prices, and establish a monopoly, not only in the manufacture of tobacco, but also of tin-foil and licorice, used in its manufacture and of its products of cigars, cigarettes and snuffs. The tobacco suit presentend a far more complicated and difficult case than the Standard Oil suit for a decree which would effectuate the will of the court and end the violation of the statute. There was here no single holding company as in the case of the Standard Oil trust. The main company was the American Tobacco company, a manufacturing, selling and holding company. The plan adopted to destroy the combination and restore competition involved the redivision of the capital and plants of the whole trust between some of the companies constituting the trust and new companies organized for the purposes of the decree and made parties to it, and numbering, new and old, fourteen.

In the original suit there were twenty-nine defendants who were charged with being the conspirators through whom the illegal combination acquired and exercised its unlawful dominion. Under the decree these defendants will hold amounts of stock in the various distributee companies ranging from 41 per cent. as a maximum to 28½ per cent. as a minimum, except in the case of one small company, the Porto Rican Tobacco company, in which they will hold 45 per cent. The twenty-nine individual defendants are enjoined for three years from buying any stock except from each other, and the group is thus prevented from extending its control during that period. All parties to the suit, and the new companies who are made parties, are enjoined perpetually from in any way effecting any combination between any of the companies in violation of the statute by way of resumption of the old trust. Each of the fourteen companies is enjoined from acquiring stock in any of the others. All these companies are enjoined from having common directors or officers, or common buying or selling agents, or common offices, or lending money to each other.

Size of New Companies.

Objection was made by certain independent tobacco companies that this settlement was unjust because it left companies with very large capital in active business, and that the settlement that would be effective to put all on an equality would be a division of the capital and plant of the trust into small fractions in amount more nearly equal to that of each of the independent companies. This contention results from a misunderstanding of the anti-trust law and its purpose. It is not intended thereby to prevent the accumulation of large capital in business enterprises in which such a combination can secure reduced cost of production, sale and distribution. It is directly against such an aggregation of capital only when its purpose is that of stifling competition, enhancing or controlling prices and establishing a monopoly. If we shall have by the decree defeated these purposes and restored competition between the large units into which the capital and plant have been divided, we shall have accomplished the useful purpose of the statute.

It is not the purpose of the statute to confiscate the property and capital of the offending trusts. Methods of punishment by fine or imprisonment of the individual offenders, by fine of the corporation, or by forfeiture of its goods in transportation, are provided, but the proceeding in equity is a specific remedy to stop the operation of the trust by injunction and prevent the future use of the plant and capital in violation of the statute.

I venture to say that not in the history of American law has a decree more effective for such a purpose been entered by a court than that against the Tobacco trust.

Common-Stock Ownership.

It has been assumed that the present pro-rata and common ownership in all these companies by former stockholders of the trust would insure a continuance of the same old single control of all the companies into which the trust has by decree been disintegrated. This is erroneous and is based upon the assumed inefficacy and innocuousness of judicial injunctions. The companies are enjoined from co-operation or combination; they have different managers, directors, purchasing and sales agents. If all or any of the numerous stockholders, reaching into the thousands, attempt to secure concerted action of the companies with a view to the control of the market, their number is so large that such an attempt could not well be concealed and its prime movers and all its participants would be at once subject to contempt proceedings and imprisonment of a summary character. The immediate result of the present situation will necessarily be activity by all the companies under different managers and then competition must follow, or there will be activity by one company and stagnation by another.

Movement for Repeal of the Anti-Trust Law.

But now that the anti-trust act is seen to be effective for the accomplishment of the purpose of its enactment, we are met by a cry from many different quarters for its repeal. It is said to be obstructive of business progress, to be an attempt to restore old-fashioned methods of destructive competition between small units, and to make impossible those useful combinations of capital and the reduction of the cost of production that are essential to continued prosperity and normal growth.

In the recent decisions the Supreme court makes clear that there is nothing in the statute which condemns combinations of capital or mere bigness of plant organized to secure economy in production and a reduction of its cost. It is only when the purpose or necessary effect of the organization and maintenance of the combination or the aggregation of immense size are the stifling of competition, actual and potential, and the enhancing of prices and establishing a monopoly, that the statute is violated.

Lack of Definiteness in the Statute.

The complaint is made of the statute that it is not sufficiently definite in its description of that which is forbidden, to enable business men to avoid its violation. The suggestion is, that we may have a combination of two corporations, which may run on for years, and that subsequently the attorney general may conclude that it was a violation of the statute, and that which was supposed by the combiners to be inocent then turns out to be a combination in violation of the statute. The answer to this hypothetical case is that when men attempt to amass stupendous capital as will enable them to suppress competition, control prices and establish a monopoly they know the purpose of their acts. Men do not do such a thing without having it clearly in mind.

I see no objection—and indeed I can see decided advantages—in the enactment of a law which shall describe and denounce methods of competition, which are unfair and are badges of the unlawful purpose denounced in the anti-trust law.

Federal Incorporation Recommended.

In a special message to congress on January 7, 1910, I ventured to point out the disturbance to business that would probably attend the dissolution of these offending trusts. I said:

"But such an investigation and possible prosecution of corporations whose prosperity or destruction affects the comfort not only of stockholders but of millions of wage earners, employes, and associated tradesmen must necessarily tend to disturb the confidence of the business community, to dry up the now flowing sources of capital from its places of hoarding, and produce a halt in our present prosperity that will cause suffering and strained circumstances among the innocent many for the fault of the guilty few. The question which I wish in this message to bring clearly to the consideration and discussion of congress is whether, in order to avoid such a possible business dauger, something cannot be done by which these business combinations may be offered a means, without great financial disturbance, of changing the character, organization and extent of their business into one within the lines of the law under federal control and supervision, securing compliance with the anti-trust statute.

"Generally, in the industrial combinations called 'Trusts,' the principal business is the sale of goods in many states and in foreign markets; in other words, the interstate and foreign business far exceeds the business done in any one state. This fact will justify the federal government in granting a federal charter to such a combination to make and sell in interstate and foreign commerce the products of useful manufacture under such limitations as will secure a compliance with the anti-trust law. It is possible so to frame a statute that while it offers protection to a federal company against harmful, vexatious and unnecessary invasion by the states, it shall subject it to reasonable taxation and control by the states with respect to its purely local business.

"Corporations organized under this act should be prohibited from acquiring and holding stock in other corporations (except for special reasons, upon approval by the proper federal authority), thus avoiding the creation under national auspices of the holding company with subordinate corporations in different states, which has been such an effective agency in the creation of the great trusts and monopolies.

"If the prohibition of the anti-trust act against combinations in restraint of trade is to be effectively enforced, it is essential that the national government shall provide for the creation of national corporations to carry on a legitimate business throughout the United States. The conflicting laws of the different states of the Union with respect to foreign corporations makes it difficult, if not impossible, for one corporation to comply with their requirements so as to carry on business in a number of different states."

Federal Corporation Commission Proposed.

I do not set forth in detail the terms and sections of a statute which might supply the constructive legislation permitting and aiding the formation of combinations of capital into federal corporations. They should be subject to rigid rules as to their organization and procedure, including effective publicity, and to the closest supervision as to the issue of stock and bonds by an executive bureau or commission in the department of commerce and labor, to which in times of doubt they might well submit their proposed plans for future business. It must be distinctly understood that incorporation under a federal law could not exempt the company thus formed and its incorporators and managers from prosecution under the anti-trust law for subsequent ilegal conduct, but the publicity of its procedure and the opportunity for frequent consultation as to the legitimate purpose of its transactions would offer it as great security against successful prosecutions for violations of the law as would be practical or wise.

Such a bureau or commission might well be invested also with the duty already referred to, of aiding the courts in the dissolution and recreation of trusts within the law. It should be an executive tribunal of the dignity and power of the comptroller of the currency or the interstate commerce commission, which now exercise supervisory power over important classes of corporations under federal regulation.

The drafting of such a federal incorporation law would offer ample opportunity to prevent many manifest evils in corporate management today, including irresponsibility of control in the hands of the few who are not the real owners.

Incorporation Voluntary.

I recommend that the federal charters thus to be granted shall be voluntary, at least until experience justifies mandatory provisions. The benefit to be derived from the operation of great businesses under the protection of such a charter would attract all who are anxious to keep within the lines of the law. Other large combinations that fail to take advantage of the federal incorporation will not have a right to complain if their failure is ascribed to unwillingness to submit their transactions to the careful scrutiny, competent supervision and publicity attendant upon the enjoyment of such a charter.

Supplemental Legislation Needed.

The opportunity thus suggested for federal incorporation, it seems to me, is suitable constructive legislation needed to facilitate the squaring of great industrial enterprises to the rule of action laid down by the anti-trust law. This statute as construed by the Supreme court must continue to be the line of distinction for legitimate business. It must be enforced, unless we are to banish individualism from all business and reduce it to one common system of regulation or control of prices like that which now prevails with respect to public utilities, and which when applied to all business would be a long step toward state socialism.

ADDS TO NATION'S WEALTH

Fertile Acres of Uncle Sam's Domain Thrown Open to the Plow of the Farmer.

The domains of Uncle Sam, within his gift, are growing smaller each year and it is only occasionally that we read of a new land opening where men with a birthright under the stars and stripes can procure a farm home for the mere cost of his filing fees, and the brain and brawn he will put into the development of the land. Secretary Fisher, the steward of Uncle Sam's estates, has recently thrown open to settlement a large area of land in northwestern Montana, which has been withdrawn from settlement and entry by the reclamation service with a view to irrigation. Uncle Sam withdrew this 250,000 acre empire from settlement a few years ago with the view of placing it under irrigation from the large Blackfeet project which is now being constructed. Settlers came to the land lying east, west and south of this reserved land in 1907, 1908 and 1909, and have had such success in growing all forms of agricultural products, that Uncle Sam has been compelled to throw the land open to settlement and entry under the 320 and 160 acre homestead laws. This became effective November 20, 1911. Professor Thomas Shaw, one of the foremost agricultural authorities in the United States, is enthusiastic over the possibilities of the new area opened for settlement.

Business.

A train in Arizona was boarded by robbers, who went through the pockets of the luckless passengers. One of them happened to be a traveling salesman from New York, who, when his turn came, flashed out $200, but rapidly took $4 from the pile and placed it in his vest pocket.

"What do you mean by that?" asked the robber, as he toyed with his revolver. Hurriedly came the answer: "Mine frent, you surely vould not refuse me two per cent. discount on a strictly cash transaction like dis?"—Fun.

Federal Attorneys Confer With Lawyers at Los Angeles

SAID NO AGREEMENT MADE

Authorities Are Co-operating to Uncover One of the Most Gigantic Conspiracies Ever Conceived In History of Country.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 4.—"The United States government and the California authorities are co-operating to uncover one of the most gigantic conspiracies ever conceived in the history of this country."

This was the declaration of Assistant District Attorney W. Joseph Ford, second in command to District Attorney John D. Fredericks, and the man who was arrested in Indianapolis for alleged illegal extradition of John J. McNamara.

"It is only a question now of whether the federal government or the state authorities can reach certain persons better and bring them to justice more effectively," continued Mr. Ford. The latter has been in Chicago for the gathering of evidence for the prosecution and while his chief, District Attorney Fredericks, was resting on a ranch near here, Ford occupied himself with the details of the McNamara case. He admitted that the prosecution had under surveillance in other parts of the country some prominent labor leaders alleged to have been involved in the Times explosion, but said that arrests might first be made by the federal government in connection with its investigation.

Mrs. Jordan Victim of Mysterious Attack a Month Ago Still Weak And Suffering.

Mount Pleasant, Dec. 4.—Mrs. J. B. Jordan of this city, the victim of a mysterious assault a month ago, has lost the sight of her right eye as a result of the attack. She was injured about the head, and reports from the home are that she still is weak as a result of the affair. She remembers nothing about the assault. No one has been arrested by the authorities in connection with the attack, though they have been working on the case for a month.

Many Rural Schools Are Without Teachers for the Winter Months as Eligibles Stay Away.

Creston, Dec. 4.—Five of the rural schools in this county are without teachers for the winter terms, not for lack of teachers holding certificates, but because many of those eligible to teach prefer not to go into the country schools for the winter. The school directors of those districts are doing some lively skirmishing to find some teachers willing to accept the proposition.

Dubuque, Dec. 4.—Joseph Brandenberger, sentenced on the first trial to life imprisonment for the murder of Henry Schranz and on the retrial found guilty of manslaughter, has been sentenced to eight years intermediate sentence and to pay a fine of $1,000.

W. L. DOUGLAS' TRUST PLAN

Manufacturer Thinks Government Should Obtain Publicity by a License System.

Large business organizations have come to stay. We cannot go back to old conditions. We must meet world competition. Large concerns can produce goods at lower cost than small ones. Germany favors large corporations. The method of the present national administration is to dissolve the great organizations and make them smaller, which is a backward step. There should be no limit to a corporation doing a large and legitimate business, such as would be possible under the licensing plan which I favor, writes W. L. Douglas, former governor of Massachusetts, in the Boston Herald.

Prejudices against corporations merely because they are big, perhaps, must be done away with. They give labor better returns. They cheapen product and thus benefit the consmer. They give opportunities to small investors who get returns otherwise unattainable. They employ able young men who have no capital at all, but who receive handsome salaries for their ability and service.

In place of the Sherman law it is my opinion there should be a department at Washington to grant licenses to all manufacturers and corporations in this country who do an interstate commerce business.

The law should be made so clear, plain and definite that it could not be misunderstood. It should require all capital to be paid in full. Semi-yearly statements should be given to the public and certified by a public accountant. There should be a board of examiners in each state to look after these corporations just as cur national banks are watched by the national government. They should have the right to enter the offices and examine the records of all the directorates of these companies.

Premiums for Boys and Girls

The boys and girls of Iowa have a fine chance to win many good premiums at the Third Annual Boys and Girls Club Contest to be held at the Iowa State College at Ames next month. Several free trips to Washington, D. C., a gasoline engine, a sewing machine, are just a few of the things offered as prizes on corn, cooking, sewing, written essays, etc. This is all free.

Full particulars and premium list can be had by writing to P. C. Taff, Manager of Contest, Ames, Iowa.

We wish to call your attention to the fact that most infectious diseases such as whooping cough, diphtheria and scarlet fever are contracted when the child has a cold. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will quickly cure a cold and greatly lessen the danger of contracting these diseases. This remedy is famous for its cures of colds. It contains no opium or other narcotic and may be given to a child with implicit confidence. Sold by G. A. Pabst.

Gumption on the Farm

There is nothing that gives a man such safe anchorage in life as a good wife.

File the cross-cut saw yourself; you will thus soon save enough to buy a new saw.

Take the frost out of your grindstone before you grind the ax, but do it gradually, and not by using too hot water. That would injure the quality of the stone.

Don't put off till spring any outside work that can be done now. Clean up the garden, haul out manure, and when possible push the plowing before snow flies.

Keep wide paths shoveled to every out-building. Help to open the roads when heavy snows drift them, whether you are called out by the path master or not. See that the stock is sheltered from the cold every day and every night—From December Farm Journal.

WISE WORDS

Many business advantages are gained through a bank account. The merchant who is in want of money in order to take advantage of low prices finds his bank a help. The farmer who needs money but wishes to hold his crops for better prices is taken care of. The laboring man strengthens his position in the community. They all have the confidence of the banker which is very often a great assistance.

EVENTS HERE AND THERE

Condensed Into a Few Lines for the Perusal of the Busy Man—Latest Personal Information.

Washington

The battleship Maine was blown up in Havana harbor by an explosion from the outside. This is the gist of a short statement issued by the navy department in Washington, based on findings made by the joint army and navy board, which spent several months in Havana harbor investigating the wreck.

• • •

The Payne bill to establish a permanent tariff board was brought up in the house committee on ways and means at Washington and postponed indefinitely on a unanimous vote of the Democrats. This probably shuts off consideration of the measure at this session.

• • •

The ways and means committee of the American Federation of Labor issued a statement at Washington condemning the McNamara brothers in their "inhumanity," and declaring that organized labor should not be held "either legally or morally responsible for the crime of an individual member." The statement brands the McNamaras as "recreant to the good name and high ideals of labor."

• • •

Elbert H. Gary, chief executive of the United States Steel corporation, stated before the senate committee on interstate commerce his belief that the United States government must assume control of big corporations to protect the public and insure the advantage of corporation economies and development.

• • •

According to the annual report of James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, just made public, for the first time in many years the total value of farm products has declined from that of the preceding year. The estimate for 1911 is based on the census items, and is $8,417,000,000, or $277,000,000 under the total for 1910.

• • •

The Supreme court of the United States refused to grant a stay of the beef packers' trial in Chicago until the court should be able to pass on the constitutional question raised by the packers in habeas corpus proceedings.

• • •

Attorney General Wickersham became ill while attending the cabinet session. Doctor De Laney, President Taft's physician, was summoned from the war department. Doctor De Laney ordered the attorney general to be moved to his home. It was said that Mr. Wickersham was suffering from a slight attack of indigestion.

Foreign

Eight foreigners, half of them Americans, were killed in Shensi, several mission houses were destroyed and 8,000 Manchus were slain by Chinese, according to the first direct and uncensored news received at Peking from Sianfu since the recent outbreak there.

• • •

That the American state department will sustain Shuster in all his constitutional rights is now a matter of fact, for with 2,000 Russian Cossacks advancing to occupy Teheran, proclaim martial law and oust him at the bayonet as Persia's financial agent, he has been advised by the government to stand his ground and defy the czar.

Nearly $100,000,000 worth of domestic merchandise from the United States was transported across the isthmus of Panama in the fiscal year of 1911, via the two railway lines.

Lillian Graham sprung the greatest sensation that has arisen in the case of the shooting show girls when she testified at New York that she shot Millionaire W. E. D. Stokes because "the fact flashed through my mind about his having murdered Al Adams, and I knew he would murder me." Adams, the policy king, died at the Ansonia hotel, October 1, 1907.

• • •

Victor C. Benner, an Illinois Central railroad guard, was killed and Capt. G. W. Dillaway, deputy United States marshal, and Charles McCalman, a railway guard, were wounded in a fight which occurred in the Illinois Central yards near Memphis, Tenn., betwene the guards and a marshal's force.

Boys and Girls All Over Iowa Prepare For Short Course

ALL ARE WORKING FOR TRIPS

More Than Two Thousand Boys Actually Engaged In the Corn-Growing Contest, and Many More Girls After Cooking Prizes.

Ames.—Fifteen thousand boys and girls in Iowa are interested in the state corn-growing and cooking contests which culminate at the Iowa State college short course at Ames, Jan. 1 to 13. Not all of them are contestants, but nearly a third of them are; the others are concerned as members of the Iowa boys' and girls' clubs, which are maintained by the extension department of the college. However, more than 2,000 farm boys are actually engaged in the acre-corn-growing contest, and Prof. E. C. Bishop, who has charge of the clubs, says that more than that many girls are trying for the many cooking prizes. At the short course several thousand dollars in prizes will be awarded. At the top of the list of choice premiums are the eight trips to Washington, D. C., which are to be given to the boys who grow the best acre of corn in the district. There will be awards for every kind of corn growing and garden work, and every kind of sewing and cooking that boys and girls can do. In all, they amount to several thousands of dollars in cups, medals, cash and merchandise.

Reynolds May Leave Iowa.

Des Moines.—The current issue of the Chicago Banker, a leading periodical in financial circles, contains the statement that Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National bank, may enter the banking business in California. Mr. Reynolds goes to California on January 15th, and it is rumored that a big banking consolidation depends largely on whether Mr. Reynolds would like to become a permanent resident of that state.

Davenport-Iowa City Line Sold.

Iowa City.—It is reported here that the Davenport-Iowa City Traction company has sold all its rights and property to C. E. Coon of Omaha, the railroad man who is building the Waterloo-Oskaloosa line, and has been interested in the Iowa City-Davenport line. Reorganization and early building is forecasted. It is said Coon buys for eastern capitalists.

To Have Six-story Hotel.

Ottumwa.—A proposition for the erection of a $200,000 six-story hotel building was made to a meeting of business men by W. R. Daum, a local capitalist. Sufficient pledges of stock subscription were secured to induce a campaignn to carry the proposition through.

Hotel to Have Addition.

Fort Dodge.—So great has been the number of patrons that the Wahkonsa hotel of 150 rooms must have an addition. Richard Snell, heir of the late Tom Snell of Clinton, Ill., has announced he will erect a three-story building just west of the hotel next spring.

New Hospital Completed.

Mason City.—The City Park hospital has been completed and turned over to its owners by the contractors. The building is a three-story brick structure 120 by 60 feet and is modern in every way. It cost $75,000. The building is owned by local physicians.

Boy Fatally Hurts Friend.

Marshalltown.—While hunting rabbits, a shotgun in the hands of Frank Wittig, aged 15 years, accidentally was discharged, striking Roy Snyder, aged 15 years, in the back of the head.

Seek Damages for Death.

Albia.—The $10,000 damage suit of John Teeter against the Hocking Coal Co., for the death of a man in the company's mines, is on trial in the district court.

Prominent Sioux City Man Dies.

Sioux City.—Edgar H. Stone, a wealthy business man, died suddenly of heart failure. He was a classmate of President Taft at Yale.

Second Degree Murder.

Albia.—John Buford, found guilty of murder in the second degree, was sentenced to twelve years in the penitentiary at Anamosa.

Storm Lake Votes School.

Storm Lake.—Storm Lake is to have a new $60,000 school building to take the place of the present inadequate structure.

B. W. Garrett Addresses 300.

Boone.—B. W. Garrett, clerk of the supreme court, had the honor of being the first man to speak in the mammoth new shops of the Chicago & Northwestern railway company at Boone. Mr. Garrett addressed a meeting of 300 employes of the Northwestern in connection with the Men and Religion Forward Movement. The shops at Boone are said to be the largest between Chicago and the Pacific coast and when completed will cost $5,000,000.

Banks Show Increase In Deposits.

Des Moines.—Deposits in the 712 savings banks, 280 state banks and 14 trust companies operating under the jurisdiction of the state banking department increased $6,108,326.29 between November 10, 1910, and November 15, 1911, according to official returns to the state auditor.

Dean Made Commissioner.

Glenwood.—Seth Dean has been appointed by the board of supervisors of Jasper county, commissioner to assess the land for benefits to pay for cutting the big ditch on Skunk river, in that county. This project will straighten the river for twenty miles, and cost about $175,000.

Glenwood Man Is Winner.

Glenwood.—At the national congress and apple show held in St. Joseph, Mo., last week, J. W. Murphy of Glenwood, exhibiting Mills county apples, won twelve firsts and nine seconds on variety displays. He won first and third on Jonathans, and first and second on Winesaps.

Pastor Chastises Member of Flock.

Vinton.—F. M. Wood, pastor of the Disciple church of Urbana, ten miles northeast of here, severely pummeled William Cumberland, a leading member of his church, upon the streets of the village. Previous differences over church matters seem to have been the cause.

Find Four Homeless Children.

Muscatine.—Four little girls, aged 7, 9, 11 and 12 years deserted by their mother, Mrs. Hattie Gatton, were found living in holes in lumber piles and living on refuse from restaurants. They were dirty and half starved and were taken to the county farm.

Trying to Save the Fish.

Glenwood.—Tons of game fish in Glenwood Park lake are in danger of freezing because of low water, and State Game Warden Lincoln is here trying to arrange some method of saving them. Water will be pumped into the lake below the ice.

Under Bonds for Shooting.

Quimby.—Dan Buckley has been bound over to the grand jury under $10,000 bonds for shooting "Ebb" Hull in the back. Hull says he stopped near Buckley's house and while talking to a friend was shot from ambush.

Mahaska Grange.

Oskaloosa.—A banquet attended by 200 was held here when the Grange of Mahaska county celebrated the 45th anniversary of the founding of the society. There are now 1,100 members of the grange in Mahaska county.

Belle Plaine Is Sued.

Belle Plaine.—Mrs. Susan Ward has started suit against the city of Belle Plaine for $2,000 for injuries claimed on account of falling on a sidewalk. Mrs. S. Pettit has started a similar suit, claiming $1,000 damages.

Sensational Case Settled.

Glenwood.—Miss Maud Rodman and Earl Mendenhall have been married and the charges of abduction against the latter will be dropped. The girl disappeared last August, and arrests and sensations have followed ever since.

Will Have Quiet Trial.

Marshalltown.—James S. Johnson has sued John A. Welter and Dennis Milan for $50 damages on a real estate deal. All are deaf mutes and an interpreter of the sign language will be necessary before it can be tried.

Co-operative Company Decision.

Decorah.—Judge Hobson in the district court has held that Farmers' co-operative companies can not enforce special requirements from members, but must enter the open market like other concerns.

Would Start Co-operative Store.

Creston.—Railroad men held a secret meeting here and are making plans to start a co-operative grocery store and meat market and put an end to the grocers' and butchers' trust.

Safe at Avery Is Blown.

Avery.—The safe of the Avery Supply Company store was blown with nitroglycerine and $50 stolen. There is no clue to the burglars.

here are certain natures to whom h appearance of evil, each form of nquency is a fresh surprise. They born simple, in the sweet sense of word, and they go down to old never of the world, although in a se wordly. If Dan Blair's eyes e somewhat opened at twenty-two, had yet the bloom on his soul. He no fool, but his ideals stood up h on its pedestal and ready to ap-r one by one to him as the scenes his life shifted and the different tains rose. He had been trained finance from his boyhood and he a born financier. Money was his tural element; he could go far in But woman! He was one of those nly creatures—a knight—to whom h woman is a sacred thing: a e, a crystal-clear soul, made to rish and to protect, made to be filed. And in Dan were all the lities that go to make up the un-ish, tender, foolish, and often un-ppy American husband. These were e of the other things he had in-ited from his father. Blair, senior, married his first love, and where-his boy had been trained to know ney and its value, how to keep it spend it, to save it and to make he had been taught nothing at all out woman. He had never been ght to distrust women, never been rned against them; he had been ght nothing but his father's mem-of his mother, and the result was t he worshiped the sex and won-ed at the mystery.

With Gordon Galorey and the oth- he had ridden, shot better than y, and had played, but with Lady lorey and the Duchess of Break-ter he was nothing but a child. As as his hostess was concerned, on eral occasions she had put to him rtain states of affairs, well, touch-gly. Dan had been moved by the ries of sore need among the ten-ts, had been impressed by the ne-ssity of reforms and rebuildings d on each occasion had given his tess a check. She had asked him say nothing about it to Gordon, and had kept his silence. Dan liked dy Galorey extremely: she was y, witty and friendly. She treated m as a member of the family and de no demands on him, save the es mentioned.

In the time that he had come to ow the Duchess of Breakwater she, her part, had filled him full of oth-confidences. Into his young ears e poured the story of her disap-intment, her disjointed life, from r worldly girlhood to her disillusion marriage. She was beautiful when e talked and more lovely when she pt. Dan thought himself in love h the Duchess of Breakwater. His versations with her had brought m to this conclusion. They had otored from Osdene Park together, d he had been extremely taken with e pleasure of it, and with the fact their real companionship. Two or ee times the words had been on s lips, which were fated not to be oken then, however, and Dan ached the Gaiety still unfettered, s duchess by his side. And then the chestra had begun to play "Manda-y," the curtain had gone up and tty Lane had come out on the ards. But her apparition did not ike off his chains immediately, nor d he renounce his plan to tell the chess the very next day that he ed her.

When with sparkling eyes Lady lorey raved about "Mandalay," Dan tened with eagerness. Everybody emed to know all about Letty Lane, t he alone knew from what town e had come!

They went for supper at the Carl-n after the theater.

"Letty," Lady Galorey said, "tells it herself how the impresario heard her sing in some country church—picked her up then and there and brought her over here, and they say she married him."

Dan Blair could have told them how she had sung in that little church that day. Dan was eating his caviare sandwich. "Her name then was Sally Towney," he murmured. How little he had guessed that she was singing herself right out of that church and into the London Gaiety Theater! Anyway, she had made him "sit up!" It was a far cry from Montana to the London Gaiety. And so she married the greasy Jew who had discovered her!

Dan glanced over at the Duchess of Breakwater. She was looking well, exquisitely high bred, and she impressed him. She leaned slightly over to him, laughing. He had hardly dared to meet her eyes that day, fearing that she might read his secret. She had told him that in her own right she was a countess—the Countess of Stainer. Titles didn't cut any ice with him. At any rate, she would be able to "buy back the old farm"—that is the way Dan put it. She had told him of the beautiful old Stainer Court, mortgaged and hung up with debts, as deep in ruins as the ivy was thick on the walls.

As Dan looked over at the duchess he saw the other people staring and looking about at a table near. It was spread a little to their left for four people, a great bouquet of orchids in the center.

"There," Galorey said, "there's Letty Lane." And the singer came in, followed by three men, the first of them the Prince Poniotowsky, indolent, bored, haughty, his eye-glass dangling. Miss Lane was dressed in black, a superb costume of faultless cut, and it enfolded her like a shadow; as a shadow might enfold a specter, for the dancer was as pale as the dead. She had neither painted nor rouged, she had evidently employed no coquetry to disguise her fag; rather she seemed to be on the verge of a serious illness, and presented a striking contrast to the brilliant creature, who had shone before their eyes not an hour before. Her dress was a challenge to the more gay and delicate affairs the other women in the restaurant wore. The gown came severely up to her chin. Its high collar closed around with a pearl necklace; from her ears fell pearls, long, creamy and priceless. She wore a great feathered hat, which, drooping, almost hid her small, pale face and her golden hair. She drew off her gloves as she came in and her white, jeweled hands flashed. She looked infinitely tired and extremely bored. As soon as she took her seat at the table intended for her party, Poniotowsky poured her out a glass of champagne, which she drank off as though it were water.

"Gad," Lord Galorey said, "she is a stunner! What a figure, and what a head, and what daring to dress like that!"

"She knows how to make herself conspicuous," said the Duchess of Breakwater.

"She looks extremely ill," said Lady Galorey. "The pace she goes will do her up in a year or two."

Dan Blair had his back to her, and when they rose to leave he was the last to pass out. Letty Lane saw him, and a light broke over her pallid face. She nodded and smiled and shook her hand in a pretty little salute. If her face was pale, her lips were red, and her smile was like sunlight; and at her recognition a wave of friendly fellowship swept over the young man—a sort of loyal kinship to her which he hadn't felt for any other women there, and which he could not have explained. In warm approval of the actress' distinction, he said softly to himself: "That's all right—she makes the rest of them look like thirty cents."

CHAPTER VI.

Galorey Seeks Advice.

Blair did not go back at once to Osdene Park. He stopped over in London for a few days to see Joshua Ruggles, and so remarked for the first time the difference between the speech of the old and the new world. Mr. Ruggles spoke broadly, with complete disregard of the frills and adornments of the King's English. He spoke United States of the pure, broad, western brand, and it rang out, it vibrated and swelled and rolled, and as Ruggles didn't care who heard him, nothing of what he had to say was lost.

Old Mr. Blair had left behind him a comrade, and as far as advice could go the old man knew that his Dan would not be bankrupt.

"Advice," Dan Blair senior once said to his boy, "is the kind of thing we want some fellow to give us when we ain't going to do the thing we ought to do, or are a little ashamed of something we have done. It's an awful good way to get cured of asking advice just to do what the fellow tells you to at once."

During Ruggles' stay in London the young fellow looked to it that Ruggles saw the sights, and the two did the principal features of the big town, to the rich enjoyment of the Westerner. Dan took his friend every night to the play, and on the fourth evening Ruggles said: "Let's go to the circus or a vawdeville, Dan. I have learned this show by heart!" They had been every night to see "Mandalay."

"Oh, you go on where you like, Josh," the boy answered. "I'm going to see how she looks from the pit."

Ruggles was not a Blairtown man. He had come from farther west, and had never heard anything of Sarah Towney or Letty Lane. He applauded the actress vigorously at the Gaiety at first, and after the third night slept through most of the performance. When he waked up he tried to discover what attraction Letty Lane had for Dan. For the young man never left Ruggles' side, never went behind the scenes, though he seemed absorbed, as a man usually is absorbed for one reason only.

In response to a telegram from Osdene Park, Dan motored out there one afternoon, and during his absence Ruggles was surprised at his hotel by a call.

"My dear Mr. Ruggles," Lord Galorey said, for he it was the page boy fetched up, "why don't you come out to see us? All friends of old Mr. Blair's are welcome at Osdene."

Ruggles thanked Galorey and said he was not a visiting man, that he only had a short time in London, and was going to Ireland to look up "his family tree."

"There are one hundred acres of trees in Osdene," laughed Galorey; "you can climb them all." And Ruggles replied:

"I guess I wouldn't find any O'Shaughnessy Ruggles at the top of any of 'em, my lord. The boy has gone out to see you all today."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Could Have Saved Pepys' Eyes.

Mr. d'Arcy Power has contributed a paper to the London Lancet dealing with the question of the eyesight of Samuel Pepys and the physical reasons that caused him to discontinue his diary at the age of 36. It seems a little late in the day to be prescribing for Samuel Pepys, but Mr. Power tells us the exact prescription that he would have written and he makes no doubt that he could have removed the trouble and so prolonged the incomparable diary for many years. Pepys himself makes frequent references to his trouble, which at that time was beyond the reach of optical skill. He closes his diary as being "all that I doubt I shall ever able to do with my own eyes in the keeping of my journal." He used such magnifying glasses and "tubes" as the science of the day could suggest, but actually, says Mr. Power, his trouble was a slight one and could have been remedied quickly by the modern optician.

So Then He Took Another

How the Pretty Girl Kept Her Word When Threatened With a Kiss.

With impudent daring the dashing young man, having carried on a merry conversation until the timid creature had not noticed how far they were straying from the house, turned to her and said:

"I believe I will kiss you."

"Sir!" she exclaimed haughtily, drawing herself up with an air of regal disdain. "How dare you?"

"It isn't a question of courage; it's a question of taste," he smiled nonchalantly.

"I positively forbid you to do such a thing!" she declared.

"And what good does your forbidding do?" he argued. "We are fully a mile from any one. We are away out here in the meadows. Listen to the joyous trilling of yonder birds that are billing and cooing. All nature suggests love-making, and—"

"Sir, you are positively rude!" she interrupted, stamping her little foot.

"I should be rude, indeed, not to wish to kiss so pretty a girl in such lovely surroundings," he said placing his arm firmly about her slender waist.

"I will not let you kiss me!" she asserted.

"You will not?" he laughed easily. "How will you prevent me? I am stronger than you; you cannot get away from me."

"I can still scream, thank heaven!" she answered determinedly.

With no further argument he placed his free hand under her dimpled chin, elevated it to the proper angle and kissed her.

True to her word, she exclaimed, "Thank heaven!"—Judge.

Fellows in Distress.

An efficient woman principal of a New York grammar school, though devoid of good looks and bearing the marks of long service in her profession, still retains the charm of a delightful frankness. One day while watching the pupils pass out of her building two by two, as usual, she noticed one boy marching alone, with his arm to his eyes, sobbing tumultuously. In answer to her solicitous inquiry as she drew him from the line, the little fellow wailed: "I—I haven't g-got no pardner!"

The principal extended a prompt and sympathetic hand. "Shake, dear boy, shake!" she invited. "I haven't either."

COMING AGAIN SOON

Those Successful Specialists, the Northwestern United Doctors, will be in Garner at the Victoria Hotel, on Monday, Dec. 18

ONE DAY ONLY

Well Pleased Patients

In all parts of the state, show the remarkable success of these talented physicians in the treatment of Chronic Diseases.

The united experience and special formulas discovered and perfected by these Doctors has enabled them to accomplish more than any one physician can ever hope to accomplish. They number their patients by the thousands and have treated successfully nearly every known nervous and chronic disease and deformity.

Extracts from hundreds of letters received show that they carry out their promises, and that they are succeeding to a remarkable degree in effecting permanent cures.

Read the following letters and you will be convinced of the good work these doctors are doing:

July 17, 1911

Dear Doctors:

"It has been a month since I began taking your first medicine and I can see that it is helping me very much. I am feeling much better and have only had trouble once since I began your treatment. I have lots of faith in you and your medicine and feel quite encouraged. I am living up to your instructions as near as I possibly can and am doing all I can to help you and help get well."

A lady in Lake Park, Ia., writes:

"I took a three months' treatment from you in the hopes of healing my lungs from an abscess, also of anemia. I have been very prompt in taking the treatment and am feeling a great deal better and much stronger. I think I will soon be entirely well but will carefully follow all your directions to make sure."

Another lady in Flugstad, Ia, says: "I received the medicine you sent a few weeks ago and can say I have begun to improve already. I have no doubt but what it will cure me as the change I now feel is quite remarkable I received the directions you sent me and I certainly feel very grateful to you. Indeed I cannot say otherwise but what I feel like a new person."

Other well-pleased patients write:

"I am satisfied with the medicine I received three weeks ago as it has done me very much good."

"Your medicine seems to be helping me as I sleep a great deal better at night and haven't had any bad headaches like I used to have."

"I have never felt so well in five years as I have in the few weeks I have been taking your medicine. I wish to continue your treatment as soon as possible."

"I haven't had that pain since I started doctoring with you. I feel just fine, don't vomit that froth, and is the first relief I got in nineteen months."

The weak anemic, run down, nervous and disheartened should not fail to see these doctors and take advantage of this opportunity to get well.

The cases that have been successfully treated by them after the skill of the family physician has been exhausted, shows their diagnoses and treatments to be far superior and more certain in their effects.

Diseases of the Stomach and Liver, Gall-stones, Piles, Goitre, Catarrh, Rheumatism, early Consumption, Bed-wetting, Leg ulcers, Cancer and other malignant growths. Kidneys and Bladder troubles, Sciatica, and diseases peculiar to sex are all treated by their up-to-date, scientific methods, with remarkable success.

Deafness often cured in sixty days.

No matter what your ailment may be, no matter what other physicians may have told you, it will be to your advantage to see the Northwestern United Doctors this time and have it forever settled in your mind.

If you have kidney or bladder trouble bring a two-ounce bottle of your urine for chemical analysis and microscopic examination.

Married ladies must come with their husbands and minors with their parents.

WESTERN CANADA FARMER SECURES WORLD'S PRIZE FOR WHEAT

A ROSTHERN, SASK., FARMER THE LUCKY WINNER.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy of the Canadian Pacific Railway offered $1,000 in gold as a prize for the best 100 lbs. of wheat, grown on the American continent, to be competed for at the recent Land Show in New York. In making the competition open, the donor of this handsome prize showed his belief in the superiority of Canadian wheat lands, by throwing the contest open to farmers of all America, both United States and Canada. The United States railways were by no means anxious to have the Canadian railways represented at the show and a New York paper commenting on the results of the competitions says that they were not to be blamed, as the Canadians captured the most important prize of the show.

The winner of this big wheat prize was Mr. Seager Wheeler of Rosthern, Saskatchewan, and its winning has brought a great deal of credit on the district. The winning wheat was the Marquis variety, and received no more attention from Mr. Wheeler than his other grain, but he is a very particular farmer. His farm is one of the cleanest and best kept in the Rosthern district, and this year he won first prize in a good farm competition which included every feature of farming and every part of the farm. Last winter Wheeler was a prize winner at the provincial seed fair in Regina.

Wheeler is a firm believer in sowing clean seed of the best quality procurable, consequently his grain is much sought after by the best farmers for seed purposes.

Wheeler is an Englishman. He is a pioneer of Rosthern, coming here fifteen years ago. In the last six years he has done much experimenting, particularly in wheat varieties. His farm resembles an experimental farm. A long driveway, lined on both sides with trees, leads to a modest house, the home of Wheeler, a modest, unassuming man with the appearance of a student rather than a man engaged in commercial pursuits.

There are now no free homesteads to be had in this district, and farm lands are worth from $20 to $40 per acre, which a few years ago were secured by their present owners, either as a free gift or purchased at from $5 to $8 per acre.

It is not many miles from Rosthern, where the farmer lives, who secured the first prize for wheat last year at the National Corn Exposition at Columbus and West of Rosthern, about 150 miles, lives Messrs. Hill and Son, who won the Colorado Silver Trophy, valued at $1,500, for the best peck of oats, also awarded at the National Corn Show at Columbus in 1910.

Not contented with the high honors obtained in its wheat, Canada again stepped forward into the show ring, and carried off the Stillwell trophy and $1,000 for the best potatoes on the continent. This time the winner was a British Columbia man, Mr. Asahel Smith, the "Potato King," of that province. The exhibit consisted of one hundred and one varieties drawn from all parts of the province aggregating in weight one and a half tons.

At the recent Dry Farming Congress, held at Colorado Springs, and at which time it was decided to hold the next Congress at Lethbridge, in 1912, the Province of Alberta made a wonderful showing of grains, grasses and vegetables.

"At the Congress, Alberta got more prizes and trophies, ten to one, than any state of the Union," said Mr. Hotchkiss to the Edmonton Bulletin. "We brought back all but the building with us, and they offered us that, saying we might as well take all that was going. We would have brought it along, too, if we had had a flat car to put it on. Alberta captured nearly 50 first prizes, 20 seconds, 3 thirds, 9 cups, 40 medals, 50 ribbons and 2 sweepstakes. The grand sweepstake prize, for the best exhibit by state or province, a magnificent silver cup, was presented to us with much ceremony at a reception to the Canadians in the Empress hotel. The presentation was made by Prof. Olin, chairman of the judging committee, and the cup was received on behalf of the province by the Hon. Duncan Marshall.

NATION AT PEACE

PRESIDENT INFORMS CONGRESS ABOUT RELATIONS WITH OTHER COUNTRIES.

NEW ARBITRATION TREATIES

United States Helps In Amicable Settlement of Disputes—Events Connected With the Mexican Revolution—Need for Merchant Marine.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Foreign affairs are the sole subject of President Taft's special message, which was submitted to Congress today. In part the document says:

The relations of the United States with other countries have continued during the past twelve months upon a basis of the usual good will and friendly intercourse.

Arbitration.

The year just passed marks an important general movement on the part of the powers for broader arbitration. In the recognition of the manifold benefits to mankind in the extension of the policy of the settlement of international disputes by arbitration rather than by war, and in response to a widespread demand for an advance in that direction on the part of the people of the United States and of Great Britain and of France, new arbitration treaties were negotiated last spring with Great Britain and France, the terms of which were designed, as expressed in the preamble of these treaties, to extend the scope and obligations of the policy of arbitration adopted in our present treaties with those governments. To pave the way for this treaty with the United States, Great Britain negotiated an important modification in its alliance with Japan and the French government also expedited the negotiations with signal good will. The new treaties have been submitted to the senate and are awaiting its advice and consent to their ratification. All the essentials of these important treaties have long been known, and it is my earnest hope that they will receive prompt and favorable action.

Arbitrations.

In further illustration of the practical and beneficent application of the principle of arbitration and the underlying broad spirit of conciliation, I am happy to advert to the part of the United States in facilitating amicable settlement of disputes which menaced the peace between Panama and Costa Rica and between Haiti and the Dominican republic.

Since the date of their independence, Colombia and Costa Rica had been seeking a solution of a boundary dispute, which came as a heritage from Colombia to the new republic of Panama, upon its beginning life as an independent nation. In January, 1910, at the request of both governments the agents representing them met in conference at the department of state and subsequently concluded a protocol submitting this long-pending controversy to the arbitral judgment of the chief justice of the United States, who consented to act in this capacity. A boundary commission, according to the international agreement, has now been appointed, and it is expected that the arguments will shortly proceed and that this long-standing dispute will be honorably and satisfactorily terminated.

Again, a few months ago it appeared that the Dominican republic and Haiti were about to enter upon hostilities because of complications growing out of an acrimonious boundary dispute which the efforts of many years had failed to solve. The government of the United States, by a friendly interposition of good offices, succeeded in prevailing upon the parties to place their reliance upon some form of pacific settlement.

Mexico.

The recent political events in Mexico received attention from this government because of the exceedingly delicate and difficult situation created along our southern border and the necessity for taking measures properly to safeguard American interests. The government of the United States, in its desire to secure a proper observance and enforcement of the so-called neutrality statutes of the federal government, issued directions to the appropriate officers to exercise a diligent and vigilant regard for the requirements of such rules and laws. Although a condition of actual armed conflict existed, there was no official recognition of belligerency involving the technical neutrality obligations of international law.

After a conference with the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy, I thought it wise to assemble an army division of full strength at San Antonio, Tex., a brigade of three regiments at Galveston, a brigade of infantry in the Los Angeles district of southern California, together with a squadron of battleships and cruisers and transports at Galveston, and a small squadron of ships at San Diego. At the same time, through our representative at the City of Mexico I expressed to President Diaz the hope that no apprehensions might result from unfounded conjectures as to these military maneuvers, and assured him that they had no significance which should cause concern to his government.

I am more than happy to here record the fact that all apprehensions as to the effect of the presence of so large a military force in Texas proved groundless; no disturbances occurred.

The insurrection continued and resulted in engagements between the regular Mexican troops and the insurgents, and this along the border, so that in several instances bullets from the contending forces struck American citizens engaged in their lawful occupations on American soil.

Proper protests were made against these invasions of American rights to the Mexican authorities.

The policy and action of this government were based upon an earnest friendliness for the Mexican people as a whole, and it is a matter of gratification to note that this attitude of strict impartiality as to all factions in Mexico and of sincere friendship for the neighboring nation, without regard for party allegiance, has been generally recognized and has resulted in an even closer and more sympathetic understanding between the two republics and a warmer regard one for the other. Action to suppress violence and restore tranquility throughout the Mexican republic was of peculiar interest to this government, in that it concerned the safeguarding of American life and property in that country. On May 25, 1911, President Diaz resigned, Senor de la Barra was chosen provisional president. Elections for president and vice-president were thereafter held throughout the republic, and Senor Francisco I. Madero was formally declared elected on October 15, to the chief magistracy. On November 6 President Madero entered upon the duties of his office.

Honduras and Nicaragua Treaties Proposed.

As to the situation in Central America. I have taken occasion in the past to emphasize most strongly the importance that should be attributed to the consummation of the conventions between the republics of Nicaragua and of Honduras and this country, and I again earnestly recommend that the necessary advice and consent of the senate be accorded to these treaties, which will make it possible for these Central American republics to enter upon an era of genuine economic national development.

Our relations with the Republic of Panama, peculiarly important, due to mutual obligations and the vast interests created by the canal, have continued in the usual friendly manner, and we have been glad to make appropriate expression of our attitude of sympathetic interest in the endeavors of our neighbor in undertaking the development of the rich resources of the country.

New Japanese Treaty.

The treaty of commerce and navigation between the United States and Japan, signed in 1894, would by a strict interpretation of its provisions have terminated on July 17, 1912. Japan's general treaties with the other powers, however, terminated in 1911, and the Japanese government expressed an earnest desire to conduct the negotiations for a new treaty with the United States simultaneously with its negotiations with the other powers. There were a number of important questions involved in the treaty, including the immigration of laborers, revision of the customs tariff and the right of Americans to hold real estate in Japan. The United States consented to waive all technicalities and to enter at once upon negotiations for a new treaty on the understanding that there should be a continuance throughout the life of the treaty of the same effective measures for the restriction of immigration of laborers to American territory which had been in operation with entire satisfaction to both governments since 1908. The Japanese government accepted this basis of negotiation, and a new treaty was quickly concluded, resulting in a highly satisfactory settlement of the other questions referred to.

Europe and the Near East.

In Europe and the near east, during the past twelve-month, there has been at times considerable political unrest. The Moroccan question, which for some months was the cause of great anxiety, happily appears to have reached a stage at which it need no longer be regarded with concern. The Ottoman empire was occupied for a period by strife in Albania and is now at war with Italy. In Greece and the Balkan countries the disquieting potentialities of this situation have been more or less felt. Persia has been the scene of a long internal struggle. These conditions have been the cause of uneasiness in European diplomacy, but thus far without direct political concern to the United States.

In the war which unhappily exists between Italy and Turkey this government has no direct political interest, and I took occasion at the suitable time to issue a proclamation of neutrality in that conflict. At the same time all necessary steps have been taken to safeguard the personal interests of American citizens and organizations in so far as affected by the war.

Fur-Seal Treaty.

The fur-seal controversy, which for nearly twenty-five years has been the source of serious friction between the United States and the powers bordering upon the north Pacific ocean, whose subjects have been permitted to engage in pelagic sealing against the fur-seal herds having their breeding grounds within the jurisdiction of the United States, has at last been satisfactorily adjusted by the conclusion of the North Pacific sealing convention entered into between the United States, Great Britain, Japan and Russia on the seventh of July last.

The attention of congress is especially called to the necessity for legislation on the part of the United States for the purpose of fulfilling the obligations assumed under this convention, to which the senate gave its advice and consent on the twenty-fourth day of July last.

Foreign Trade Relations of the United States.

In my last annual message I referred to the tariff negotiations of the department of state with foreign countries in connection with the application, by a series of proclamations, of the minimum tariff of the United States to importations from the several countries, and I stated that, in its general operation, section 2 of the new tariff law had proved a guaranty of continued commercial peace, although there were, unfortunately, instances where foreign governments dealt arbitrarily with American interests within their jurisdiction in a manner injurious and inequitable. During the past year some instances of discriminatory treatment have been removed, but I regret to say that there remain a few cases of differential treatment adverse to the commerce of the United States. While none of these instances now appears to amount to undue discrimination in the sense of section 2 of the tariff law of August 5, 1909, they are all exceptions to that complete degree of equality of tariff treatment that the department of state has consistently sought to obtain for American commerce abroad.

While the double tariff feature of the tariff law of 1909 has been amply justified by the results achieved in removing former and preventing new, undue discriminations against American commerce, it is believed that the time has come for the amendment of this feature of the law in such way as to provide a graduated means of meeting varying degrees of discriminatory treatment of American commerce in foreign countries as well as to protect the financial interests abroad of American citizens against arbitrary and injurious treatment on the part of foreign governments through either legislative or administrative measures.

It would seem desirable that the maximum tariff of the United States should embrace within its purview the free list, which is not the case at the present time, in order that it might have reasonable significance to the governments of those countries from which the importations into the United States are confined virtually to articles on the free list.

The fiscal year ended June 30, 1911, shows great progress in the development of American trade. It was noteworthy as marking the highest record of exports of American products to foreign countries, the valuation being in excess of $2,000,000,000. These exports showed a gain over the preceding year of more than $300,000,000.

Crying Need for American Merchant Marine.

I need hardly reiterate the conviction that there should speedily be built up an American merchant marine. This is necessary to assure favorable transportation facilities to our great ocean-borne commerce as well as to supplement the navy with an adequate reserve of ships and men. It would have the economic advantage of keeping at home part of the vast sums now paid foreign shipping for carrying American goods. All the great commercial nations pay heavy subsidies to their merchant marine, so that it is obvious that without some wise aid from the congress the United States must lag behind in the matter of merchant marine in its present anomalous position.

Improvement of the Foreign Service.

The entire foreign-service organization is being improved and developed with especial regard to the requirements of the commercial interests of the country. The rapid growth of our foreign trade makes it of the utmost importance that governmental agencies through which that trade is to be aided and protected should possess a high degree of efficiency. Not only should the foreign representatives be maintained upon a generous scale in so far as salaries and establishments are concerned, but the selection and advancement of officers should be definitely and permanently regulated by law, so that the service shall not fail to attract men of high character and ability. The experience of the past few years with a partial application of civil service rules to the dipulomatic and consular service leaves no doubt in my mind of the wisdom of a wider and more permanent extension of those principles to both branches of the foreign service.

GOT THE LETTERS MIXED

Clergyman's Mistake Resulted In Giving Decided Surprise to Dignified Archbishop.

One of the most amusing stories which the Hon. Lionel A. Tollemache tells in "Nuts and Chestnuts," is that entitled, "The Wrong Envelope." Mr. M——, a missionary, shortly before leaving England, received two letters—one from Archbishop Tait asking him to dine, and the other from the secretary of a religious society, a very old friend, asking him to preach. He accepted the archbishop's invitation, and at the same time wrote to the secretary, but put the letters into the wrong envelopes.

After the dinner at Lambeth the archbishop said to him: "Mr. M——, do you always answer your dinner invitations in the same way?"

"I do not understand, your Grace."

The letter, which was then shown to the missionary, ran thus: "You old rascal! Why did you not ask me before? You know perfectly well that I shall be on the high seas on the date you name."—London Tit-Bits.

Question for Question.

"I shall discharge our butler," said Mr. Cumrox.

"What's the trouble?"

"He doesn't show me proper deference. When I am paying a man liberally, I consider it his duty to laugh at my jokes."

"And won't he?"

"I don't think he can. He's an English butler. When in a spirit of gentle and condescending badinage I said to him, 'Hawkins, can you tell me which came first, the chicken or the egg?' he said, 'Which did you order first, sir?'"

IT IS CRIMINAL TO NEGLECT THE SKIN AND HAIR

Think of the suffering entailed by neglected skin troubles—mental because of disfiguration, physical because of pain. Think of the pleasure of a clear skin, soft, white hands, and good hair. These blessings, so essential to happiness and even success in life, are often only a matter of a little thoughtful care in the selection of effective remedial agents. Cuticura Soap and Ointment do so much for poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, and cost so little, that it is almost criminal not to use them. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a postal to "Cuticura," Dept. 21 L, Boston, will secure a liberal sample of each, with 32-page booklet on skin and scalp treatment.

A Born Quibbler.

"Didn't I tell you not to shoot any quail on this place?"

"Yassuh," replied Uncle Rasberry. "You done tole me an' I done heard you. Dis ain' no quail. Dis is a partridge."

The Human Heart

The heart is a wonderful double pump, through the action of which the blood stream is kept sweeping round and round through the body at the rate of seven miles an hour. "Remember this, that our bodies will not stand the strain of over-work without good, pure blood any more than the engine can run smoothly without oil." After many years of study in the active practice of medicine, Dr. R. V. Pierce found that when the stomach was out of order, the blood impure and there were symptoms of general breakdown, a tonic made of the glyceric extract of certain roots was the best corrective. This he called

Christmas Superstitions and Customs

WHEN a great festival has been handed down to us from time immemorial, it is only natural that many superstitions and observances should cluster about its cele- It would be interesting to them to their original sources. llowing are well-known legends abound throughout different es.

y flowers, it is said, have put heir first blossoms on Christ's day. A pretty French legend that rose-colored sanfoin lay the grasses in the manger. ly it put forth its blossoms rmed itself into a wreath to the sweet Babe's head.

the "Star of Bethlehem" was en the people exclaimed upon semblance to the star that the Magi; and so it received ty name. The hellebore, or as rose, also flowered at the the birth of Christ, and so it known as "Christ's herb." people believe in the miracu- roperties of the "Glastonbury thorn," which is honored at Christmas time. The Sicilian children gather pennyroyal to put in their beds, believing that it blossomed at the hour in which Christ was born.

There is a superstition in some rural districts of England and Wales that if orchards are properly honored they will bear largely and be profitable through the coming year. So, in accordance with this, the village people meet at early dawn, and headed by their parson and other representative men, go from farm to farm, visiting every orchard in turn. They are met by the owner and together select the finest tree as being the most representative, and gather about it, sprinkle it with the contents of a bottle of cider, humming an old chant and invoking its aid.

Many of the animals are thought to possess human qualities on that sacred night.

Bees are said to sing, oxen to kneel in their stalls and sheep to file by in procession, to commemorate the visit of the angel to the shepherds. It is also believed in Germany that horses and cattle are given the power of speech. But whoever should, by chance or purpose, stop to listen, would surely die within seven days. The Indians, too, believe that on Christmas night all the deer of the forest kneel "and look up to the Great Spirit."

A legend is related that the Christchild wanders in disguise over the earth on Christmas eve, carrying fagots of evergreens upon his shoulder. From palaces to hovels, in sun shine and rain, he goes his rounds, asking alms at each door, thus testing the benevolence of the people. Few would dare to refuse him charity.

The Czecks think that those who keep the fasts best on Christmas eve will be rewarded by visions of the Holy Child in his dreams that night.

In rural Germany the people believe that between the hours of 11 and 12, on Christmas eve, water may be turned into wine. Also, that no live coal should be carried out of the house on that night.

In Germany, too, it is "Kris Kringle," who, coming down the chimney, places the gifts in stockings for those children "who are good." This tradition of the chimney is supposed to have come from the Norse mythology, when a festival was given in honor of one of their favorite goddesses. Huge piles of green fir twigs were burnt, in stone fire-places erected for this purpose, and from out the dense smoke the goddess appeared, granting the prayers of her worshippers.

The yule log occupies a conspicuous place in the huge, open fireplace, and is lighted with ceremony, thus sanctifying the hearth and protecting it from the evil spirits, from which the festival is free. Those upon whom fortune has smiled invite their humbler friends to partake of a huge meat pie, which is circled round with candles. The host lights these when all are seated, and should one go out, it is considered bad luck, especially for the one seated opposite. This was called the yule-tide feast and from this custom of lighting candles, the modern idea was developed of the Christmas tree candles.

In the Scottish Highlands these quaint superstitions flourish greatly. In the early morning a servant is sent out to draw water from a spring, to gather corn from the storehouse and herbs from the garden. This strict observance is supposed to bring good luck to all those who live in that particular house for the ensuing year. Here, they also consider it a lucky sign to be the first to open the door on Christmas morning, so some sit up all night to accomplish this feat.

Christmas Reunion Frolics

By Mary Dawson

A MERRY Christmas; By no means a small portion of it is the good old-fashioned Yule frolic with games and sports, in which all join together until the green garlanded ceilings ring with laughter and fun.

int some lively person as masrevels, or better still, using the time phrase, lord of misrule. this person with a gilt wand h a bunch of holly is tied with of scarlet ribbon or tissue pa- soon as the Lord of Misrule n so invested all his followers ged to exactly copy all that he d does. If he speaks, his must be repeated verbatim; akes a gesture the rest of the y must make the same one, he same hand or foot.

A clever leader will give his followers a merry dance around the room, climbing over sofas, crawling under tables, pirouetting, gesticulating, whatever he does, the others are obliged to keep up with until everyone is out of breath with exertion and laughter.

Very little people for whom the character game would be too difficult might enjoy a rhymed pastime called Ivy and Holly. Suggest the plan of it to them and they will amuse themselves with the adventures of the two heroines until the program changes.

Chairs are arranged in two rows and the children sit facing each other. One youngster begins with some adventure as "Holly and Ivy went out to a party." The child sitting opposite must complete the rhyme with another couplet, for instance, "Holly and Ivy came back hale and hearty."

Then there is the fun-provoking contest called Dramatic Adjectives. Here the company is divided up into two bands, one of which retires while the other remains in the parlor and decides upon some adjective to be acted out in gesture language, for instance, Gay or Doleful or Vivacious. When the word has been decided upon the absent members must be summoned and they are called upon to guess from the pantomime of the others what the adjective decided upon may be. If they can guess it in three minutes a point is won by their side, and the others withdraw. After three minutes the pantomime can be kept up if the opposition is determined to discover the right word, but a success point no longer represents a point won. As soon as a word is guessed players turn about and those who have guessed become actors.

By all means try to keep from the supply of Christmas novelties one little figure of Santa Claus (it may be a candy box or simply a figure, but the former is better), in order to have the amusing game of silence form a part of the revels.

Someone is decided upon who will hide the Santa and the rest are asked to adjourn for a moment to the hall. The player instead of hiding the figure completely simply places it in some rather out-of-the-way position where it will be visible but will not immediately catch the eye of the player. For instance, it may be placed upon something approximately the same color or on one end of a tall shelf or bookcase. Players coming in scan the room for the figure and the first one to perceive it, without mentioning the fact to the others, quietly takes a seat. This is a general signal for the players to be seated, but in the excitement of the search many will fail to observe that one person is no longer standing. The last person to sit down is to pay a forfeit.

WISE WORDS

Many business advantages are gained through a bank account. The merchant who is in want of money in order to take advantage of low prices finds his bank a help. The farmer who needs money but wishes to hold his crops for better prices is taken care of. The laboring man strengthens his position in the community. They all have the confidence of the banker which is very often a great assistance.

Think it over.

Condensed Into a Few Lines for the Perusal of the Busy Man—Latest Personal Information.

Washington

Rapid development of public interest in the broader phases of agricultural education is noted by Dr. A. C. True, director of the office of experiment stations of the department of agriculture, in his annual report, just made to Secretary Wilson.

* * *

The pure food board of the department of agriculture at Washington decided that the importation of absinthe into the United States should be prohibited after January 1 next. The board declares that the drug is dangerous to the health of those addicted to its use.

* * *

President Taft sent to congress a brief formal message transmitting the full text of the report of the investigating board which found that the battleship Maine was blown up in Havana harbor by an external explosion. The board was headed by Admiral Vreeland of the navy, and included Col. William Black of the corps of engineers of the army.

* * *

As the result of an understanding reached it is believed that the United States senate will pass before the Christmas holidays the house resolution terminating the 1832 treaty with Russia because of discrimination against American-Jewish citizens.

* * *

Attorney General Wickersham in his annual report said the recent Supreme Court decision had demonstrated the effectiveness of the Sherman anti-trust law, and told of the activities of the department of justice during the year.

* * *

The Sulzer resolution demanding the abrogation of the 1832 treaty with Russia passed the house of representatives practically without a dissenting vote. The vote in favor of the resolution was 305 to 1. Representative Malby of New York, a Republican, was the only man to vote against the resolution.

* * *

The Republican national committee, in session at Washington, ratified the program which had been arranged in advance for its deliberations. The national convention to nominate candidates for president and vice-president will be held in Chicago, beginning Tuesday, June 18. Former Gov. John F. Hill of Maine was elected chairman, vice Frank H. Hitchcock, resigned.

* * *

The Sherwood "dollar-a-day" pension bill, which, it is estimated, adds from $35,000,000 to $45,000,000 to the pension roll, passed the national house of representatives. The vote was along non-partisan lines, the great majority of Democrats and Republicans favoring it.

* * *

Senator Burton of Ohio laid before the senate a memorial appealing to congress to place an embargo upon the use of the expression "So help me God," in oaths taken in court and elsewhere under the jurisdiction of the government.

* * *

Domestic

More than $1,000,000 worth of cattle were sold by stockmen who attended the convention of the American National Live Stock association in Denver.

* * *

Samuel B. McHenry of Chicago, who has annoyed Miss Katherine Elkins for two years with love letters, was sent to the hospital for the insane at Washington.

* * *

In a special election citizens of Wichita, Kan., voted to expend $60,000 to build separate schools for white and colored children.

An entire family—Mrs. Mary A. Morners, a widow; her daughter, Edith, aged twenty, and Blanche, aged seventeen, and a son, Arthur, aged twenty-eight years—were murdered on the Morners farm near De Freestville, Rensselaer county, about five miles from Albany, N. Y.

Following the arrest of Rev. C. N. Brewer, Mrs. Anna Jordan and five soldiers, it developed that for nine months federal army officers at Fort Riley, Kan., have been fighting an alleged plot to destroy the big army reservation. Not only were there frequent incendiary fires and dynamite explosions, but the commanding officers received frequent letters threatening them with death and the fort with destruction.

* * *

Charles Wilson and his wife, known as Zoe Willard, were found guilty at Chicago of violation of the Mann act by a jury in the Federal court. The penalty is a fine of $5,000, imprisonment for ten years, or both.

* * *

Lilian Graham and Ethel Conrad were acquitted of the charge of attempting to kill W. E. Stokes, the millionaire hotel owner, the jury deliberating exactly 58 minutes. When the verdict was announced the girls became hysterical.

* * *

Tying himself to a coat hanger and then hanging the hanger to a hook on the door of his room and kicking over the chair on which he stood caused the death of E. A. Himoe, aged seventy-three, of Minneapolis, Minn. Ill health is supposed to have been the cause.

* * *

John Kelly of Bridgeville, Pa., committed suicide by jumping to the street from a window in a hospital where he had been sent following a previous attempt at self-destruction.

* * *

American army scouts killed forty-five Moro outlaws in a battle near Lanao, Mindanao, P. I. The Americans suffered no loss.

* * *

The second hearing of Dr. B. Clarke Hyde at Kansas City on a charge of murdering Col. Thomas H. Swope ended in a mistrial. Harry W. Waldron, the juror who escaped from the custody of the deputy marshal returned home, was found insane by Judge Porterfield and the jury was discharged.

* * *

"The laboring man is the hope of the country in the fight against the rum traffic," declared John B. Lennon of Illinois, treasurer of the American Federation of Labor to the delegates at the annual convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America at Washington, D. C.

* * *

A monument erected to the memory of the unknown dead of the Civil war was unveiled at Newton, Kan. It was given by the Women's Relief corps and cost $500.

* * *

Poising nude on a beam across the Masonic Temple "well" in Chicago, James F. Greek leaped nineteen stories to his death. His body was crushed into an almost shapeless mass at the impact with the floor of the rotunda.

* * *

Foreign

Louis Forrer, vice-president of the Swiss federal council, was elected president of the Swiss confederation.

* * *

The English government has decided to exclude all the American meat packers against whom prosecutions have been begun in the United States from tendering for contracts for the supply of meat to the British army and navy, pending the settlement of the suits.

* * *

In the presence of a brilliant assemblage of native rulers and high British officials, the king-emperor and the queen-empress laid the cornerstone of the new building at Delhi, India, to which, when completed, the seat of government will be transferred from Calcutta.

* * *

The British house of lords adopted the national insurance bill, providing for compulsory insurance against sickness and unemployment of the working classes, probably the biggest thing in the world in a legislative way now pending. As the house of commons has passed the bill the signature of the king is only lacking for it to become a law.

* * *

Ex-President Morales of Santo Domingo has landed on that island with a few followers, but the present government is determined to prevent his getting a foothold and has sent soldiers to check his progress.

* * *

Princess Louise Victoria, sister of King George V. of England; her husband, the duke of Fife, and their daughters, together with several Americans, had a thrilling experience when the steamship Delhi, on which they were voyaging to Egypt, struck the reefs off Cape Spartel, the northwest extremity of Africa.

* * *

Lina Cavalieri, the opera singer, has returned to Robert Winthrop Chanler, her husband, all the property made over to her prior to their marriage in the spring of 1910 and received in return a lump sum, said to be $70,000, for annulling their antenuptial contract.

Land In Iowa Will Be More Valuable Each Year, Says Curtis

IS BEST SIGN OF PROSPERITY

The Fact That This State's Farm Land Has Reached the Present Prices Is Evidence It Is the Best Investment.

Des Moines.—"If Iowa people will invest all of their money in Iowa for the next ten years, the farm lands of the state will be worth from $300 to $400 an acre and the population of the state will double."

The foregoing statement was made by Prof. C. F. Curtiss of the Iowa State college at Ames, in an address before the agricultural convention, held in the house chamber at the state house.

Professor Curtiss spoke enthusiastically of the outlook for Iowa under the "intensified farming" idea. He quoted statistics to show the rapid advance made by the farmers of the state in the last ten years and added that the limit of productiveness of the soil has not been reached.

In commenting upon the rapid advance in the price of Iowa farm lands, Prof. Curtiss said the advance was inevitable, and a good talking point for residents of Iowa. Prof. Curtiss warned the farmers to stay away from state whose land values are not increasing. He said the increase in value of land is the best sign of prosperity and a good place to make an investment.

The speaker took to task the great number of people who have left Iowa for cheap lands in other communities, and added that most of them wish now they had remained in Iowa, or could get back for what it cost them to get out.

Ames Won Limit in Stock Awards.

"Seven scholarships came to Ames as a result of its winnings at the International Live Stock show recently held in Chicago," said Prof. W. J. Kennedy of the State Agricultural college. "Each scholarship is worth $250. Seven is the most that any one college could capture. We are mighty proud of our showing at the big live stock show. J. Ogden Armour gives $25,000 each year for scholarships. We won six grand championship ribbons, one reserve championship ribbon, seventeen championship ribbons, two reserve champion ribbons, thirty first prizes, eighteen second prizes, sixteen third prizes and one fifth prize. This gives us ninety-one prizes worth $2,708."

The short course season started last week. There were short course schools at Adel and Washington. This week they are in session at Shenandoah and Ft. Madison. The work will continue through the winter until the middle of March. After that intensive farming will be taught by special trains, and the first one is likely to be a soils special through northern Iowa."

Law-making Lawyers.

"What this country needs is more business men and less lawyers in our public offices and particularly in congress and in the state legislatures," said a prominent visitor. "We have had so many lawyers in congress and in our state legislatures that the courts can no longer be sure how to interpret the laws which these lawyers make. I wish that we could get rid of about ninety per cent. of the lawyer-legislators and put some good solid business men in their places. We would have more sensible laws and certainly we would have laws affecting the business life of the states and the nation which would be a blessing instead of creating fear and disturbance until the higher courts had had an opportunity to pass on them. Let us have more business men and fewer lawyers and professional politicians in our legislative halls and we will have more business and less politics in the nation."

Rule In Favor of Banks.

Government bonds held by state and savings banks must be deducted from the value of the property sought to be assessed. This is the ruling of the supreme court in the case of the Des Moines National bank against the city of Des Moines. Citing the Home Savings bank case the court says: "From whatever point the subject be viewed, the government bonds held by state and savings banks must be deducted from the value of the property to be assessed. The power to tax share of stock in national banks can only be done provided that such taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other monied capital in the hands of individual citizens of such states."

EVERYBODY ASKED TO ATTEND

State Tax Commission Wants Officials, Editors, Professors, and Others To Assist Them.

Des Moines.—The state tax commission adopted a resolution directing the chairman of the commission to invite county officials, editors, professors, workingmen, labor leaders and corporation heads to appear before the commission early in January to discuss the taxation question and the nature of the system which should be recommended to the Thirty-fifth general assembly. This conference is to be followed by a state-wide tax conference to be held in Des Moines in February or March. The commission desires to hear from the people direct as to the kind of taxation system they want adopted in this state. Each county will be asked to send a delegation to the conference.

Urges More Good Roads.

In his address before the fourth annual meeting of the Iowa Association of County and District Fair Managers, Gov. B. F. Carroll urged the building of good roads and the co-operation with and support of the movement in order to further interest in these fairs.

The governor suggested the offering of a premium for the best roads in township or county as a further help to this good roads scheme. He contended that it would bring the fairs in closer touch and create a common bond of interest.

E. M. Wentworth of State Center spoke in favor of the closer alliance of the county fairs and farmers' institutes. Prof. W. J. Kennedy of Ames spoke on the value of the colt shows at county and district fairs. He used as examples of success in this line the shows at Madrid, Ankeny and other fairs where the shows are made a part of the fairs. He suggested a stallion show for the spring fairs and colt show for the fall.

Should Conserve Wild Flowers.

"Iowa land is getting high in price and the high price requires dividends which forces every available acre to be put to the production of some cash-producing crop with the result that the wild flowers are being exterminated," said F. C. Pellett, of Atlantic. "Native plants are desirable as ornamentals and with a little care in establishing them one can have a continuous bloom of the native wild flowers from April until killing frosts in October. Beginning with the bloodroot when the frost is out in the spring through a long list including addertongues, Dutchman's breeches, violets, waterleaf, wild phlox, campion and ending with the asters and snake root, which are killed by the frosts at the other end of the season, we have a continuous display of native Iowa flowers worthy of preservation. Once established in proper situation the wild garden remains permanently with a minimum of attention."

Personal Injury Decision.

People who are waiting for a train have a right to walk about on the adjacent platforms and the railroad company must furnish protection from injury, according to a ruling of the supreme court. The case was that of Mary Drummy against the M. & St. L. railroad company. On the proposition stated the court says:

"It is not unusual for passengers awaiting the arrival of a train to walk about on the platform adjacent to the station and we think that it is the duty of a railroad company to anticipate that they will do so and to take reasonable precautions that in doing so while exercising reasonable care they shall not be injured.

Coal Operators' Association.

E. C. Smith of Des Moines was re-elected president of the Iowa Coal Operators' association at the annual convention here this week. P. H. Waterman of Hiteman was named vice-president to succeed David Dinning of Cedar Rapids. J. B. Ryan of Colfax was chosen as secretary-treasurer to succeed E. M. Gray of Des Moines. Members of the board of directors were chosen as follows: First district, Daniel Cushing of Rathbun, to succeed L. L. Ludwig; Second district, F. W. White of Oskaloosa, to succeed H. L. Waterman; Third district, H. M. Shuler of Des Moines, re-elected; Fourth district, H. H. Canfield of Boone, re-elected.

Bank Deposits Subject to Tax.

The supreme court for the first time in Iowa, has ruled that bank deposits, held in an Iowa bank by non-residents and belonging to such non-resident at the time of his death, are subject to the state collateral inheritance tax. The case was an appeal taken by Melissia Gould, as administratrix of the estate of S. Culver, against State Treasurer Morrow. The practice has been in vogue in Iowa, but it has never been officially countenanced by the supreme court until now.

SYNOPSIS.

n Blair, the 22-year-old son of the million-dollar copper king of Blair-n, Mont., is a guest at the English e of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had courteous to Lord Galorey during visit to the United States and the rtesy is now being returned to the ng man. The youth has an ideal girl his mind. He meets Lily, Duchess of kwater, a beautiful widow, who is acted by his immense fortune and es a liking to her. When Dan was a a girl sang a solo at a church, and had never forgotten her. The Ga-ys, Lily and Dan attend a London ater where one Letty Lane is the star: recognizes her as the girl from his n, and going behind the scenes intro-es himself and she remembers him. learns that Prince Poniotowsky is or and escort to Letty.

CHAPTER VI.—Continued.

Galorey nodded. "That is just why oddled in to see you!"

Ruggles' caller had been shown to sitting room, where he and Dan nobbed and smoked during the sterner's visit. There was a pile papers on the table, in one corner rpewriter covered by a black cloth. lorey took a chair and, refusing a rette, lit his pipe.

"I didn't have the pleasure of meet-you in the West when I was out re with Blair. I knew Dan's fa-r rather well."

Ruggles responded: "I knew him ther well, too, for thirty years. If," went on, "Blair hadn't known you tty well he wouldn't have sent the out to you as he has done. He s keen on every trail. I might that he had been over every one 'em like a hound before he set the loose."

Galorey answered, "Quite so," grave-"I know it. I knew it when Dan ned up at Osdene—" Holding his e bowl in the palm of his slender nd, he smoked meditatively. He dn't thought about things, as he d been doing lately, for many years. s sense of honor was the strongest ng in Gordon Galorey, the only ng in him, perhaps, that had been t unsmirched by the touch of the rld. He was unquestionably a gen-man.

"Blair, however," he said, "wasn't keen on this scent as you'd expect. s intuition was wrong."

Ruggles raised his eyebrows slight-

"I mean to say," Lord Galorey went , "that he knew me in the West en I had cut loose for a few blessed nths from just these things into ich he has sent his boy—from at, if I had a son, God knows I'd ow him as far as I could."

"Blair wanted Dan to see the rld."

"Of course, that is right enough. e all have to see it, I fancy, but this y isn't ready to look at it."

"He is twenty-two," Ruggles re-ned. "When I was his age I was pporting four people."

Galorey went on: "Osdene Park at esent isn't the window for Blair's y to see life through, and that is at I have come up to London to k to you about, Mr. Ruggles. I ould like to have you take him way."

"What's Dan been up to down ere?"

"Nothing as yet, but he is in the cket of a woman—he is in a nest women."

Ruggles' broad face had not altered expression of quiet expectation.

"There's a lot of 'em down there?" he asked.

"There are two," Galorey said briefly, "and one of them is my wife."

Ruggles turned his cigarette between his great fingers. He was a slow thinker. He had none of old Blair's keenness, but he had other qualities. Galorey saw that he had not been quite understood, and he waited and then said:

"Lady Galorey is like the rest of modern wives, and I am like a lot of modern husbands. We each go our own way. My way is a worthless one. God knows I don't stand up for it, but it is not my wife's way in any sense of the word."

"Does she want Dan to go along on her road?" Ruggles asked. "And how far?"

"We are financially strapped just now," said Galorey calmly, "and she has got money from the boy." He

"That Is Just Why I Toddled in to See You."

didn't remove his pipe from his mouth; still holding it between his teeth he put his hand in his pocket, took out his wallet, drew forth four checks and laid them down before Ruggles. "It is quite a sum," Galorey noted, "sufficient to do a lot to Osdene Park in the way of needed repairs." Ruggles had never seen a smile such as curved his companion's lips. "But Osdene Park will have to be repaired by money from some other source."

Ruggles wondered how the husband had got hold of the checks, but he didn't ask and he did not look at the papers.

"When Dan came to the Park," said Galorey, "I stopped bridge playing, but this more than takes its place!"

Ruggles' big hand went slowly toward the checks; he touched them with his fingers and said: "Is Dan in love with your wife?"

And Lord Galorey laughed and said: "Lord no, my dear man, not even that! It is pure good nature on his part—mere prodigality. Edith appealed to him, that's all."

Relief crossed Ruggles' face. He understood in a flash the worldly appeal to the rich young man and believed the story the husband told him.

"Have you spoken to the boy?"

"My dear chap, I have spoken to him about nothing. I preferred to come to you."

"You said," Ruggles continued, "there were two ladies down to your place."

Galorey had refilled his pipe and held it as before in the palm of his hand.

"I can look after the affairs of my wife, and this shan't happen again, I promise you—not at Osdene, but I'm afraid I can not do much in the other case. The Duchess of Breakwater has been at Osdene for nearly three weeks, and Dan is in love with her."

Ruggles put the four checks one on top of the other.

"Is the lady a widow?"

"Unfortunately, yes."

"So that's the nest Dan has got into at Osdene," the Westerner said. And Galorey answered: "That is the nest."

"And he has gone out there today—got a wire this morning.'

"The duchess has been in an awful funk," said Galorey, "because Dan's been stopping in London so long. She sent him a message, and as soon as Dan wired back that he was coming to the Park, I decided to come here and see you.'

Ruggles ruminated: "Has the duchess complications financially?"

"Ra-ther!" the other answered.

And Ruggles turned his broad, honest face full on Galorey: "Do you think she could be bought off!"

Galorey took his pipe out of his mouth.

"It depends on how far Dan has gone on with her. To be frank with you, Mr. Ruggles, it is a case of emotion on the part of the woman. She is really in love with Dan. Gad!" exclaimed the nobleman. "I have been on the point of turning the whole brood out of doors these last days. It was like imprisoning a mountain breeze in a charnel house—a woman with her scars and her experience and that boy—I don't know where you've kept him or how you kept him as he is, but he is as clear as water. I have talked to him and I know."

Nothing in Ruggles' expression had changed until now. His eyes glowed.

"Dan's all right," he said softly. "Don't you worry! He's all right. I guess his father knew what he was doing, and I'll bet the whole thing was just what he sent him over here for! Old Dan Blair wasn't worth a copper when the boy was born, and yet he had ideas about everything and he seemed to know more in that old gray head of his than a whole library of books. Dan's all right."

"My dear man," said the nobleman, "that is just where you Americans are wrong. You comfort yourself with your eternal 'Dan's all right,' and you won't see the truth. You won't breathe the word 'scandal' and yet you are thick enough in them, God knows. You won't admit them, but they are there. Now be honest and look at the truth, will you? You are a man of common sense. Dan Blair is not all right. He is in an infernally dangerous position. The Duchess of Breakwater will marry him. It is what she has wanted to do for years, but she has not found a man rich enough, and she will marry this boy offhand."

"Well," said the Westerner slowly, "if he loves her and if he marries her—"

"Marries her!" exclaimed the nobleman. "There you are again! Do you think marriage makes it any better? Why, if she went off to the Continent with him for six weeks and then set him free, that would be preferable to marrying her. My dear man," he said, leaning over the table where Ruggles sat, "if I had a boy I would rather have him marry Letty Lane of the Gaiety. Now you know what I mean."

Ruggles' face, which had hardened, relaxed.

"I have seen that lady," he exclaimed with satisfaction; "I have seen her several times."

Galorey sank back into his chair and neither man spoke for a few seconds. Turning it all over in his slow mind, Ruggles remembered Dan's absorption in the last few days. "So there are three women in the nest," he concluded thoughtfully, and Gordon Galorey repeated:

"No, not three. What do you mean?"

"Your wife"—Ruggles held up one finger and Galorey interrupted him to murmur:

"I'll take care of Edith."

"The Duchess of Breakwater you think won't talk of money?"

"No, don't count on it. She is aiming at ten million pounds."

Ruggles was holding up his second finger.

"Well, I guess Dan has gone out to take care of her today."

Dan and Ruggles had seen "Mandalay" from a box, from the pit and from the stalls. On the table lay a book of the opera. While talking with Galorey, Ruggles had unconsciously arranged the checks on top of the libretto of "Mandalay."

"I'll take care of Miss Lane," Ruggles said at length.

His lordship echoed, "Miss Lane?" and looked up in surprise. "What Miss Lane, for God's sake."

"Miss Letty Lane at the Gaiety," Ruggles answered.

"Why, she isn't in the question, my dear man."

"You put her there just now yourself."

"Bosh!" Galorey exclaimed impatiently, "I spoke of her as being the limit, the last thing on the line."

"No," corrected the other, "you put the Duchess of Breakwater as the limit."

Galorey smiled frankly. "You are right, my dear chap," he accepted, "and I stand by it."

Tired of "Trial" Marriage

Colored Man Fell Into the Trap and Had Had Nothing But Tribulation.

"T'anky, sah; t'anky!" gratefully said a ramshackle-looking colored citizen who had percolated into the office of a prominent attorney of Polkville, Arkansas. "And dis yuh am what yo' kin do for muh, cuhnel, if yo' please; I wants to git dis trial marriage dat I's into busted up so's I kin git out'n it ag'in."

"Trial marriage——?" echoed the legal luminary.

"Yessah! Dat's what it's done been—a trial—fum de beginnin' twell plumb yit! Trial, sah—trial and tribbylation!—all de time! And I knowed how 'twould be befo' I got into de trap. Didn't want to marry, nohow; allus was uh-skeered o' de marryin' notion, and now——"

"Well, then, why did you marry if you didn't want to?"

"Who?—me? Eh-kaze I hatter, sah! Hatter do it; dat's why! Dar wa'n't no way 'round it! 'twuz de law! When dat 'ar yaller lady fell into de creek at de picnic an' I plunged in an' drug her out at de risk o' muh life, right dar, sah, I got up a'gin de law—de marry-law! De young white men told me 'bout it, soon 's dey found out what I'd done; hadn't uh-told me I'd uh-gone 'bout muh bidness like a fool twell I landed in de penitenchy for muh ignunce. Dey done told me what I was 'bleeged to do—man saves a 'oman fum drownin' he's sho' gotter marry her. Fo'ced to do it, sah, an' I done did it. An' now, cuhnel, for goodness' sake won't yo' please tell muh how to git out'n de scrape? Kin I git a divo'ce, or suppin', or must I take de lady down to de creek whuh I drug her out, an' th'ow her in ag'in?"—Tom P. Morgan, in Puck.

Two Wealthy Cities.

Frankfort probably shares with Amsterdam eminence as being the wealthiest city in the world per capita. There is an immense investment fund in this city garnered through centuries. Frankfort has long been one of the great money markets of Europe and banking in Germany centered here until recent years, the great Frankfort private banking houses leading and being assisted in their operations by such houses as Mendelssohns and Bleichroeders in Berlin and the Oppenheims in Hanover.

A FEDERAL HEALTH BOARD.

It is gratifying to note that the bill for the creation of a federal health board will not be allowed to pass without a protest. Reports of organized risistance come from all parts of the country, and it may be that the opposition will soon be sufficiently solidified to defeat a project that promises infinite mischief for the community, and suffering and injustice for the individual.

The proposal is based upon those specious claims that are notoriously hard to controvert. If a federal health board were to confine its activities to the promulgation of salutary advice upon hygienic matters, to the abatement of quackery, and to the purity of drugs, it might be possible to say much in its favor, although it would still be difficult to say that such an organization is needed. But we know that it will attempt to do far more than this, seeing that its adherents have loudly proclaimed their intentions. Indeed, there is no secrecy about them. It is confidently expected that the board will consist of advocates of one school of medicine only and that the methods of that school will be not only recommended, but enforced upon the nation. Indeed a board that was in any way representative of the medical profession as a whole would be stultified by its own disagreements. Outside the domain of simple hygiene, for which we need no federal board at all, there is no single point of medical practice upon which allopaths, homeopaths, eclectics and osteopaths could be in unison. Any board that could be devised by the wit of man must be composed of representatives of one school only, and this means that all other schools are branded as of an inferior caste, even though nothing worse happened to them. And something worse would happen to them. If we are to establish a school of medicine, if we are to assert that the government of the United States favors one variety of practice more than others, why not establish also a sect of religion and bestow special authorities upon Baptists, Methodists and Episcopalians? An established school of religious conjecture seems somewhat less objectionable than an established sect of pseudo-scientific conjecture.

Those who suppose that a federal board of health would have no concern with individual rights are likely to find themselves undeceived. It is for the purpose of interfering with individual rights that the proposal has been made. We need no special knowledge of conditions to be aware that what may be called unorthodox methods of healing have made sad inroads into the orthodox. Homeopathy claims a vast number of adherents who are just as well educated and just as intelligent as those who adhere to the older school. Osteopathy, eclecticism, and half a dozen other methods of practice are certainly not losing ground. Beyond them is the vast and increasing army of those who may be classed under the general and vague name of mental healers. Those who are addicted to any of these forms of unorthodoxy need have no doubt as to the purposes of the federal health board. Those purposes are to make it difficult for them to follow their particular fads and fancies, to lead them, and if necessary to drive them, from medical unorthodoxy to medical orthodoxy.

Now the Argonaut holds no brief for any of the excesses and the superstitions connected with the care of the body in which this age is so rife. But it does feel concerned for the preservation of human liberty and for the rights of the individual to doctor himself in any way he pleases so long as he does not indubitably threaten the health of the community. He may take large doses or small ones, or no doses at all; he may be massaged, anointed with oil, or prayed over, just as the whim of the moment may dictate, and probably it makes no particle of difference which he does. But he has the right to choose, just as he chooses the color of his necktie or the character of his underclothing. It is not a matter in which any wise government will seek to interfere. This is precisely the liberty that the health board intends to take from him. Orthodox medicine, conscious of its losses, is trying to buttress itself by federal statute, to exalt allopathy to the status of a privileged caste, and to create an established school of medicine just as some other countries have allowed themselves to create an established school of religion. It is for the common sense of the community to rebuke that effort and to repel an unwarranted invasion upon elementary human rights.—San Francisco Argonaut.

"Court of Commerce" May Be Abolished

It begins to look as though the law will be repealed which authorized the establishment of the Court of Commerce, as a bill to that effect has been introduced in Congress.

Prior to the establishment of this Court the Interstate Commerce Commission had charge of regulating common carriers, such as railroads and other modes of transportation, and regulated the business with very satisfying results both to the shipper and to the railroads. It was beginning to appear however, to the railroads, as if the Interstate Commission was sticking most too close to exact justice, so they had friends enough in Congress to get a law through which established the "Court of Commerce." A few months ago the Interstate Commerce Commission issued orders preventing the railroads from raising passenger and freight rates. And some of these orders have been overruled by the Court of Commerce which has appellate power over the Interstate Commerce Commission. It appears to the public that this Court of Commerce is working together in the interest of the corporations and for that reason a large number of letters are pouring in on Congressmen from all parts of the country, urging the abolition of the Court of Commerce as it appears to be working solely in the interest of the corporations. In nearly every state in the Union when a citizen has suffered a loss of property through a negligent act of a corporation, he brings suit in Court and he usually gets satisfactory damages awarded, and then of course the corporations appeal to the higher court and in nine cases out of ten the higher court sets the verdict aside.

It is just such outrages as these that have resulted in the popular clamor for the power to remove or recall judges and it is very likely in the next few years that nearly every state will incorporate a provision to recall judges, when they show themselves the willing tools of corporations. What benefit is the right of trial by juries, if the higher courts invariably set their findings aside?

WAS JUST LIKE A WOMAN

One "Jiggled the Scales" and the Other Failed to Deduct Her "Wet Hair."

They met, duly sheeted, at the Turkish bath scales, and the thin woman drew back in horror.

"Let's make a compact," she suggested. "Don't you look at the scales when I'm weighed and I won't look while you're weighed. Because it's pretty certain that I've lost and you've gained."

"All right," said the stout woman, with resignation, "but it doesn't really matter, because we'll be sure to tell each other anyway while we're at luncheon. Eating together, if you notice, is almost as destructive to feminine secrecy as spending the night together—haven't you told things you'd vowed not to, hundreds and hundreds of times, just as soon as you and the other woman had your back hair down? And, even if we don't tell each other today the attendants will tell us next time. So let's not look at the scales, if you like, but let's promise to be honest if we say anything at all."

"All right," agreed the thin woman, blinding her eyes, child fashion while the other stepped to the platform. Then the stout woman conscientiously regarded the ceiling while the thin woman took her turn.

"One hundred and twelve pounds!" proudly proclaimed the thin woman at luncheon.

"One hundred and seventy!" countered the stout woman. The two exchanged keen and dubious glances.

"Honest?" they said in unison.

"Well," admitted the thin woman, blushing. "I—I did jiggle the scales a little, because I remembered that my sheet wasn't as big as yours and I felt that I ought to be allowed something on that account. How about yourself, since you're so mighty particular?"

The stout woman colored.

"Well, I—I forgot to have the attendant hold up my hair while I was weighed," she admitted, "and you know wet hair weighs awful heavy. So I—I took off a couple of pounds for that."

The Klemme school house came very near being destroyed by fire last Friday. Some of the school children noticed smoke issuing from the roof about half way between the belfry and the chimney, after school had been dismissed at noon. Prompt action by the school boys and some citizens saved the building. The boys deserve much credit and to them is due the fact that our school building stands today. They had the ladders up and were carrying water and in fact had the roof pretty well soaked before any other help arrived. It is supposed that the fire started from sparks from the chimney lighting on the dry shingles.

PIMPLES, BLACKHEADS, FACIAL ERUPTIONS

All Disappear When Gettysburg Man Uses Resinol.

How happy would men and women be did they know, as does R. G. Parry, of Gettysburg, Pa., how to remove blackheads and pimples and restore their skin to its natural healthy state! Many a beautiful woman is rendered homely by facial eruptions. This letter may be the means of showing a way to those thus afflicted. Read it thoroughly and give it thought.

"For some months my face was covered with pimples and blackheads. Hearing of Resinol Soap, I immediately began to use it, and was greatly benefited, especially so in its having caused the disappearance of all facial eruptions.

"R. G. PARRY,
"Gettysburg, Pa."

Resinol Soap quickly relieves and removes skin affections and Resinol Ointment is without a rival in relieving eczema, scalds, burns, tetter, milk crust, ringworm, barber's itch, pimples, rash, itching, blackheads, boils, chilblains, chaps and cracking of the skin, etc. Your druggist is familiar with the efficacy of Resinol Ointment, and will sell it to you in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes, or, if free trial is desired, write for sample to Department 86, Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

ECZEMA DISFIGURED BABY

"Our little boy Gilbert was troubled with eczema when but a few weeks old. His little face was covered with sores even to back of his ears. The poor little fellow suffered very much. The sores began as pimples, his little face was disfigured very much. We hardly knew what he looked like. The face looked like raw meat. We tied little bags of cloth over his hands to prevent him from scratching. He was very restless at night, his little face itched.

"We consulted two doctors at Chicago, where we resided at that time. After trying all the medicine of the two doctors without any result, we read of the Cuticura Remedies, and at once bought Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Following the directions carefully and promptly we saw the result, and after four weeks, the dear child's face was as fine and clean as any little baby's face. Every one who saw Gilbert after using the Cuticura Remedies was surprised. He has a head of hair which is a pride for any boy of his age, three years. We can only recommend the Cuticura Remedies to everybody." (Signed) Mrs. H. Albrecht, Box 883, West Point, Neb., Oct. 26, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 14 L, Boston.

Kindly Repartee.

Their Christmas Guest

THE red farmhouse was set in the midst of a white expanse of snow. The drooping elms protected the roof with widespread arms clothed in ermine and where the crisp wind had blown away the covering the limbs were darkly sketched against the bright blue sky. A thin spiral of smoke drifted up from the big chimney and shimmered away into nothingness.

Loring tramped wearily up the path and turned the corner by the clump of boxwood where a little side porch jutted out to the south. There was a window here filled with red geraniums and the brilliant color seemed to impart warmth to his benumbed body. The steps had been swept clear of snow and he was careful to scrape his boots before he knocked at the door.

The whirring of a sewing machine stopped suddenly and quick steps came across the floor. The door flew open and revealed two faces; that of Miss Anne, timidly expectant, and the fair face of the young girl, hopeful and eager.

"Oh!" they cried in unison and their voices betrayed bitter disappointment. "We thought it might be the expressman," added Anne in explanation.

"I'm sorry to disappoint you," said Loring courteously as he bared his head. "As a matter of fact, I came to beg a night's lodging. I have rather a bad knee and it's gone back on me in the midst of a long tramp. I wonder—"

"Come in," interrupted Anne hospitably. "It's bitter cold out to-day and the drifts are awful. We haven't as many fires as we used to keep, but you're welcome to sit and get thawed out."

Robert Loring entered the low-ceiled sitting-room where a small cylinder stove gave forth welcome heat in the center of the room. The corners seemed chill and dusky, but in the circle of warmth from the stove it was very comfortable. A sewing machine was drawn within the magic circle and there was a low rocking chair and beside it a huge work basket overflowing with bright bits of silk.

Anne pushed a big rocking chair close to the stove and motioned Loring into it. "Sit close to the fire and get thawed out. Grace will fetch you a glass of currant wine—or maybe you'd rather have a cup of coffee?" She beamed hospitably at him over steel-bowed spectacles that were the color of her silvery hair.

"I would say 'coffee' if it were not so much trouble," hesitated Loring. "It does seem an imposition for me to drop in on you in this manner, but as I was explaining—"

"It will be no trouble at all. Grace will be glad to make you a cup of coffee."

The fair-haired girl hastened to a tiny cupboard and brought out a small canister and a coffee pot. Miss Anne, excusing herself for a moment, rose and left the room. Loring watching the young girl's graceful movements was suddenly impressed by a painful fact. His hostesses were unmistakably poor. The girl had shaken the last grains of coffee into the pot and filling it with cold water placed it on the top of the cylinder stove. Then she stepped to and fro from cupboard to table, laying a meal on a snowy cloth. There were fresh bread and butter, baked apples and some slices of cold ham.

When she had invited him to sit down, Loring arose with many apologies upon his lips. Just then the door opened to admit Miss Anne muffled in shawl and hood and trembling with agitation. She seemed to forget Loring's presence and her words were addressed to her niece.

"Grace—what do you think has happened? That—that—he's gone!" Her thin hands flew to her face and the tears trickled between her fingers.

"Oh, Aunt Anne!" The girl threw her arm around the older woman's shoulder. "Are you sure? Why he was there not a half hour ago because I looked at him. How do you suppose he got away?"

"I guess somebody has taken him—he was so fat, too, Grace." Miss Annie sank down in a chair and slowly removed her wraps. "Oh, dear, I'm afraid your coffee will get cold. Sit down and eat your supper, sir."

"Thank you," said Loring, as he obeyed. "I hope you are not in trouble, Miss Anne? Is there anything that I can do to make things right?"

Miss Anne surveyed him with approving eyes. All at once her eyes wrinkled pleasantly and she began to laugh. "Do you think you can discover who stole the white rooster we were going to have for our Christmas dinner? I had him penned up safely

"There Isn't Another Chicken About the Place."

and I just went out now to have a look at him and he is gone—the hen house is empty."

"That is too bad. Can't I catch another one for you or was the white rooster especially fattened for the occasion?" asked Loring.

Miss Anne hesitated and looked at her niece. But the girl busied with her bright silks did not lift her eyes; a faint color glowed in her cheeks.

"There isn't another chicken about the place," said Miss Anne bluntly. "I may as well say, sir, that it was the last of my flock; that's why it is a disappointment to me."

Loring arose from his chair and reached for his overcoat. "Then it's my place to scour the country-side for one to take its place," he said firmly. "Please don't tell me not to—it's Christmas eve, you know, and there isn't a soul that expects me to do anything and I'd like to feel I was of some use at such a time. I won't return without a bird of some sort if I have to rob a roost myself."

Without waiting to hear their protests, Loring let himself out into the star-lit night and plunged into the crisp snow.

Two hours afterward when he returned heavily laden, the windows of the farmhouse glowed pleasantly and seemed to offer a welcome. As he stamped the snow from his feet at the side door he heard Miss Anne's voice raised in warm approval.

"Well, now, Grace, I believe the poor fellow will be tickled to death to get that pin book; he said the didn't have any folks—he seems honest enough—"

Loring stumbled into the warm room and let his packages down on to the round table. He held his cold fingers to the heat. "I didn't find the white rooster, but I did corral the plumpest little white goose you ever saw; it's such a long time since I've prepared for Christmas that once started I couldn't stop, so I went on through the village and bought all the rest of the fixings—I hope you won't object—oh, well, Miss Anne—I shall just take my packages and have Christmas by myself in the woods." Miss Anne's sensitive pride had prompted her to wave aside the proffered edibles, but as Loring replaced the packages in the basket she watched him all unconscious of the fact that her eyes were wistful. First went the plump goose and following it were turnips and potatoes, cranberries and onions and celery; a bag of white grapes; another of nuts and a large and tempting box of candy.

With his basket on his arm, Loring turned to the door. "I must thank you for your kindness," he said gravely. "You have taken me in and permitted me to rest when I was cold and tired; and you have offered me the sweetest hospitality. I wish you and Miss Grace the most joyful Christmas you have ever known."

His hand was on the knob when Miss Anne stopped him. "I don't like to have you go like that, sir. You are welcome to remain until you can resume your journey and to our fare plain as it is—the Leightons have always prided themselves on their hospitality, but of late years—"

"Leighton!" interrupted Loring, placing his basket on the floor and opening his overcoat. "Are you Miss Anne Leighton?"

Miss Anne's round eyes opened wide. "Yes—why do you ask?"

Loring took a letter case from an inner pocket and searched carefully in its depths. "You are a cousin to Mr. Josiah Leighton, of Boston? Yes? Very well, my search is ended then. I am Mr. Leighton's private secretary, Robert Loring, and he sent me to seek you out and present this letter. I believe it contains a Christmas gift as well as an offer to make your future home with him. By Jove, but it's the merest chance that led me here. I reached the station all right and hired a man to drive me to your place. He lost his way and we traveled half a day; then he managed to upset me into a snow bank and he made off, leaving me to find my way back to civilization as best I could. You see fate led me here." He was looking at Grace's downcast face rather than at Miss Anne's excitedly bobbing figure.

"Grace Leighton—here we were watching for the expressman, thinking Cousin Josiah was going to send his usual presents of silk waists—and here is his letter and a check for $50. You wished us a joyful Christmas, Mr. Loring; I guess it's going to be one!"

"I have a feeling," said Loring, deliberately, "that it is the beginning of many happy Christmases for me."

He was still thoughtfully regarding the sweet profile of the young girl bending over her bright silks.

His First Christmas Tree

Hamlin Garland's Reminiscences of His Boyhood Out on the Plains of Iowa.

Hamlin Garland, conversing with a friend the other day, told of the first Christmas tree he ever saw. It happened to be a schoolhouse tree out on the plains of Iowa, when the boy was twelve years old. Always before that Christmas had been jolly enough, with full stockings and boyish good cheer, but those were days not long after the war, and glittering "extras" for trees were none too abundant. The Grove schoolhouse was five miles away. "Our own," said Mr. Garland, "stood, a little wooden box on the plain, without a single tree to shelter it, but the Grove schoolhouse was in a forest section, a meeting center, a settlement where things 'took place.' It was a moonlight night, and I tramped over the crunching snow in the furrows trodden by the horses, the wind singing in my face, the stars sparkling on the snow, and now and then a gray wolf skipping along the ledge ahead. I remember those things now, but then I saw nothing but the shine of a lighted tree ahead. At last I reached it, a simple enough tree, but well worth my pains. I think it bore, carefully counted, an occasional apple and orange, mouth-organs, painted tin horns, and little white netting bags for popcorn with the pink kernels showing through. None of those things were for me—the Grove schoolboys got them, and not one was over. But I don't think I minded that half as much as a boy might be expected to; I had seen a Christmas tree."—Harper.

"Peace on Earth."

Personal sorrow makes us tenderhearted toward the sorrowing, careful for those less blessed than ourselves. Of all the wonderful Christlike deeds of the Christmas time, many are in memory of those no longer on earth, while still others had their spring of action in a heart made sympathetic by deep experience. Our utmost efforts cannot quell the pain of loneliness, or fill the empty places, or drown the grief or loss, but the peace of the Christmastide, the promise of the angel's song, is for the sorrowful as well as the glad. The unselfish participation in the joy of others, and warm-hearted giving of ourselves and our treasure, lightens the burden of sorrow, while the "peace" of the angel's song is the peace of God which passeth all understanding."

Mistake of the Deacon.

Kindly old deacon had made his usual round of Christmas Eve visits, and was taking a short cut home, when, half-way up a dark street, he came upon a man lying flat upon the ground over a small grating, apparently tipsy.

"Come, old fellow," he cooed. "Get up and go home like a sensible chap."

But the "old fellow" shook himself free with an angry snort.

"Git 'ome yerself, yer old fool," he growled. "There's a water-pipe burst in our kitchen, an' I'm feeling for the main tap."

COSTS LESS THAN 55 CENTS A BUSHEL TO RAISE WHEAT IN CANADA.

A FREQUENT QUESTION ANSWERED.

Western Canada probably suffered less from weather conditions during the year of 1911 than did almost any other portion of the country. Seeding was most successful and the growing conditions up to July were never better. Crops of all kinds showed wonderful growth at that time and were universally good, but there was not the usually excellent ripening weather in August and the effects of this were felt. Many fields that late in July promised 40 and 50 bushels yield of wheat were reduced to 25 and 30 bushels, while some of course gave the full expectancy and others somewhat less. The quality was also lowered. In face of these conditions, it is found that during the months of September and October, the total amount of contract wheat marketed and inspected was about 20 million bushels, which realized a total of 18½ million dollars, the average price for this wheat being 97¾ cents; that below contract for the two months was a little over 15 million bushels, which at an average price of 89½ cents per bushel realized a little over eleven million dollars, or a grand total for all wheat of 35 million bushels, which realized a total of a little over thirty-one million dollars.

On the first of November, there was in the hands of the farmers of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta for sale and seed about 130 million bushels of wheat, from which fact some idea may be had of the value of the wheat crop of 1911.

A careful canvass made by the Winnipeg Free Press made of a number of men farming in a large way indicates that even with the extreme expense of harvesting the crop, which has been caused by the bad weather and difficulty in threshing, wheat has been produced and put on the market for less than 55 cts. a bushel. The average freight rate is not over 13 cts. per bushel. This would make the cost of production and freight 68 cts. and would leave the farmer an actual margin on his low-grade wheat of 17½ cts. and for his high-grade wheat of 19½ cts.; and though this is not as large a profit as the farmer has every right to expect, it is a profit not to be despised, and which should leave a very fair amount of money to his credit when all the expenses of the year have been paid, unless the value of low-grade wheat sinks very much below its present level.

Housework Drudgery

Housework is drudgery for the weak woman. She brushes, dusts and scrubs, or is on her feet all day attending to the many details of the household, her back aching, her temples throbbing, nerves quivering under the stress of pain, possibly dizzy feelings. Sometimes rest in bed is not refreshing, because the poor tired nerves do not permit of refreshing sleep. The real need of weak, nervous women is satisfied by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It Makes Weak Women Strong and Sick Women Well.

This "Prescription" removes the cause of women's weaknesses, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures those weaknesses so peculiar to women. It tranquilizes the nerves, encourages the appetite and induces restful sleep.

Dr. Pierce is perfectly willing to let every one know what his "Favorite Prescription" contains, a complete list of ingredients on the bottle-wrapper. Do not let any unscrupulous druggist persuade you that his substitute of unknown composition is "just as good" in order that he may make a bigger profit. Just smile and shake your head!

LIKE TO WALK IN PUDDLES

A Grown-Up Man Tries to Ascribe a Reason for This Fancy of Boys.

"It may not be a matter of grave moment," said a grown-up man, "but I would rather like to know why small boys like to walk in mud puddles.

"I don't refer now to the boy in rubber boots; his motives in wading in puddles and in deeper water I can understand. He is proud of his waterproof boots and he likes to surfeit himself with the delightful consciousness and proof that they are waterproof; he likes to brave and pass unscathed the perils of the deep waterways of the gutters after a heavy rain; though with his first boots anyway he is likely to overdo this a little, to keep on trying to see how deep he can go till at last he steps into a place a little deeper than the rest and gets his boots filled.

"Still, I can understand the boy and his rubber boots, but I don't quite see through his fancy for walking or stepping in puddles generally when he has leather shoes on. Maybe here too it is because he likes to take risks, or perhaps it is because of his innate defiance of rule and convention.

"A bunch of small boys will one after another try jumping over a puddle to see if they can clear it, and then sooner or later one is sure to come down within the edge of the water. But that doesn't disturb him; on the contrary he rather enjoys that experience, and then you may see the bunch wind up by all running or walking through the water. Why do they do this, getting their shoes wet and muddy and getting them wet causing them to wear out the sooner, to say nothing of causing their mothers care and worry not only over shoes but stockings? But all boys like to slush through mud puddles, and for that matter so do some older people, too.

"I like myself when I have on rubbers to walk right ahead regardless of the pools of water on the sidewalk. In fact I am likely to step in them deliberately if they are not too deep, so that I may get the water over my rubbers to wet my feet. I like to slash ahead unhampered and really in doing this simple little free action I find enjoyment. And I guess it is a sense of this sort that makes the boy find a pleasure in scampering or stamping or walking through mud puddles; he likes to take the risk and see how much water he can get into without getting his feet wet, but the thing he likes best about it is its defiant unfettered freedom."

PETTY SINS THAT WORRY

Those We Are Inclined to Pamper and Stroke the Hard Ones to Get Rid Of.

What is your pet sin, and is it a comfortable one to live with? We are not speaking of the terrible sins of life, for they are at once too big and too ferocious for even the most daring to coddle. Their function is to ravage and devastate. It is the petty sin we are inclined to pamper and stroke, which we find difficult to rid ourselves of.

Does it not, like our pet economy, cost us more than it is worth? Does insincerity, or meanness, or any really petty trait pay one to give it house room? If they made comfortable or entertaining guests, then one could understand the tolerance with which many people house them, but they are neither.

They are the kind of guests that, once allowed your door, take possession of your house. You cannot confine them to a small back room, where no one will see them, for they insist upon forcing themselves into every situation, and no crack or corner is free from their hateful presence.

The longer you allow them to stay the more loath they are to depart. To coddle them is fatal. The only way to treat them is to never let them get a foothold in your house, or if they succeed in establishing themselves to turn them out the moment you discover them.

The question is, does it pay to have guests so objectionable staying in one's house? Is it not really a terrible nuisance to be ashamed of them, yet continue to have them about? And, is it not embarrassing to have insincerity show her smirking face when truth is calling on one, or to have meanness obtrude her ugly head when generosity knocks at one's door?

And they are as expensive as they are ill-mannered, these troublesome guests. They demand all sorts of things. One is constantly giving in to them. They are never satisfied. So why does one ever take them under one's roof at all?

Insincerity is famous for complicating one's life and landing one in embarrassing situations, while meanness never makes a friend and is always disagreeable. It is better for a girl to turn a deaf ear to all their advances.

They will seek in a hundred different ways to enter your house, but just remember this, that if you have them then truth, generosity, sweetness and joy will refuse to visit you.

WISE WORDS

Many business advantages are gained through a bank account. The merchant who is in want of money in order to take advantage of low prices finds his bank a help. The farmer who needs money but wishes to hold his crops for better prices is taken care of. The laboring man strengthens his position in the community. They all have the confidence of the banker which is very often a great assistance.

Think it over.

BUILD POWER PLANT

25

Rock Island Has Begun Construction Work at Dallas, Marion Co.

WILL OPERATE BY ELECTRICITY

Plan Is Said To Include the Line From Des Moines to Princeton About One Hundred and Twenty Miles of Road.

Des Moines.—The Rock Island railroad has begun construction work on a large power plant at Dallas, in Marion county, which is on the line of the new Rock Island line from Carlisle to Allerton and the center of the immense new coal fields which the new line will enter. It is reported in railroad circles that this new power plant will generate electricity for the operation of interurban freight and passenger trains over certain of the Rock Island lines radiating from Des Moines. This plan of electrification is said to include the line from Des Moines to Princeton, Mo., a distance of about 120 miles, which will be open for traffic when the new track from Carlisle to Allerton is finished, the line between Des Moines and Winterset and the line from Des Moines to Newton.

It is supposed that the Rock Island will double track its line from Altoona to Colfax and then use the old Newton & Northwestern from Colfax to Newton to afford a double track electric line from Des Moines to Newton.

Stand In Line at Saloons.

Sioux City.—Seventy-six of Sioux City's seventy-eight saloons still remain closed as the result of Iowa supreme court's ruling in the Moon law. The two "oases" that remained open are doing an immense business, crowds standing in line to secure drinks.

Young Giant In Waterloo.

Waterloo.—This city has discovered it has a young giant in the person of Charles Koepke, the 22-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Koepke. The young man towers to a height of 7 feet 6 inches "in his stocking feet," and weighs 210 pounds.

Next Year's Show Assured.

Marshalltown.—The success of the recent exhibition of the Marshalltown Poultry and Pet Stock association has assured a show for December, 1912. The show next year will be held during the week preceding Christmas.

Killed While Hunting.

Cedar Rapids.—Martin Moriarity, a farm hand, was accidentally killed while hunting near Fairfax. A rabbit ran under the corn crib and he tried to poke it out with his rifle which was discharged, killing him instantly.

Meets With Big Success.

Shenandoah.—The short course was a success. More than 150 farmers enrolled for the regular class work and many others spent a day or half day at a time, and about 100 women attended the domestic science class.

Adams Sells His Ponies.

Solon.—Myron Adams, a well-known Shetland pony breeder, held a closing-out sale recently on his farm. His ponies have been noted for their extreme smallness. One colt, seven months old, was taken home by its purchaser in his buggy.

Evergreens Are Cut Down.

Solon.—The grove of evergreens on the farm known as the Pendleton place between here and Iowa City are being cut down to be sawed into lumber. For forty years these trees have been a beautiful landmark.

Fireman Falls From Cab.

McGregor.—William Bach of Dubuque, fireman on a freight train, I. & D. division, was thrown from his engine at North McGregor and seriously injured. He was brought to the hospital at McGregor.

Big Fire At Mason City.

Mason City.—The Wier Wardrobe company plant, manufacturers of finishing lumber, cabinets and furniture, was completely destroyed by fire with a loss estimated at $75,000.

Iowa Girl Ordained Minister.

Waterloo.—Miss Laura Bowman, a former Cedar Falls girl, daughter of Dr. John Bowman, will be ordained a Universalist minister at Markesan, Wisconsin, Dec. 28.

Prominent Traveling Man Dies.

Cedar Rapids.—George Larimer, aged 57, prominent traveling man, is dead. One son, Arthur Larimer, is a Y. M. C. A. secretary in Hawaii.

Form Protective League.

Harlan.—Constant losses by thefts of grain, hay, chickens and other property has led to the organization of a protective association among the farmers. A meeting was held Friday night at the Center school house and the building was crowded with farmers responding to the call. Representatives were present from several townships in the county and it was decided that organization was the best method for stopping the crimes. Thirty-two prominent farmers are charter members.

New Road About Finished.

Des Moines.—C. A. Ross of the Engineering Construction and Securities company says that the steam railroad which that company is building from Blanchard, on the Wabash, to Clarinda, on the Burlington, will be finished and ready for the operation of the rolling stock on Jan. 1. With respect to extension of the Iowa & Southwestern now building into Clarinda, Mr. Ross would have nothing to say.

Horses Have Hydrophobia.

Creston.—Farmers living in the east part of the county are inclined to think that hydrophobia has caused the death of a number of horses that have died this fall under suspicious circumstances. At first it was thought to be some fungus growth in the corn stalks fed to the horses that produced the convulsions. It is known a mad dog was at large in that vicinity during the fall and some stock was bitten.

Mystic Has Big Fire.

Ottumwa.—A defective flue in the racket store of Edward Webb at Mystic caused a blaze that damaged the establishment to the extent of $16,000. The losses are A. R. Scott, owner of the Mystic Telegram and three buildings, $5,000; Webb's store, $10,000; Scott and Miner's clothing store, $7,000; Cole's tailor shop, $160; Mystic barber shop, $300; I. Fieldman's shoe store, $500, a total of $23,000.

Farmers' Creamery Burns.

Nashua.—The Farmers' Co-operative creamery plant was burned here entailing a loss of about $4,000. Of this amount about $3,000 is on the building and machinery and $1,000 on butter that was stowed in the refrigerator ready for shipment. The fire started in the engine room, and, when discovered, was under such headway that the fire company could do nothing to save the building.

New Road Deal Settled.

Council Bluffs.—J. J. Hess, attorney for the Iowa & Omaha Short Line, has just returned from Philadelphia, and brings back word that every doubt of the deal for the taking over of the Short Line and the Atlantic Northern & Southern road by a London syndicate, represented by former Secretary Leslie M. Shaw, has now been removed. It is simply a matter of detail from now on.

Stock Is Sent to Market.

Creston.—Sixty cars of live stock came into this city from the Cumberland branch in one afternoon, bound for the big markets. Spaulding furnished five or six carloads, Orient, eighteen; Greenfield, nineteen, and all the rest came from between Cumberland and Greenfield.

Postmaster Named.

Washington, D. C.—President Taft has sent the following recommendations for postmasters to the senate: Chas. A. Reynolds, Harlan; Eric P. Dalander, Madrid; Chas. W. Briggs, Sutherland; Caleb H. Wickersham, West Branch; James Eilickson, Thompson.

Creston Drivers Strike.

Creston.—Drivers of the local delivery system are on a strike here for higher wages. The company, which recently started, had the contract for delivery of all the stores of the city.

Corn Growers' Association.

Newton.—The ninth annual exhibition and convention of the Iowa Corn Growers' association will be held here Jan. 29 to Feb. 10. Many thousands of dollars in premiums will be given to the winners.

Fall From Building Causes Death.

Waterloo.—While fighting fire in Hesal Road's shoe store, Charles H. Eicher, 32 years old, driver of the hose wagon, fell from an adjoining building and died three hours later.

Raising Check Is Charge.

Mason City.—Charged with raising a check from $1.50 to $150, C. A. Heilman, commonly known as "Duth," was arrested and placed in jail to await a hearing.

Well Known Cattleman Dies.

Davenport.—Israel Barr, a leading shorthorn cattle breeder of the state, died at his home in Lincoln township after a paralytic stroke.

But Ruggles shook his head. "The ...y is coming back here tonight," and ...alorey laughed.

"Don't you believe it! You don't ...now how deep in he is. You don't ...now the Duchess of Breakwater. ...nce he is with her—"

At the same time that the page boy ...anded Mr. Ruggles the card of the ...aller, he gave him as well a small ...velope, which contained box tickets ...r the Gaiety. Ruggles examined it. "I have got some writing to do," he ...id Galorey, "and I'm going to see ... show tonight, and I think I'll just ...ay here and watch my hole."

As soon as Galorey had left the ...ariton, Mr. Ruggles despatched his ...tters and his visitor, made a very ...reful toilet, and after waiting until ...st eight o'clock for Dan to return ... dinner, dined alone on roast beef ...d a tart, and with perfect digestion, ... somewhat thoughtful mind, left the ...tel and walked down the dim street ... the brilliant Strand, and on foot to ...e Gaiety.

CHAPTER VII.

At the Stage Entrance.

Ruggles, from his stall, for the ...urth time saw the curtain go up ... "Mandalay" and heard the tempie ...lls ring. One of the stage boxes ...as not occupied until after the first ...t and then the son of his friend ...me in alone and sat far back out of ...ght of any eyes but the keenest, ...d those eyes were Ruggles'. Letty ...ane, delicious, fantastic, languishing, ...ng to Dan; that was evident to Rug-...es. He was a large man and filled ...s stall comfortably. He sat through ...e performance peacefully, his hands ... his pockets, his big face thought-...l, his shirt front ruffled. To look at ...m, one must have wondered why he ...ad come to "Mandalay." He scarce-... lost any of the threads of his own ...flections, though when Miss Lane in ...sponse to a call from the house, ...ng her cradle song three times, he ...emed moved. The tones of her pure ...oice, the cradling in her arms of an ...maginary child, her apparent dove-...e purity, her grace and sweetness, ...d her cooing, gentle tone, to judge ... the softening of the Westerner's ...ce, touched very much the big fel-...w who listened like a child. At the ...d he drew his handkerchief slowly ...ross his eyes, but the tears, or ...ther moisture, that rose there was ...t all due to Miss Lane's song, for ...uggles was extremely warm.

He could see that in his box the ...oy sat transfixed and absorbed. Dan ...ent out in the second entr'acte and ...as absent when the curtain went ...own. Ruggles, as well, left before ...e performance was over, to make ...s way outside the theater to the ...tage exit, where there was already ...athered a little group, looked after ... a couple of policemen. Close to ...e curb a gleaming motor waited, the ...ootman at its door. Ruggles but-...ned his coat up to his chin and took ...s place close to the door, over which ...e electric light showed the words ...Stage Entrance." A poor woman el-...owed him, her shabby hat adorned ... a scraggly plume, a gray shawl ...rapped round her shoulders. A girl ...r two, who might have been flower ...allers in Piccadilly in the daytime, a ...couple of toughs, a handful of other vagrants smelling of gin, a decent man in working clothes, a child in his arms, formed the human hedge Letty Lane was to pass between—a singular group of people to spend an hour hanging about the streets at the exit of a theater well toward midnight. So the naive Ruggles thought, and better understood the appearance of the young fellows in evening clothes who hovered on the extreme edge of the little crowd. Dan, however, was not of these.

"Look sharp, Cissy," the workingman spoke to his child, holding her well up. "When she comes hout she'll pass close to yer, and you sing hout, 'God bless yer.'"

"Yes, Dad, I will," shrilled the child.

The woman in the gray shawl drew it close about her. "Aw she's a true lidy, all right, ain't she? I expect you've had some kindness off her as well?"

The man nodded over the child's shoulder. "Used to be a scene shifter, and Miss Lane found out about my little girl last year—not this lass, not Cissy, Cissy's sister—and she sent 'er to a place where it costs the eyes out of yer head. She's gettin' well fast, and we, none of us, has seen her or spoken to Miss Lane. She doesn't know our names."

And the woman answered: "She does a lot like that. She's got a heart bigger'n her little body."

And a big boy in the front row said back to the others: "Well, she makes a mint of money."

And the woman who had spoken before said: "She gives it nearly all to the poor."

Ruggles was evidently on the poor side of the waiting crowd; the handful of riffraff around him with its stench of dirt and gin. A better looking set collected opposite and there was the gleam of white shirt fronts.

"Now, there she comes," the father saw her first. "Sing out, Cissy."

The door opened and a figure quickly floated from it, like a white rose blown out into the foggy darkness. It floated down the few steps to the street between the double row of spectators. A white cloak entirely covered the actress. Her head was hidden by a white scarf, and she almost ran the short gantlet to her motor, between the cries of "God bless you!"—"Three cheers for Letty Lane"—"God bless you, lady!" She didn't speak or heed, however, or turn her head, but held her scarf against her face, and the man who slowly lounged behind her to the car, and put her in and got in after her, was not the man Joshua Ruggles had waited there to see. He hung about until the footman had sprung up and the car moved softly away, the stage entrance door shut, then he followed along with the crowd, with the few faithful who had waited an hour in the cold mist to cry out their applause, not to a singer in "Mandalay," but to a woman's heart.

CHAPTER VIII.

Dan's Simplicity.

The Duchess of Breakwater was not sure how close Dan Blair's thoughts were to marriage, but the boy from Montana was the easiest prey that had come across the beautiful and unscrupulous woman's range. He had told her that he stayed on up in London to see a man from home, and when after four days he still lingered in town, she found his absence unbearable, and sent him a wire so worded that if he had a spark of interest in her he must immediately return to the Park. She had never been more lovely than when Dan found her waiting for him.

She had ordered tea in her sitting-room. She told him that he looked frightfully seedy, asked him what he had been doing and why he had stopped so long away, and Blair told her that old Ruggles, his father's friend, had run over to see him with a lot of papers for Dan to read and sign and closed with a smile, telling her that he guessed she "didn't know much about business."

"I only know the horrid things of business—debts, and loans, and bills, and fussing."

"Those things are not business," Dan answered wisely; "they are just common or garden carelessness."

She asked him why he had not brought Ruggles out to Osdene, and he told her he couldn't have done a stroke of work with the old boy down here at the Park.

Stirring his tea, he appreciated the duchess. The agreeable picture she made impressed him mightily.

"Do you know," he asked suddenly, "what you make me think of?"

"Gosh! When I Saw Her There on the Stage, Why——"

And she responded softly: "No, dear."

"A box of candy. This room with its stuffed walls, and you in it are good enough—"

"To eat?" she laughed aloud. "Oh, you perfectly killing creature, what an idea!"

And as he met her eyes with his clear ones, with a simplicity she could never hope to reach, he put his tea-cup down; and as he did so the duchess observed his strong hands, their vigor, well-kept and muscular, but not the dandified hands of the man who goes often to the manicure.

"If it hadn't been for one thing," the boy went on, "I would have thought of nothing else but you, every minute I've been away."

"Mr. Ruggles?" suggested the duchess.

"No, the Gaiety girl, Letty Lane. You know I told you in the box that she was from my town."

The young man, who had flown back to Osdene Park in answer to a telegram, began to take his companion into his confidence.

"I knew that girl," Dan said, "when she wasn't more than fourteen. She sold me sodawater over the drug store counter. I always thought she was bully, bright as a button and pretty as a peach. Once, I remember, I took six chocolate sodas in one day just to go in and see her. I had an awful time. I most died of that jag, and yet," he said meditatively, "I don't think I ever spoke three words to her, just said 'sarsaparilla' or 'chocolate' or whatever it might happen to be. Ever since that day, ever since that jag," he said with feeling, "I couldn't see a stick of chocolate and keep my head up! Well," went on the boy, "Sarah Towney sang in our church for a missionary meeting, and I was there. I can remember the song she sang." He spoke with unconscious ardor. He didn't refer to the hymn, however, but went on with his narrative. "She disappeared from Blairtown. I never had a peep at her again until the other night. Gosh!" he said fervently, "when I saw her there on the stage, why, I felt as though cold water was running up and down my spine.

The duchess, as a rule, was amused by his slang. It seemed vulgar to her now.

"Heavens," she drawled, "you are really too dreadful!"

He didn't seem to hear her.

"She's turned out a perfect wonder, hasn't she? A world-beater! Why, everybody tells me there isn't another like her in her specialty. Of course I have heard of Letty Lane, but I haven't been out to things since t went in mourning, and I've never run up against her."

"Really," drawled the duchess again, "now that you have 'run up against her' what are you going to do with her? Marry her?"

His honest stare was the greatest relief she had ever experienced. He repeated bluntly: "Marry her? Why the dickens should I?"

"You seem absorbed in her."

He agreed with her. "I am. I think she's great, don't you?"

"Hardly."

War.

One inevitable characteristic of modern war is, that it is associated throughout, in all particulars, with a vast and most irregular formation of commercial enterprise. There is no incentive to Mammon-worship so remarkable as that which it affords. The political economy of war is now one of its most commanding aspects. . . . Even apart from the fact that war suspends, ipso facto, every rule of public thrift, and tends to sap honesty itself in the use of the public treasury for which it makes such unbounded calls, it therefore is the greatest feeder of that lust of gold which we are told is the essence of commerce, though we had hoped it was only its occasional besetting sin. —W. E. Gladstone.

Heaven and earth shall pass away, but that which thinks within me must think for ever; that which feels must feel; I am, and I can never cease to be.—James Montgomery.

History of Old Fort Lee

Consisted Merely of Earthworks and Was Abandoned by Order of General Washington.

The Fort Lee of revolutionary days was on top of the Palisades, about two miles up the river from the village of Edgewater, where the Fort Lee ferry has its New Jersey landing. In the strict sense of the word, it was hardly worthy of being called a fort, since it consisted merely of earthworks, of which not a vestige is to be seen today.

Tradition says that the fort was laid out by Gen. Israel Putnam, and some of the historians thus account for the fact that the defenses were rather expansive for their purpose. At first it was called Fort Constitution, but was soon re-named Fort Lee.

This temporary stronghold was really constructed to co-operate with Fort Washington, on the New York side of the Hudson, in the defense of the river. In the beginning it was believed that the two defenses would be able to turn the British war fleet back and prevent it from getting up the river to West Point.

But from the first Washington is known to have questioned its usefulness and it was on his orders that it was finally evacuated. In November, 1776, all that was left of the American army in New Jersey abandoned the fort and set out on its historic retreat to Philadelphia.

Tradition says that there was a fort under the cliff of the river front at some point not far from Edgewater earlier in the revolution, but there is no authentic record of its existence and it therefore cannot be credited.

Necessity is oftener the mother of crime than of invention.

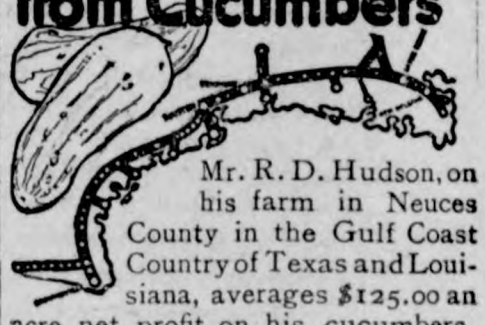
$125 net per Acre from Cucumbers



Mr. R. D. Hudson, on his farm in Neuces County in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas and Louisiana, averages $125.00 an acre net profit on his cucumbers. He planted them in February and marketed them in March.

Think of it—enough profit in two months to more than pay for the land, and 10 months left in which to grow two other crops.

Two and three crops a year is not unusual in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas and Louisiana for they have twelve months of growing weather.

Making money down there is not difficult. Any man with ordinary intelligence can make good in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas and Louisiana. Thousands of men have left the stores, offices, and factories of the north to go down there to lead an independent, out-of-door life. They enjoy being their own boss, and piling up their own bank account feels good to them.

Better look into this

Investigate! Go down there this fall or winter. See and talk to these growers. Then you will realize the big opportunities open to you. The trip, by the Frisco, will alone be worth the little cost of going. Excursion fares via the Frisco, the first and third Tuesdays of each month, make the trip inexpensive. The Frisco Lines operate splendid, electric lighted, all steel trains, daily, from Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Birmingham and New Orleans. These trains carry through cars, daily, and on excursion days, through tourist sleeper to the Gulf Coast Country.

3 Splendid Books FREE

One on the Mid-Coast country of Texas, one on the lower irrigated sections of the Rio Grande Valley and one on Louisiana, all beautifully illustrated, showing scenes in actual colors. They describe the country and crops from one end to the other, giving examples of success and personal statements by men who have gone there and made good. HOGS DYING BY HUNDREDS

Grundy County Herds Being Ravaged by Epidemic

A dispatch from Grundy Center to the Marshalltown T-R says:

An apparently incurable lung disease has cost the lives of hundreds of Grundy County hogs within the last few weeks.

The large majority of the hogs that become affected die within a day after they are taken sick. One farmer lost about sixty head in two days. The dead hogs were piled in a heap and burned. One ash pile like that represents from $800 to $1 000.

We wish to call your attention to the fact that most infectious diseases such as whooping cough, diphtheria and scarlet fever are contracted when the child has a cold. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will quickly cure a cold and greatly lessen the danger of contracting these diseases. This remedy is famous for its cures of colds. It contains no opium or other narcotic and may be given to a child with implicit confidence. Sold by G A. Pabst.

JOB'S UNDERSTUDY

Moffatt, armed with a mirror, stood by the bedroom window examining a red elevation which had appeared on his neck, just below his right ear. He was so engrossed that he did not hear the door open, and he started as his wife, close to his elbow, exclaimed, "Franklin! Another?"

He nodded gloomily, laying down the glass and picking up his brushes.

"Well, I know exactly what to do this time." Her voice, though not without sympathy, exhaled business-like satisfaction. "I talked it over with Uncle Bailey when he was here yesterday, and he said he knew all about Job's comforters—that's what he called them. He says all you have to do is to take a pound of shot and cook it in a quart of milk and drink the milk, and you'll never have another. He's tried it three times."

"Not if I know myself. I'll get good and worse before I take that dose. I think I'd better consult a doctor."

"Oh, no! Try the simple home remedies first. Bring home some shot this evening."

Deaf to wifely exhortation, Moffatt persisted in his high-headed attitude until he started off for his day's work. At about three o'clock, however, he appeared at home with a chastened look on his face and a pound of shot in his pocket.

"There's a new one starting on the other side of my neck," he confessed. "Go ahead and boil up the shot if you want to, and then let's fix some bread and milk poultices. I've heard of them all my life."

When he had gulped down the shot-flavored milk and was lying on the couch, decorated with poultices, a kind hearted neighbor ran in.

"Oh, I know all about it!" she told him, after inquiring into his ailment. "I had 43-one after the other! Nothing helped me—nothing."

"Mattie," Moffatt demanded next morning, "do I look like your idea of Job?"

"No, nor act like it, either." But she was sorry as soon as she had said it.

"There's another of these things coming under my chin," he announced. "There'll be a whole mountain range of them on my neck, from ear to ear. I can't go to the office."

"Poor Franklin!" She soothed him with a subtle tinge of elation in her tone. "I've something new to try—an ointment that Cousin Sally told me about. I've had the druggist put it up. It smells dreadfully, dear, but she says if you rub it in faithfully always with an upward motion, it's a certain cure. I'll rub some in before breakfast."

"For pity's sake!" cried Grandma Worthington, when she walked in the morning after, and found Moffatt still staying at home with his tribulations. "Don't fuss around with ointments, children! No use paying out money to druggists for a thing like this. Don't you know what to do? Take the shells of three eggs and mash them to a powder; then swallow one of them every morning for three days running.

Outwardly scoffing, but secretly hoping, Moffatt began to eat egg shells. Three days passed, and the only result of the treatment was that a new and angry peak had added itself to the chain which threatened to encircle his neck.

"Franklin," said his wife, then, almost timidly, "Mollie has been talking to me all day about something that never fails, if a person only has the grit to try it. She knows personally of twenty-nine cases that it has cured, but I haven't said anything because I was afraid you'd refuse."

"What is it?" growled Job's understudy, peering grimly from above a widely bandaged neck.

She hesitated. "Suppose you try it without knowing what it is? It may go down easier."

"Bring it on!" was the desperate order.

Hastening to the kitchen, Mrs. Moffatt produced the remedy, already prepared on the chance that he might be induced to try it. It consisted of a piece of yellow washing soap, melted and mixed with an onion which had previously been boiled to a pulp.

"Mollie," said Mrs. Moffatt, reproachfully, when her laundress came back to iron next day, "why didn't you tell me that medicine was an emetic?"

"Wha's that, Mis' Moffatt? You done tried it. Emetic?" Suddenly a look of mingled horror and glee overspread the black face. "Don' go fob to tell me he swallubed it!"

"Certainly! As much as you could get on a 25-cent piece. That's what you said."

"Oh, massy!" Mollie sank into a chair and tried to look solemn. "Oh, masy! That was to ruf awn, don you know? Laws! Whah's Mistah Moffatt, now?"

She peered about as if she expected to see him stretched under the kitchen table.

"He has gone to the doctor." Mrs. Moffatt's tone was stern.

Again that gleeful horror convulsed Mollie's face, which she covered with her apron. "Don't worry, honey; he'll get well," she declared, tumultuously, through folds of gingham. "Doctahs noh nuffin cayn't prevent it. Anybody 'at can eat that dose an' live froo it—he'll get well!"

His Reason for Secrecy.

Every fight fan in New York, says the correspondent of The Cincinnati Times-Star, knows little "K. O." Brown, who has won that title because he wins most of his battles by a knockout. When he is in the ring he is a muscular youngster, all wire and muscle, and with a most formidable fighting frown. Outside the ring he is just a schoolboy, blonde, smooth-faced, modest and everything but pugilistic in appearance. The other night the coppers raided the street on which he lives and caught "K. O." and a dozen other youthful malefactors. They had been playing football in the open street. They were taken to Night Court.

"C'n I give a name that ain't me own?" asked "K. O." of the court.

The magistrate wanted to know what was up, of course, and expressed astonishment when he was told that the quiet, pleasant looking little chap was the fighter who is working his way toward the top of the pugilistic tree.

"And why do you want to keep your name a secret?" asked he of young Brown.

"Because," said the fighter, "if me mother hears that I have been pinched she'll lam the daylights out o' me."

No Chop Suey in China.

"I have just come from a trip to China," said the foreign agent, "and I found everything to eat there except chop suey. While seeing the sights in various Chinese cities I would occasionally drop into a restaurant to have a bite of native food. An order for a bowl of chop suey invariably was met by a mystical shake of the head. The fact is that they don't eat chop suey in China. An intelligent Chinaman tells me that chop suey is eaten only by pigs, cats and Americans. It is the American corruption of some Chinese dish that probably was very good. There is a legend to the effect that it was invented by some practical joker in San Francisco's Chinatown, and from there is has spread over the entire United States and most of Europe. Even London, Paris and Berlin now have their chop suey joints where respectable natives go and consume the stuff under the impression that they are being wicked. Chinamen in American tell me that chop suey is eaten only by the poorer Chinese, who order it in the dingier restaurants because it is cheap."

FAVORS LOWERING OF TARIFF RATES

PRESIDENT TAFT, IN MESSAGE TO CONGRESS, ADVOCATES REDUCTION OF DUTIES.

SCHEDULE K UNDER FIRE

In Communication to Congress, Chief Executive Indorses Conclusions Arrived at by the Recently Created Tariff Board.

Washington.—In transmitting to congress the report of the tariff board on schedule K the president accompanied it with the following message:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

In my annual message to congress, December, 1909, I stated that under section 2 of the act of August 5, 1909, I had appointed a tariff board of three members to co-operate with the state department in the administration of the maximum and minimum clause of that act, to make a glossary or encyclopedia of the existing tariff so as to render its terms intelligible to the ordinary reader, and then to investigate industrial conditions and costs of production at home and abroad, with a view to determining to what extent existing tariff rates actually exemplify the protective principle, viz: That duties should be made adequate, and only adequate, to equalize the difference in cost of production at home and abroad.

I further stated that I believed these investigations would be of great value as a basis for accurate legislation, and that I should from time to time recommend to congress the revision of certain schedules in accordance with the findings of the board.

In the last session of the Sixty-first congress a bill creating a permanent tariff board of five members, of whom not more than three should be of the same political party, passed each house, but failed of enactment because of slight differences on which agreement was not reached before adjournment. An appropriation act provided that the permanent tariff board, if created by statute, should report to congress on schedule K in December, 1911.

Presidential Appointments.

Therefore, to carry out so far as lay within my power the purposes of this bill for a permanent tariff board, I appointed in March, 1911, a board of five, adding two members of such party affiliation as would have fulfilled the statutory requirements, and directed them to make a report to me on schedule K of the tariff act in December of this year.

In my message of August 17, 1911, accompanying the veto of the wool bill, I said that, in my judgment, schedule K should be revised and the rates reduced. My veto was based on the ground that, since the tariff board would make, in December, a detailed report on wool and wool manufactures, with special reference to the relation of the existing rates of duties to relative costs here and abroad, public policy and a fair regard to the interests of the producers and the manufacturers on the one hand and of the consumers on the other demanded that legislation should not be hastily enacted in the absence of such information; that I was not myself possessed at that time of adequate knowledge of the facts to determine whether or not the proposed act was in accord with my pledge to support a fair and reasonable protective policy; that such legislation might prove only temporary and inflict upon a great industry the evils of continued uncertainty.

Advocates Reduction of Rates.

I now herewith submit a report of the tariff board on schedule K. The board is unanimous in its findings. On the basis of these findings I now recommend that the congress proceed to a consideration of this schedule with a view to its revision and a general reduction of its rates.

The report shows that the present method of assessing the duty on raw wool—this is, by the specific rate on the grease pound, i. e., unscoured—operates to exclude wools of high shrinkage in scouring, but fine quality, from the American market and thereby lessens the range of wools available to the domestic manufacturer; that the duty on unscoured wool of 33 cents per pound is prohibitory and operates to exclude the importation of clean, low-priced foreign wools of inferior grades, which are nevertheless valuable material for manufacturing, and which cannot be imported in the grease because of their heavy shrinkage. Such wools, if imported, might be used to displace the cheap substitutes now in use.

To make the preceding paragraph a little plainer, take the instance of a hundred pounds of first-class wool imported under the present duty, which is 11 cents a pound. That would make the duty on the hundred pounds $11. The merchandise part of the wool thus imported is the weight of the wool of this hundred pounds after scouring. If the wool shrinks 80 per cent., as some wool does, then the duty in such a case would amount to $11 on 20 pounds of scoured wool. This, of course, would be prohibitory. If the wool shrinks only 50 per cent., it would be $11 on 50 pounds of wool, and this is near to the average of the great bulk of wools that are imported from Australia, which is the principal source of our imported wool.

These discriminations could be overcome by assessing a duty in ad valorem terms, but this method is open to the objection, first, that it increases administrative difficulties and tends to decrease revenue through undervaluation; and, second, that as prices advance, the ad valorem rate increases the duty per pound at the time when the consumer most needs relief and the producer can best stand competition; while if prices decline the duty is decreased at the time when the consumer is least burdened by the price and the producer most needs protection.

Method That Meets Difficulty.

Another method of meeting the difficulty of taxing the grease pound is to assess a specific duty on grease wool in terms of its scoured content. This obviates the chief evil of the present system, namely, the discrimination due to different shrinkages, and thereby tends greatly to equalize the duty. The board reports that this method is feasible in practice and could be administered without great expense.

The report shows in detail the difficulties involved in attempting to state in categorical terms the cost of wool production and the great differences in cost as between different regions and different types of wool. It is found, however, that, taking all varieties in account, the average cost of production for the whole American clip is higher than the cost in the chief competing country by an amount somewhat less than the present duty.

The report shows that the duties on noils, wool wastes, and shoddy, which are adjusted to the rate of 33 cents on scoured wool, are prohibitory in the same measure that the duty on scoured wool is prohibitory. In general, they are assessed at rates as high as, or higher than, the duties paid on the clean content of wools actually imported. They should be reduced and so adjusted to the rate on wool as to bear their proper proportion to the real rate levied on the actual wool imports.

Some Duties Prohibitory.

The duties on many classes of wool manufacture are prohibitory and greatly in excess of the difference in cost of production here and abroad. This is true of tops, of yarns (with the exception of worsted yarns of a very high grade), and of low and medium grade cloth of heavy weight.

On tops up to 52 cents a pound in value, and on yarns of 65 cents in value, the rate is 100 per cent., with correspondingly higher rates for lower values. On cheap and medium grade cloths, the existing rates frequently run to 150 per cent. and on some cheap goods to over 200 per cent.

On the other hand, the findings show that the duties which run to such high ad valorem equivalents are prohibitory, since the goods are not imported, but that the prices of domestic fabrics are not raised by the full amount of duty. On a set of one yard samples of 16 English fabrics, which are completely excluded by the present tariff rates, it was found that the total foreign value was $41.84; the duties which would have been assessed had these fabrics been imported, $76.90; the foreign value plus the amount of the duty, $118.74; or a nominal duty of 183 per cent. In fact, however, practically identical fabrics of domestic make sold at the same time at $69.75, showing an enhanced price over the foreign market value of but 67 per cent.

Would Reduce Duties.

Although these duties do not increase prices of domestic goods by anything like their full amount, it is none the less true that such prohibitive dutes eliminate the possibility of foreign competition, even in time of scarcity, so that they form a temptaton to monopoly and conspiracy to control domestic prices; that they are much in excess of the difference in cost of production here and abroad, and that they should be reduced to a point which accords with the principle.

The findings of the board show that in this industry the actual manufacturing cost, aside from the question of the price of materials, is much higher in this country than it is abroad; that in the making of yarn and cloth the domestic woolen and worsted manufacturer has in general no advantage in the form of superior machinery or more efficient labor to offset the higher wages paid in this country. The finds show that the cost of turning wool into yarn in this country is about double that in the leading competing country, and that the cost of turning yarn into cloth is somewhat more than double. Under the protective policy a great industry, involving the welfare of hundreds of thousands of people has been established despite these handicaps.

In recommending revision and reduction I therefore urge that action be taken with these facts in mind, to the end that an important and established industry may not be jeopardized.

The tariff board reports that no equitable method has been found to levy purely specific duties on woolen and worsted fabrics, and that, excepting for a compensatory duty, the rate must be ad valorem on such manufactures. It is important to realize, however, that no flat ad valorem rate on such fabrics can be made to work fairly and effectively. Any single rate which is high enough to equalize the difference in manufacturing cost at home and abroad on highly finished goods involving such labor would be prohibitory on cheaper goods, in which the labor cost is a smaller proportion of the total value. Conversely, a rate only adequate to equalize this difference on cheaper goods would remove protection from the fine goods manufacture, the increase in which has been one of the striking features of the trade development in recent years. I therefore recommend that in any revision the importance of a graduated scale of ad valorem duties on cloths be carefully considered and applied.

Praises Work of Committee.

I venture to say that no legislative body has ever had presented to it a more complete and exhaustive report than this on so difficult and complicated a subject as the relative costs of wool and woolens the world over. It is a monument to the thoroughness, industry, impartiality and accuracy of the men engaged in its making. They were chosen from both political parties, but have allowed no partisan spirit to prompt or control their inquiries. They are unanimous in their findings. I feel sure that after the report has been printed and studied the value of such a compendium of exact knowledge in respect to this schedule of the tariff will convince all of the wisdom of making such a board permanent, in order that it may treat each schedule of the tariff as it has treated this, and then keep its bureau of information up to date with current changes in the economic world.

It is no part of the function of the tariff board to propose rates of duty. Their function is merely to present findings of fact on which rates of duty may be fairly determined in the light of adequate knowledge in accordance with the economic policy to be followed. This is what the present report does.

The findings of fact by the board show ample reason for the revision downward of schedule K, in accord with the protective principle, and present the data as to relative costs and prices from which may be determined what rates will fairly equalize the difference in production costs. I recommend that such revision be proceeded with at once.

(Signed) WILLIAM H. TAFT.

Opera Houses In Europe.

Milan, with a population of something less than 500,000 persons, patronizes the year around four opera houses—La Scala, with a seating capacity of 3,600; the others with somewhat less capacity. Naples, with a population of about 700,000, including its suburbs, maintains as many opera houses as does Milan. Nice, in France, with a population of about 80,000, has a famous open house. Brussels, Dresden, Amsterdam, in fact, all the small cities of Europe, have one or more opera houses. The same is true in Spain, Russia and the South American states. The majority of these opera houses are old, La Scala, for instance, having been founded in 1778; San Carlo, in Naples, in 1737. In Germany music is founded on such a classic basis that every considerable town in that empire has its opera house.

Love and a Looking Glass.

They had been married in November.

"Did you see anything that particularly struck your fancy when you were looking around the shops today, sweetheart?" asked the young husband on his wife's return from a round of Christmas shopping.

"Well," she replied, "I saw something extremely pretty in looking glasses."

"I have no doubt you did," he observed, "if you looked into them."—Liverpool Mercury.

Educating the Child.

Teach the child self-respect, just as you train a plant in better ways. No self-respecting man was ever a grafter. Make the boy understand what money means, too, what its value is. Do not deal it out to him lavishly, but teach him to account for it. Instill better things into him, just as a plant-breeder puts better characteristics into a plant. Above all, bear in mind repetition; repetition, the use of an influence over and over again. Keeping everlastingly at it, this is what fixes traits in plants—the constant repetition of an influence until at last it is irrevocably fixed and will not change. You cannot afford to get discouraged. You are dealing with something far more precious than any plant—the priceless soul of a child.—Luther Durbank.

The friends of Mme. Schumann-Heink, the singer, tell of an incident in the friendship of the artist with a princess of one of the minor courts of Europe. The princess was extremely fond of Schumann-Heink and the two were on the most intimate terms.

On one occasion when the two had breakfasted at the palace together, Schumann-Heink was cooing to the court baby as she sat on the floor with it. Just then the prince, whom the singer had never met, entered the apartment. The princess introduced her friend and Schumann-Heink with ready wit said, from the floor:

"Your highness, I must either disregard court etiquette or drop the court baby."

Whereupon the prince with a low bow smiled and rejoined:

"Madame, do what you like with etiquette, but regard the baby."

A Conundrum.

"I courted my wife three years before I got her," confided a friend, "and a lot of that was wasted time."

"Why," we shuddered, "your wife is a most excellent woman."

"Indeed she is. I can lick the man that says she ain't. But I have discovered that I could have got her in twelve weeks, if I'd had the gall to ask for her. Did I waste time, or didn't I?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Weather Prophets 150 Years Ago.

A century and a half ago people used to depend upon the weather prognostications in Partridge's Almanac. One day Partridge himself put up at a country inn for dinenr. The hostler advised him to stay the night, as it would certainly rain. "Nonsense!" said Partridge, and proceeded on his way. Soon a heavy shower fell, which so impressed the traveler that he instantly rode back to the inn and offered the hostler half a crown if he would tell him how he knew the rain was imminent.

"Well," replied the man, with a grin, pocketing the coin, "the truth is, we have Partridge's Almanac here, and he's such a liar that whenever he promises a fine day we know it will be foul. Today is set down as fine." The weather prophet, like many other weather prophets before and since, passed on discomfited.

Hoping for the Worst.

"Jimpson doesn't like you."

"I hadn't suspected that. What makes you think he doesn't like me?"

"I heard him wishing the other day that you would buy an aeroplane."

Turkish Medicines.

Old-fashioned physicians have plenty of reliable remedies for cholera. An agate in the pocket and a hyacinth on the neck are much esteemed, but the bone of a dead child carried in the pocket is nearly as efficacious. Cholera, we learn, is caused by the moon. Therefore drink decoctions of laurel while Mars or Mercury is in the ascendant, since these planets are unfriendly to the moon. We are glad to know this, as we have always had our doubts about the moon.

The War Department.

There is now before congress a bill, the purpose of which is to increase the efficiency and decrease the expense of the army. It contains four principal features: First, a consolidation of the general staff with the adjutant general's and the inspector general's department; second, a consolidation of the quartermaster's department with the subsistence and pay department; third, the creation of an army service corps, and fourth, an extension of the enlistment period from three to five years.

With the establishment of an army service corps, as proposed in the bill, I am thoroughly in accord and am convinced that the establishment of such a corps will result in a material economy and a very great increase of efficiency in the army. It has repeatedly been recommended by me and my predecessors. I also believe that a consolidation of the staff corps can be made with a resulting increase in efficiency and economy, but not along the lines provided in the bill under consideration.

The army of the United States is in good condition.

The Panama Canal.

The very satisfactory progress made on the Panama canal last year has continued, and there is every reason to believe that the canal will be completed as early as the 1st of July, 1913, unless something unforeseen occurs. This is about 18 months before the time promised by the engineers.

Waterway From Lakes to the Gulf.

The project for a navigable waterway from Lake Michigan to the mouth of the Illinois river, and thence via the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico, is one of national importance. In view of the work already accomplished by the sanitary district of Chicago, an agency of the state of Illinois, which has constructed the most difficult and costly stretch of this waterway and made it an asset of the nation, and in view of the fact that the people of Illinois have authorized the expenditure of $20,000,000 to carry this waterway 62 miles farther to Utica, I feel that it is fitting that this work should be supplemented by the government, and that the expenditures recommended by the special board of engineers on the waterway from Utica to the mouth of the Illinois river be made upon lines which while providing a waterway for the nation, should otherwise benefit that state to the fullest extent.

The limitation of the liability of the master to his servant for personal injuries to such as are occasioned by his fault has been abandoned in most civilized countries and provision made whereby the employe injured in the course of his employment is compensated for his loss of working ability irrespective of negligence. The principle upon which such provision proceeds is that accidental injuries to workmen in modern industry, with its vast complexity and inherent dangers arising from complicated machinery and the use of the great forces of steam and electricity, should be regarded as risks of the industry and the loss borne in some equitable proportion by those who for their own profit engage therein. In recognition of this the last congress authorized the appointment of a commission to investigate the subject of employers' liability and workmen's compensation and to report the result of their investigations, through the president, to congress. This commission was appointed and has been at work, holding hearings, gathering data and considering the subject, and it is expected will be able to report by the first of the year, in accordance with the provisions of the law.

Parcel Post.

Steps should be taken immediately for the establishment of a rural parcel post. In the estimates of appropriations needed for the maintenance of the postal service for the ensuing fiscal year an item of $150,000 has been inserted to cover the preliminary expense of establishing a parcel post on rural mail routes, as well as to cover an investigation having for its object the final establishment of a general parcel post on all railway and steamboat transportation routes.

The suggestion that we have a general parcel post has awakened great opposition on the part of some who think that it will have the effect to destroy the business of the country store keeper. Instead of doing this, I think the change will greatly increase business for the benefit of all. The reduction in the cost of living it will bring about ought to make its coming certain.

The Navy Department.

On the 2d of November last I reviewed the fighting fleet of battleships and other vessels assembled in New York harbor, consisting of 24 battleships, 2 armored cruisers, 2 cruisers, 22 destroyers, 12 torpedo boats, 8 submarines, and other attendant vessels, making 98 vessels of all classes, of a tonnage of 576,634 tons.

The fleet was deficient in the number of torpedo destroyers, in cruisers, and in colliers, as well as in large battleship cruisers, which are now becoming a very important feature of foreign navies, notably the British, German and Japanese.

The building plan for this year contemplates two battleships and two colliers. This is because the other and smaller vessels can be built much more rapidly in case of emergency than the battleships, and we certainly ought to continue the policy of two battleships a year until after the Panama Canal is finished and until in our first line and in our reserve line we can number 40 available vessels of proper armament and size.

I wish to renew again my recommendation that all the local offices throughout the country, including collectors of internal revenue, collectors of customs, postmasters of all four classes, immigration commissioners and marshals, should be by law covered into the classified service, the necessity for confirmation by the senate be removed, and the president and the others, whose time is now taken up in distributing this patronage under the custom that has prevailed since the beginning of the government in accordance with the recommendation of the senators and congressmen of the majority party should be relieved from this burden. I am confident that such a change would greatly reduce the cost of administering the government, and that it would add greatly to its efficiency.

NO HARD PROBLEM TO SOLVE

Bellboy's Suggestion Would Seem to Be Natural Way to Get Around Situation.

The Englishman who has been wearing a top hat and a frock coat impressed all who saw him with his distinguished appearance as he strolled about with an expansive air in one of the more expensive hotels. On Wednesday morning he came up to a clerk.

"I would like to have a shirt laundered," he said. "I must have it back by five o'clock."

The clerk told him that the time was unusually short, but he would do what he could, and the shirt was delivered on time.

He came down Thursday morning and said he wanted another shirt laundered, but that this one must be back by two o'clock in the afternoon. The clerk said that would be too short a time. The Briton grew angry and demanded to see the proprietor. He got as far as the bell boy captain, to whom he protested that he would not stand for such treatment. The bell boy suggested the purchase of a third shirt.—New York Sun.

BURNING ITCH WAS CURED

"I deem it my duty to tell about a cure that the Cuticura Soap and Ointment have made on myself. My trouble began in splotches breaking out right in the edge of my hair on the forehead, and spread over the front part of the top of my head from ear to ear, and over my ears which caused a most fearful burning itch, or eczema.

"For three years I had this terrible breaking out on my forehead and scalp. I tried our family doctor and he failed to cure it. Then I tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and used them for two months with the result of a complete cure. Cuticura Soap and Ointment should have the credit due, and I have advised a lot of people to use them." (Signed) C. D. Tharrington, Creek, N. C., Jan. 26, 1911.

Itching Scalp—Hair Fell Out.

"I will say that I have been suffering with an itching on my scalp for the past few years. My hair fell out in spots all over my head. My scalp started to trouble me with sores, then the sores healed up, and crusts formed on the top. Then the hair fell out and left me three bald spots the shape of a half dollar. I went to more than one doctor, but could not get any relief, so I started to use the Cuticura Remedies. I tried one bar of Cuticura Soap and some Cuticura Ointment, and felt relieved right away. Now the bald spots have disappeared, and my hair has grown, thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I highly recommend the Cuticura Remedies to all that are suffering with scalp trouble." (Signed) Samuel Stern, 236 Floyd St., Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 7, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 9 K, Boston.

She Needed It.

One of the little swarthy cherubs from sunny Italy, whose great eyes and sweet mouths can be so appealing to their teachers in the great primary schools in the North end, was introduced to the public bathing plant the other day, in accordance with the hygienic regulations of the public schools. She was so delighted that she asked her teacher the next day if her grandmamma could go and enjoy a bath there. "You see, grandmamma has not had a bath," said the innocent, "since she first came to this country, and that was 11 years ago." Another little girl objected to taking the prescribed bath, just now; because, as she explained, her mother had just sewed on her under-flannels for the winter. Still another little Latin remonstrated less decidedly to the bath. She knew it was wrong to be dirty, she admitted, but "it is so warm in the winter time."—Boston Transcript.

Shrewd Vote Getting.

Up in Oregon Mrs. Abigail Scott Donway, a leader in the equal suffrage movement, was run down by an express wagon in the street, and a crowd surrounded her. She was unhurt and as the dust was brushed off her clothes the express driver asked anxiously if she would make him trouble. "No," she answered, "there will be no trouble—if you men all promise to vote for woman suffrage."

Justly Punished.

"Why, have you discharged Richards? Do you think because he has reached the age of forty-five that he is no longer useful?"

"No, that isn't it. When I was coming into the city on my car the other morning he got in front of it at a crossing and was so slow that in order to avoid running him down I had to lose nearly half a minute.

LETHBRIDGE, ALBERTA, SECURES DRY FARMING CONGRESS FOR 1912.

The term, "dry farming" does not indicate all that might be implied. It does not mean a system of irrigation, but one where all the rain fall and precipitation is stored up and conserved in the soil, to be drawn upon by scientific and sane processes when it may be required to forward and increase the growth of grain.

In certain sections of the Canadian West as well as in the American West, there is a portion of the country in which the soil is the very best for the growing of cereals, but the geographical locations and relative position to the rain avenues, do not give the advantage that other parts possess in the matter of precipitation.

Agricultural science, however, has been making rapid progress during the past few years, and it is now ascertained that it is not altogether the number of inches of rain that is essential to the growing of crops, but its conservation, and that is the meaning of "Dry farming." "Dry Farming" may well be applied to districts where there is a heavy rain fall and better results will follow. The education of the public into these new methods, not new exactly, but such as have had satisfactory demonstration, is not alone the purpose of these dry-farming Congresses. One idea is to bring into life and into operation the great areas of splendid land lying within what might be termed semi-arid, without placing them under the restrictive and expansive process of irrigation.

The Congresses are attended by thousands and they bring representatives from all parts of the world. The Province of Alberta, and also of Saskatchewan, has taken a vital interest in the Congresses which have been held in the past two or three years. The Province of Alberta has made provincial exhibits, districts have shown their products, and last year, several hundred dollars were taken in prizes; this year the Province of Alberta took prizes ten to one in excess of any state in the Union. Alberta has won eight out of twenty special cups, that province taking one, Lethbridge one, Arthur Perry six, and John Baxter, Edmonton, carrying off one sweepstakes. When it came to a matter of location for the Congress for 1912, the City of Lethbridge, which had put up a splendid fight for it, secured the Congress by a unanimous vote. It is expected that the Lethbridge Congress will be the largest yet held and will be the biggest convention in the history of Western Canada. In emphasizing his invitation to Lethbridge, one of the speakers said he had just received a telegram from Magrath (near Lethbridge) stating that of one thousand acres of wheat just thrashed Hethershaw and Bradshaw had thrashed 47,000 bushels.

Literature sent out recently by the Canadian Government Agents, which will be sent postage free on application, tells of hundreds of splendid yields in all parts of Western Canada.

Danger.

Edmund Lamy, the skating champion, said the other day at Saranac Lake: "Skating on thin ice is very, very dangerous. I heard two sisters—daughters of an aged millionaire widower—talking the other day about it.

"Did you hear about poor pa's heroism?' the first sister asked. 'That beautiful young chorus girl Tottie Tights, broke through the ice this morning, and pa plunged in and rescued her.'

"The second sister bit her lip. 'Well!' she said. 'How dreadful! Now we'll have to rescue pa.'"

To Be Sure.

"I wonder why it is that show girls look down on ordinary chorus girls."

"Well, perhaps one reason why they do so is that they are nearly always taller."

Beware Cheap Bills.

An examination of paper currency by Warren H. Hilditch of Yale showed an average of one hundred and forty-two thousand bacteria on the bill. Twenty-one bills were examined, and while some were relatively clean, carrying only a trifle of fourteen thousand living things, others swarmed to the figure of five hundred and eighty-six thousand. And, strange to say, the bacteria did not seem to swarm to the $1,000 bills in preference to the $1 bills.

This shows that it is far healthier to carry $1,000 bills about than it is to tote $1 bills. Here is a valuable financial hint.

He Was the Man.

A young New Haven man, returning home from a health trip to Colorado, told his father about buying a silver mine for $3,000. "I knew they'd rope you in!" exclaimed the old man. "So you were ass enough to buy a humbug mine." "Yes, but I didn't lose anything. I formed a company and sold half the stock to a Connecticut man for $7,000." "Y-you did," gasped the old man as he turned white. "I'll bet I'm the one who bought it." "I know you are," coolly observed the young man as he crossed his legs and tried to appear very much at home.

The Exception.

"Take my advice and mind your own affairs. No man ever got rich fighting other people's battles."

"I don't know. How about a lawyer?"

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the Signature

2 FOR 1

Only the Best for the Family!

You can't afford to be without a great daily newspaper.

The Record-Herald is pre-eminently the great family newspaper of the Central West. Its superior news-gathering facilities and high-class literary features have been the main factors in its wonderful success.

Besides the full service of the Associated Press, The Record-Herald receives the foreign cable service of the New York Herald and World.

It has its own leased wires to New York and Washington—also its own special correspondents in all the large cities of the East.

The Record-Herald has its own special correspondents in every town of the Central West, who report all important news by telegraph.

Its daily features include S. E. Kiser's column of humor, a clever cartoon, a continued story by some noted author, and all the news of the world of sports.

Complete and reliable market reports and financial news can always be found in The Record-Herald, and all other news of the business world.

Its criticisms of the drama, music and books are unsurpassed by any in the country.

The Sunday Magazine of The Record-Herald is a real magazine, full of the choicest stories and pictures by leading authors and artists—a feast of good reading for the whole family.

Here's your chance! Take it while you may! Call at our office or send check to us with your order.

One On Bailey

Britt Tribune: One of those damnable typographical mistakes that makes an editor mad enough to eat a two horse wagon crept into our copy last week when we were unable to read the proof. Speaking of the lamented Joe Trigg we referred to him as a "gnarled old oak," and the confounded compositor, devil, sub or someone put an "s" in and made it read a gnarled old soak. Come on boys and batter this office down. kill the compositors, burn the type and smash the press. We would, but we haven't the heart to do it.

We are able to make our readers a new daily paper offer this week. If you will pay up all arrearages and one year in advance to the Times we will furnish you the Des Moines Daily Capital from now until January 1st, 1913, for $2.00. The Capital will soon commence the publishing of the famous "Ding" cartoons. Order today and get the full advantages of this offer.
